6 Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works,

7 Saying, Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.[v]

8 Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin.

9 Cometh this blessedness then upon the circumcision only, or upon the uncircumcision also? for we say that faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness.

1. "What advantage then hath the Jew?"—the Apostle anticipates this as an objection arising out of what he had just said. He had represented circumcision as rather inward and spiritual: if so, what advantage is there in the outward and ceremonial?

2. "Much every way."—in other words, the advantages are many; but the Apostle confines himself to the one fact that to them had God given a written revelation of his own will; and from this pre-eminent advantage, he leaves all the rest to be inferred. Nor, as he shows in the verses following, could the unbelief of some deprive the nation, as a nation, of this and other peculiar advantages.

4. "Let God be true;"—that is, God remained faithful to himself and his promises, whatever may be the unbelief or the sin of man; he cannot deny himself; and just as when his Spirit convinces a man of sin, the crucifixion of sin, on the part of the man, is the victory of truth in his soul, so God is shown to be just in all his sayings, and becomes the victor when his grace and truth are tested.

5. "Is God unrighteous?"—the idea is, if God can bring good out of evil, then why punish men for that which issues in larger and richer benefit? But there is a fallacy here: it is not sin or evil which works the good, but God by controlling, limiting, and overruling the evil; and therefore the evil or the sin is still punishable. God is not unrighteous who taketh vengeance.

7. "If the truth of God;"—or, God's faithfulness. "My lie," or my unfaithfulness. If my unfaithfulness hath brought out the faithfulness, why am I judged or treated as a sinner? Why are we Christians not judged according to that which is imputed to us as our creed—"Let us do evil, that good may come?" No. Sin is sin, by whomsoever committed, and as such it deserves punishment.

20. "By the law is the knowledge of sin:"—if there were no law, there could be no transgression; and if there were no offence, there could be no punishment. But law reveals sin, and sin must be punished.

21. "The righteousness of God without the law;"—or, God's method of forgiveness and acceptance, without the works of the law, as a condition of life, but with a sincere acceptance of its holy and immutable requirements as a daily rule of conduct.

25. "To declare his righteousness:"—the great end of the atonement is not only to reconcile penitent sinners unto God, but to bring into view the unbending rectitude of God by the mode in which sins are forgiven; in other words, to make his righteousness—or, as the word denotes in this verse, his justice—the medium of revealing his mercy. Great is the mystery of godliness. it is the mystery on earth; it will be the mystery in heaven and for ever.

CHAPTER IV.

If it be by the law that we come to a knowledge of sin, and if sin merit punishment, it follows that either the sinner must suffer, or some special provision be made for his forgiveness: and thus it is that faith in the atonement of Christ establishes the law.

1. "Abraham our father."—Abraham is introduced as the great progenitor, according to the flesh, of the Jewish nation, and who, as the father of the faithful, was the most illustrious example to which his descendants could look.

2. "Whereof to glory:"—of the fruits of his faith he might have gloried, but not before God, for he was indebted to God for the very principle from which all his good works sprung.

3. "Counted unto him for righteousness:"—according to our Lord's own words, Abraham saw his day afar off, and was glad. His faith rested on a promised Messiah, and hence he obtained forgiveness and acceptance, and all those blessings which we now understand to be involved in justification by faith.

10 How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? Not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.

11 And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised: that he might be the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; that righteousness might be imputed unto them also:[a]

12 And the father of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised.

13 For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.[b]

14 For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect:[c]

15 Because the law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgression.[d]

16 Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all,[e]

17 (As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,) [1]before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were.[f]

18 Who against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be.[g]

19 And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb:[h]

20 [2]He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God;

21 And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform.[i]

22 And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.

23 Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him;[j]

24 But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead;[k]

25 Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification.[l]

CHAPTER V.

1 Being justified by faith, we have peace with God, 2 and joy in our hope, 8 that sith we were reconciled by his blood, when we were enemies, 10 we shall much more be saved being reconciled. 12 As sin and death came by Adam, 17 so much more righteousness and life by Jesus Christ. 20 Where sin abounded, grace did superabound.

THEREFORE being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ:[m]

2 By whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.[n]

3 And not only so, but we glory in tribulations also: knowing that tribulation worketh patience;[o]

4 And patience, experience; and experience, hope:[p]

5 And hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us.[q]

6 For when we were yet without strength, [2]in due time Christ died for the ungodly.[r]

7 For scarcely for a righteous man will one die: yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die.

8 But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.[s]

9 Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him.[t]

10 For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life.[u]

11 And not only so, but we also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the [3]atonement.[v]

12 Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, [4]for that all have sinned:[w]

13 (For until the law sin was in the world: but sin is not imputed when there is no law.[x]

4—8. "Not reckoned of grace, but of debt:"—as Olshausen says, "Works might have brought him into the relation of a debtor or creditor; but faith brought him into the relation of grace, since he relied on a promise flowing entirely from the Divine Mercy;" and hence Christ—the object of his faith, and not the merit of his works—became the procuring cause of his righteousness or justification before God. This great truth is further illustrated by the doctrine of forgiveness. Sin implies the violation of law; and law knows nothing of mercy: but forgiveness is an act of mercy excluding all works of our own, and involving the reliance of a simple and implicit faith in Him on whose grace the law can lay no restriction, because its claims have all been honoured by the active and the passive obedience of our incarnate Saviour.

11. "A seal of the righteousness:"—Abraham believed in the promise of God before he was circumcised; but, with his faith in operation, circumcision became the seal of the righteous or Divine acceptance which he obtained by faith. Thus he became the father of the faithful, or the believing, whether among the circumcised or the uncircumcised—whether among Jews or Gentiles—till the end of time.

14. "Faith is made void:"—if through obedience to the law a claim can be preferred to eternal life, then there is no room left for a promise; and if there be no promise, there is no ground for faith; so that faith is made void.

18. "Against hope believed in hope:"—Abraham had long given up all hope of offspring; but when God said to him, "I have made thee the father of many nations," his faith inspired hope. The hope springing from faith was contrary to nature, and therefore against any hope which he might otherwise have indulged.

CHAPTER V.

Having established his position—that our forgiveness and acceptance can spring only from the grace of God, through faith in Christ, who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification—the Apostle proceeds to set forth the vast benefits which are derived from God's method of justification—benefits which begin in pardon and renovation here, and which reach their consummation hereafter in the final glorification and everlasting beatification of our redeemed nature.

1. "Peace with God:"—sin is the great disturbing force in the moral universe of God; but the moment sin is pardoned, and the heart is subdued, the soul becomes conscious of inward quiet and repose.

2. "Access by faith into this grace;"—into the state of favour and acceptance in which we now stand; but the Apostle's words imply more than this, for the idea of St. Paul clearly is, that with our forgiveness and acceptance there comes a still deeper and a still wider experience of God's redeeming love; till the soul, filled with that love, rejoices in hope of the glory of God.

7. "A righteous man;"—that is, a just man; a man free from blame or criminality: for such a man—a man simply innocent—there is scarcely any one that would die; but for "a good man"—one who rises above the level of mere innocence—one who is signalised by achievements of positive benevo-

14 Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come.[a]

15 But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many.[b]

16 And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences unto justification.

17 For if [1]by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ.)

18 Therefore as [2]by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so [3]by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.[c]

19 For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.

20 Moreover the law entered, that the offence might abound. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound:[d]

21 That as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAPTER VI.

1 We may not live in sin, 2 for we are dead unto it, 3 as appeareth by our baptism. 12 Let not sin reign any more, 18 because we have yielded ourselves to the service of righteousness, 23 and for that death is the wages of sin.

WHAT shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?[e]

2 God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?[f]

3 Know ye not, that so many of us as [4]were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?[g]

5 For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection:[i]

6 Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin.[j]

7 For he that is dead is [5]freed from sin.[k]

8 Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him:[l]

9 Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.[m]

10 For in that he died, he died unto sin once: but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.[n]

11 Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord.[o]

12 Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof.[p]

13 Neither yield ye your members as [6]instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.[q]

14 For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace.[r]

15 What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.[s]

16 Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?[t]

17 But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine [7]which was delivered you.[u]

18 Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness.[v]

19 I speak after the manner of men because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as ye have yielded your lence, or by deeds of heroic patriotism—some might die, but man is neither the one nor the other—he is a sinner, involved in guilt and condemnation; and yet God's love moved him to give up his only-begotten Son unto the death for our salvation. Herein is love!

10. "Saved by his life"—the power which triumphed over sin, and death, and all the powers of darkness, on the cross, is the power which the living and exalted Redeemer now exerts for the final salvation of his people.

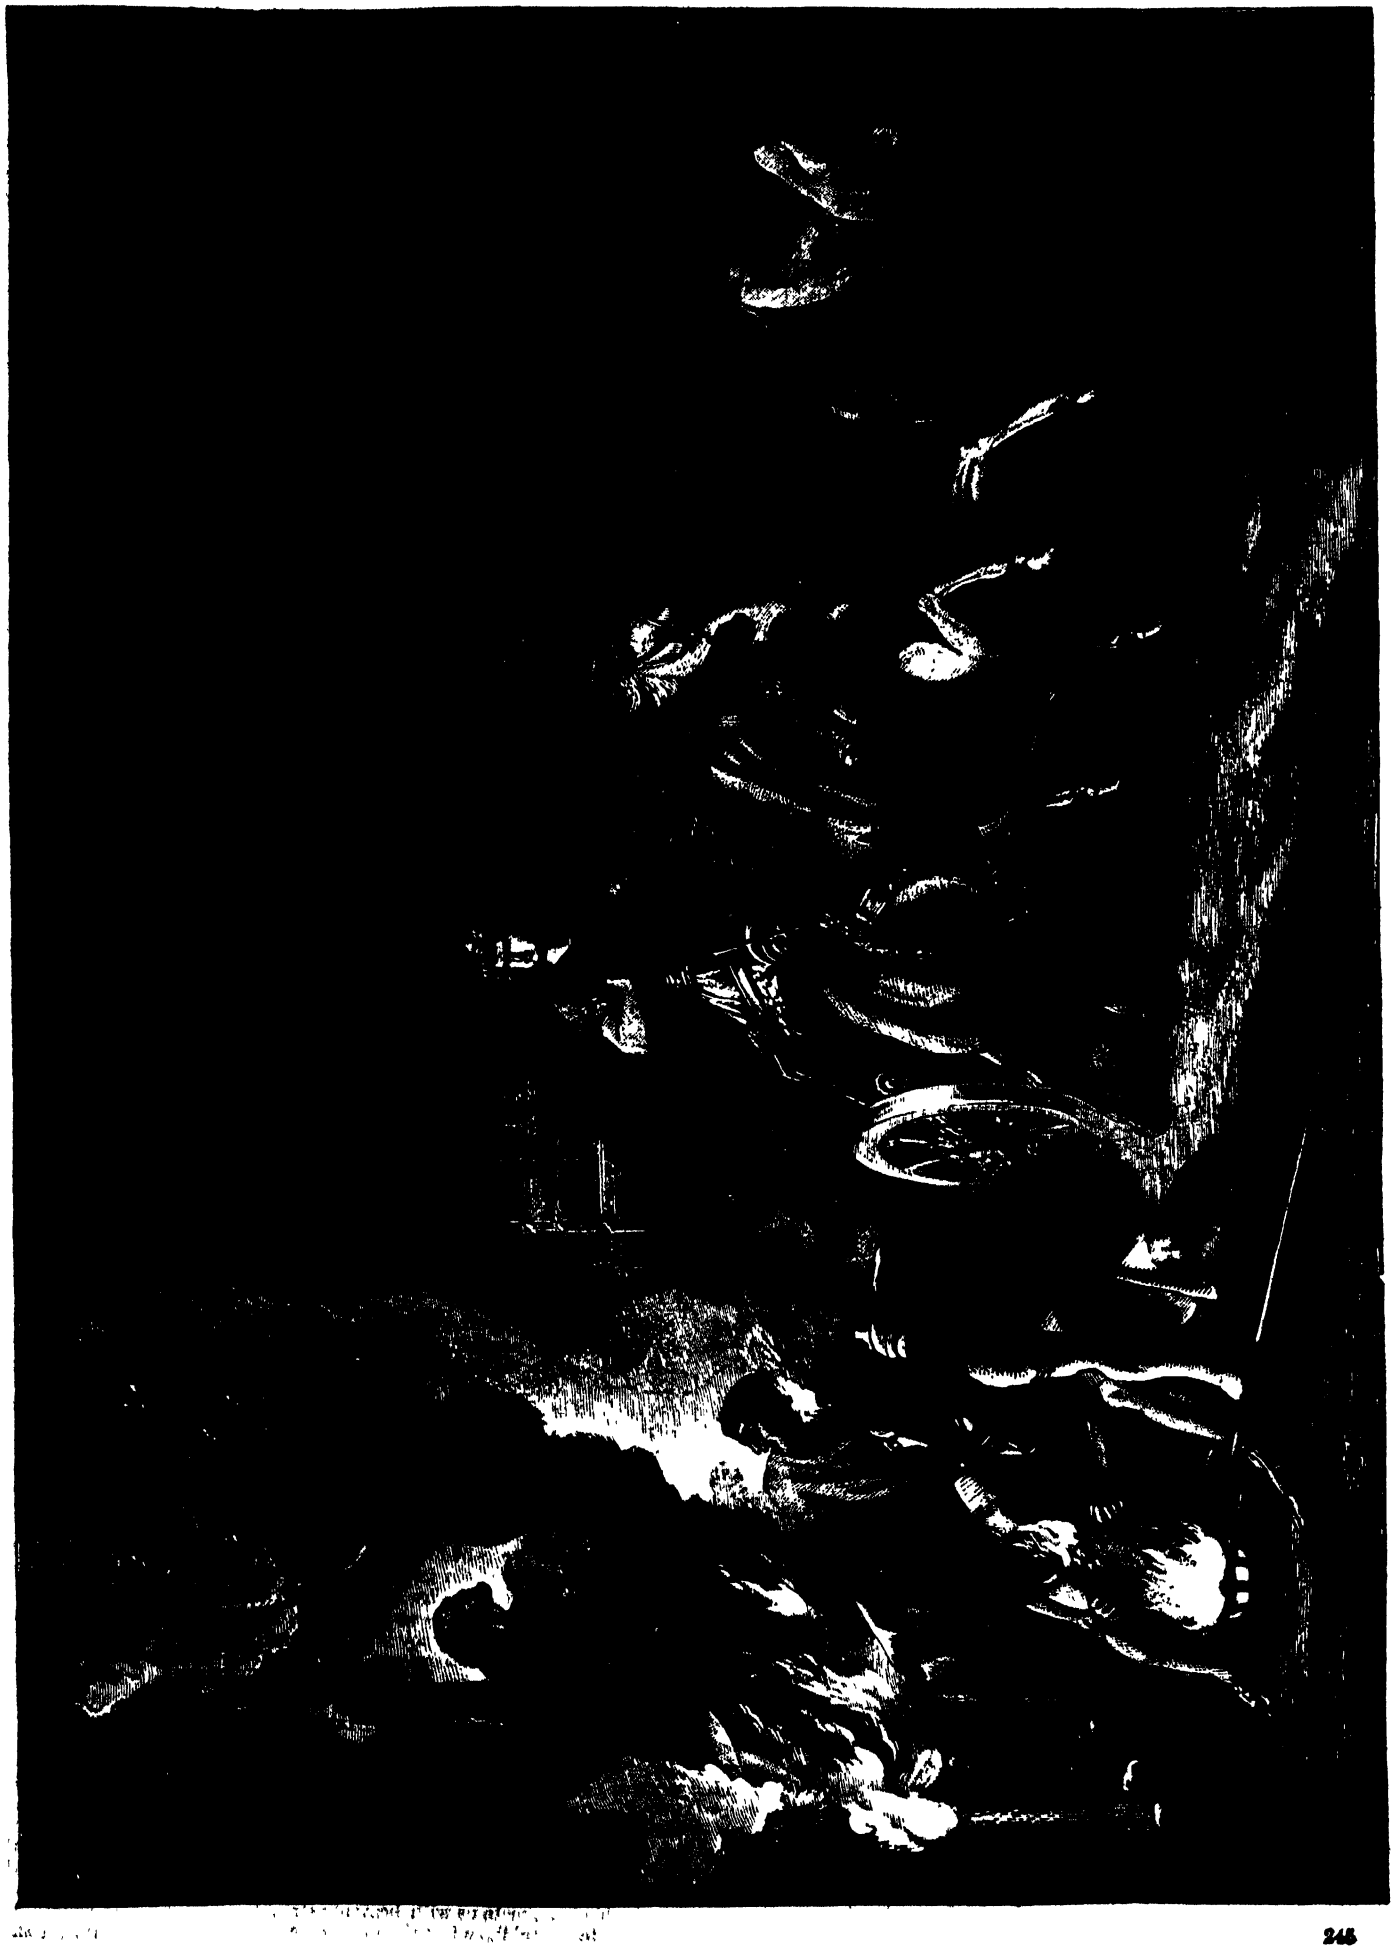
13. "When there is no law"—there was no revealed or written law till the time of Moses; those, therefore, who lived before that period could not be tried by that law, and any transgression of that law could not be imputed to them. Still, the fact that they had sinned was proved by the other fact that they died.

15. "Not as the offence, so also is the free gift"—we are not to reason from the nature and effect of man's first transgression to the character and design of the Saviour's work: whatever may be the consequences, present and future, to our race, through the sin of one man, the grace of God, through the one Man, Christ Jesus, secures to that same race infinitely more good. One offence (verses 16—19) involved us in condemnation; but Christ came to make a propitiation, not for that one offence only, but for all the offences chargeable upon our race; and the grace of God, manifested in the forgiveness of all them that are penitent, and the consequent communication of spiritual life and blessing, infinitely transcends the evil brought upon mankind by our great progenitor.



20. "The law entered:"—but why? That sin might be revealed, and appear as sin; and that any violation of law in time to come might be seen as carrying with it the penalty of death, and man be constrained to look to the grace of God as the only possible ground of salvation. Yet this grace must "reign through righteousness:" the provision made for its free communication must not set aside law nor interfere with the principles of justice as regards God, nor with the duty of holy and loving obedience as regards man.

CHAPTER VI.

1. "Shall we continue in sin?"—the Apostle had just laid down the proposition that "where sin abounded, grace did much more abound;" and then it occurred to him that this doctrine might be perverted and abused; that there were those who might find in it a plea or justification for indulgence in sin. To guard against this fatal conclusion is the object which he has now before him; and he shows that the very grace which the Gospel reveals and brings to the soul, instead of leading to sin, is the most powerful incentive to holiness of living.

3. "Baptized into his death:"—Christ died for sin; and in baptism we profess to be baptized into the faith of his death as the atonement for sin; if so, then, how can we, as believers in Christ, live in sin? It is to deny the very end involved in the Saviour's death; therefore, if his was a death for sin, ours must be a life unto righteousness.

10. "He liveth unto God;"—a somewhat difficult phrase. His dying members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness.

20 For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free [1]from righteousness.[e]

21 What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death.[f]

22 But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.[g]

23 For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.[d]

CHAPTER VII.

1 No law hath power over a man longer than he liveth. 4 But we are dead to the law. 7 Yet is not the law sin, 12 but holy, just, good, 16 as I acknowledge, who am grieved because I cannot keep it.

KNOW ye not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law,) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth?

2 For the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband.[e]

3 So then if, while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man.[f]

4 Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God.[g]

5 For when we were in the flesh, the [2]motions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death.[h]

6 But now we are delivered from the law, [3]that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.[i]

7 What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known [4]lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet.[j]

8 But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. For without the law sin was dead.[k]

9 For I was alive without the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died.

10 And the commandment, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death.[l]

11 For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it slew me.

12 Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good.[m]

13 Was then that which is good made death unto me? God forbid. But sin, that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which is good; that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful.

14 For we know that the law is spiritual: but I am carnal, sold under sin.[n]

15 For that which I do I [5]allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I.[o]

16 If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good.

17 Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

18 For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me: but how to perform that which is good I find not.[p]

19 For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do.

20 Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

"unto sin once" means that by the one offering of himself he took away sin; for the greatness of his sacrifice extinguished all the consequences of man's transgressions; and therefore his living "unto God" must mean that the one end of his life in heaven is to perfect the great design of his death, by delivering his people from sin, and bringing them to the enjoyment of eternal glory. Hence the exhortations embodied in the following verses, and addressed to believers, to aim at increased separation from sin, and a growing assimilation to God, with a corresponding consecration of the whole of their redeemed nature to his service.

17. "That ye were the servants of sin:"—the reference is to their former state. The Apostle does not thank God that they were the servants of sin, but that, while they were in a state of vassalage to sin, they embraced the Gospel; that they then became free, or were set at liberty from their bondage. Was it possible, then, that the very grace which had thus effected their deliverance from sin was to be urged as a plea for continuing in sin? God forbid. Let not the thought be even conceived, far less cherished. We owe our redemption to Christ, and to him we are to consecrate all our powers of soul and body.

CHAPTER VII.

The main design of the Apostle in this chapter is to establish the position which he had just laid down—that we are not under the law, but under grace. To make out this conclusion, he introduces a new illustration, derived from the law of marriage—very relevant in itself, but which has been stretched to such a point by critics and commentators, as to lead to most obvious absurdities. We shall see that the error lies, not in the text of St. Paul, but in the expositions which have been appended to it.

1. "Them that know the law:"—the reference may be primarily to the Jews, but it is not by any means to be confined to them.

2. "She is loosed from the law of her husband;"—that is, according to Alford, "Death has dissolved the legal obligation between man and wife; therefore the wife is at liberty to be married to another: so death has dissolved the legal obligation between the law and us; therefore we are at liberty to be married to another. So far the comparison is strict. Further it will not hold; for in the example given, the liberated person is the survivor; in the case of the believer, he—the liberated person—is regarded as a dead person." The Dean says that, in the case of the woman, the liberated person is the survivor. Granted; she is the survivor, as a woman, but not as a wife. The moment her husband dies, she ceases to be a wife; as such she dies, or ceases to be, and the law which formerly bound her has now no power over her. She is free to be married, not as a wife—for such she has ceased to be—but as a woman entering into a new relation. Hence says the Apostle—

4. "Ye also are become dead to the law:"—the death of Christ has set us free, so that we confide no longer in the law as a ground of life, but are at liberty to enter into immediate relationship with Christ, and to confide in him alone for present peace and future happiness.

5. "Fruit unto death:"—so long as we are in the flesh, or in a carnal, unrenewed state, the tendency is to sin; nor does the law prevent us from sinning. Its very restrictions act as incitements to sin; and sin produces death. But when we are delivered from the law, or become dead to the law in which we were formerly held, sin is not only kept under, but the tendency of the renewed nature is Godward, and we serve him in newness of spirit.

7. "Is the law sin?"—if the law by its very prohibitions, incites the unrenewed nature to sin, is the sin, in its guilt, to be charged to the law? Far from it. And to place this in its clearest light, the Apostle refers to his own individual, personal consciousness, arising out of the workings of the law in his own heart. He well knew how sin is awakened by the resistance of the law; that in this consists that inward conflict which is common to all the children of God, and out of which arises the conscious need of a Deliverer who is able to animate us with heavenly strength in the hour of danger, and thus lead to the fulfilment of the promise made to the faithful, that sin shall not have dominion over them.

21 I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me.

22 For I delight in the law of God after the inward man:[a]

23 But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members.[b]

24 O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from [1]the body of this death?

25 I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin.[c]

CHAPTER VIII.

1 They that are in Christ, and live according to the Spirit, are free from condemnation. 5, 13 What harm cometh of the flesh, 6, 14 and what good of the Spirit: 17 and what of being God's child, 19 whose glorious deliverance all things long for, 29 was beforehand decreed from God. 38 What can sever us from his love?

THERE is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.[d]

2 For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death.[e]

3 For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and [2]for sin, condemned sin in the flesh:[f]

4 That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.[g]

5 For they [3]that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit.[h]

6 For [3]to be carnally minded is death; but [4]to be spiritually minded is life and peace.[i]

7 Because [5]the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.[j]

8 So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

9 But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.[k]

10 And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness.

11 But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies [6]by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.[l]

12 Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh.[m]

13 For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.[n]

14 For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.[o]

15 For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father.[p]

16 The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God:[q]

17 And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.[r]

18 For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.[s]

19 For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.[t]

20 For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope,[u]

21 Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

22 For we know that [7]the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now.[v]

23 And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body.[w]

24 For we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?[x]

"I had not known sin;"—no idea of its nature and demerit, but for the positive and unchangeable requirements of the law. The law demands supreme and undivided love to God; and therefore to desire or lust after anything apart from him, as a source of satisfaction and joy, is sin; but of the nature of such sin he could have no conception apart from the law.

8. "Without the law sin was dead:"—without a clear view of the requirements of the law, and the direful results of disobedience, sin was unproductive of that fear which this state of peril justly demanded; but the moment the Apostle began to perceive and understand the law of God, there arose a conflict in his inner man. The sinful tendency wrought in him all kinds of unholy desire, and also forebodings of evil, so that sin no longer lay dormant or dead in his soul. Its power revived; and such was its tendency to tempt, and its power to terrify, that he gave up all hope of righteousness from himself, and all hope of deliverance from the law, and was thus led to look to the grace of God for purity, peace, and final safety.

15—22. In these verses the Apostle sets forth the spirituality and the holiness of the law; the revelation of the evil nature of sin by the law, spiritually understood; with the perpetual conflict between the good and the evil within: but he is making no excuse for the commission of sin. On the contrary, his delight was not in sin, but in the law of God; and hence sin was the grief of his soul; and while it constrained him to exclaim, "O wretched man that I am!" grace, triumphing over sin, enabled him to add, "But thanks be to God, who giveth me the victory."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Apostle here enters upon a very lofty description of the new life which is derived from Christ, with its progressive, grand, and ever-multiplying developments, till it is consummated in the final glorification of both soul and body: the very thought of which attunes his spirit to a song of triumph, in which he gives expression to the joy which filled his heart and animated his soul.

1. "No condemnation:"—if the soul be delivered from the bondage of sin, through faith in a personal Saviour, then it is freed from all the condemning effects of sin.

2. "The law of sin and death:"—the Gospel, here called the new law of life, under which we are brought by the Spirit of grace, delivers us from the condemnation of that law which reveals sin, and pronounces death as the punishment of sin.

3. "What the law could not do:"—the law had to act on a carnal, sinful nature, and, acting through such a medium, it could only condemn. Salvation lay beyond its province and its power, and therefore God provided that wondrous plan of recovery through the incarnation and death of his own Son, in which sin is punished, yet the sinner is saved. In the very nature in which man sinned, did Christ die and atone for sin; so that the righteousness, the unbending rectitude of the law comes out in the very means employed for our recovery, and in the renewed life and holy character of those who have been redeemed by the blood of Christ.

25 But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

26 Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.[a]

27 And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, [1]because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God.[b]

28 And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.[c]

29 For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren.[d]

30 Moreover whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified.[e]

31 What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?[f]

32 He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?[g]

33 Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth.[h]

34 Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.[i]

35 Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?

36 As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.[j]

37 Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us.[k]

38 For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come,[l]

39 Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

2 That I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart.[n]

3 For I could wish that myself were [2]accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh:[o]

4 Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the [3]covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises;[p]

5 Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen.[q]

6 Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect. For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel:[r]

7 Neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children: but, In Isaac shall thy seed be called.[s]

8 That is, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God: but the children of the promise are counted for the seed.[t]

9 For this is the word of promise, At this time will I come, and Sarah shall have a son.[u]

10 And not only this; but when Rebecca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac;[v]

12 It was said unto her, The [4]elder shall serve the [5]younger.[x]

13 As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated.[y]

14 What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid.[z]

11. "Quicken your mortal bodies:"—The Holy Spirit imparted to the soul penetrates not merely the inward man, but sanctifies, and will ultimately glorify, the bodily substance also, so that the whole man is changed into the likeness of Christ.

26 "We know not what we should pray for as we ought:"—this does not refer to the matter of prayer in general, for we have the revelation of God in our hands, and according to its promises and declarations we are to make known our requests; but the Bible is comparatively silent on future glory, and in reference to that glory we know not for what we ought to pray. We groan, being burdened, but the Spirit can reveal and interpret these inward and unutterable groanings, and render them acceptable before God.

36. The cruelty and wickedness of the Emperor Nero are known to all, and although they are not particularly alluded to in this verse, the time was at hand when the Christians of Rome would but too well realise the full force of the Apostle's meaning. Some of the dreadful forms of death to which Nero exposed the Christians are represented in the engraving. The circumstances under which these torments were inflicted may be gathered from the Roman pagan writers. It appears that a great part of Rome was destroyed by fire, whereupon orders were given that the Sibylline books should be consulted, and special worship offered to Vulcan, Ceres, Proserpine, and Juno. Notwithstanding all this, Tacitus tells us that the people persisted in believing that the fire was the work of the emperor. "With a view to remove this reproach, Nero treated as guilty, and visited with the most exquisite tortures, those whom the people hated for their crimes and called Christians. The author of this name was Christ, who was visited with punishment by the procurator, Pontius Pilate, in the reign of Tiberius. This fatal superstition was repressed for the moment, but broke out again, not only in Judea, where the evil originated, but in Rome also, where all atrocious and shameful things flow together from every side, and are practised. At first, therefore, some were seized who confessed, and then, by their information, a great multitude was convicted, not so much for the crime of burning the city, as for hatred to the human race. Mockery was added to their execution, so that, wrapped up in the skins of wild beasts, they perished by being worried of dogs, or they were fastened to crosses, or they were set on fire, so that when the day declined they might burn for a light by night. Nero gave his gardens for the spectacle, and appointed a ludicrous Circensian game. He himself mixed with the people, dressed as a charioteer, or sat in his chariot. Hence, although it was against the criminal, and those who were the worst of men, they were pitied, as having been destroyed, not for the public good, but for the fury of one man." This statement is confirmed by the testimony of Suetonius, Juvenal, and others; and we are informed that the sufferers were wrapped in pitch, wax, and other inflammable materials. Truly it is impossible adequately to represent such refined and inhuman cruelty.

CHAPTER IX.

The Apostle having set forth the evangelical method of salvation, through faith in Christ, and having terminated his exposition in a song of lofty triumph, by which his feelings became powerfully awakened on behalf of his own nation, now proceeds to treat the profound subject of ELECTION BY GRACE, and, in so doing, shows that God had not proved unfaithful to his promises, but rather that the Jews had erroneously and wilfully maintained that there was a righteousness which is by the law, to the utter rejection of the righteousness which is by faith, which God had so clearly revealed unto them.

1. "In the Holy Ghost:"—that is, his conscience was enlightened and informed by the Spirit of God.

3. "I could wish that myself were accursed:"—a confessedly difficult passage, and which has given rise to unnumbered expositions. We are driven to one of two conclusions: either that the Apostle is alluding here to his own life, as a Pharisee, when he gloried in being in a state of separation from Christ; or that he is here giving the most fervid expression to the feelings of his affectionate and self-denying heart—feelings which would have prompted him to endure the most grievous affliction and privation, if thereby he could have insured the salvation of his Jewish brethren.

6. "Taken none effect:"—though the majority of his nation were unbelievers, still the promise of God had not failed. There was a remnant—a holy seed. This he proves in the following verses.

8. "Children of the flesh:"—the natural descendants of Abraham. Their birth could avail nothing without the principle of Divine life in the soul.

31 But Israel, which followed after the law of righteousness, hath not attained to the law of righteousness.[h]

32 Wherefore? Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumblingstone;[i]

33 As it is written, Behold, I lay in Sion a stumblingstone and rock of offence: and whosoever believeth on him shall not be [2]ashamed.[j]

CHAPTER X.

5 The scripture sheweth the difference betwixt the righteousness of the law, and this of faith, 11 and that all, both Jew and Gentile, that believe, shall not be confounded, 18 and that the Gentiles shall receive the word and believe. 19 Israel was not ignorant of these things.

BRETHREN, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved.

5 For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them.[n]

6 But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above:)[o]

7 Or, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.)

8 But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach;[p]

9 That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.[q]

10 For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

11 For the scripture saith, Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.[r]

12 For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him.[s]

13 For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.[t]

14 How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?[u]

15 And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things![v]

16 But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed [3]our [4]report?[w]

17 So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

18 But I say, Have they not heard? Yes verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.[x]

19 But I say, Did not Israel know? First Moses saith, I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation I will anger you.[y]

20 But Esaias is very bold, and saith, I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me.[z]

21 But to Israel he saith, All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people.[a]

10. "Not only this:"—as if he had said, "Not only have we an example of the election of the son of Sarah and the rejection of the son of Hagar, but we have also an example of the election and rejection of the children of Rebecca, even before the children were born."

28. "Finish the work:"—the primary application of these words is to the overthrow of the Assyrian power, and the deliverance of God's people; and just as God rapidly fulfilled his promise in that instance, so his Word will sooner or later reach its consummation in the spiritual deliverance of his ancient chosen people, who are beloved for their fathers' sake.

The great design of the Apostle, in this whole chapter, is to show that God has an indisputable right to deal with his creatures according to his own supreme pleasure; and this he exercises, but not apart from their moral principles and character.

CHAPTER X.

2 "Not according to knowledge:"—the legal striving of the Apostle's brethren after righteousness was indeed indicative of earnestness and application, but then they had no enlightened perception of the one only method of acceptance and life; and hence all their strivings, and all their zeal, failed to realise the great end of their salvation.

6, 7. "Who shall ascend? . . . Who shall descend?"—the Apostle had just said that Christ is the end of the law; that is, that Christ effects for the believer the object which the law, if strictly regarded, would secure—namely, acceptance with God and holiness of life. Now he adds, it is not needful for any one to ascend and bring down Christ from above, for he has already appeared in the flesh, and died for our sins; yet it is not needful for any one to go down and bring him up from the grave, as if he were still under the power of death; for he hath risen, and is alive for evermore; and now the Word—the message of salvation, through faith in him—is nigh thee. Thou hast but to believe in him, as the only Saviour of man, to enjoy eternal life.

18. "Went into all the earth:"—not literally, but virtually. After the ascension of our Lord, and the descent of the Spirit, the glad tidings of reconciliation through the blood of the Cross were no longer confined within the limits of Judea, but, overleaping those narrow boundaries, were freely

CHAPTER XI.

1 God hath not cast off all Israel. 7 Some were elected, though the rest were hardened. 16 There is hope of their conversion. 18 The Gentiles may not insult upon them: 26 for there is a promise of their salvation. 33 God's judgments are unsearchable.

I SAY then, Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.[a]

2 God hath not cast away his people which he foreknew. Wot ye not what the scripture saith [1]of Elias? how he maketh intercession to God against Israel, saying,[b]

3 Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life.[c]

4 But what saith the answer of God unto him? I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal.[d]

5 Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace.[e]

6 And if by grace, then is it no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace: otherwise work is no more work.[f]

7 What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were [2]blinded.[g]

8 (According as it is written, God hath given them the spirit of [3]slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear;) unto this day.[h]

9 And David saith, Let their table be made a snare, and a trap, and a stumblingblock, and a recompence unto them:[i]

10 Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see, and bow down their back alway.[j]

11 I say then, Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy.[k]

12 Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the [4]diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fulness?

13 For I speak to you Gentiles, inasmuch as I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify mine office:[l]

14 If by any means I may provoke to emulation them which are my flesh, and might save some of them.[m]

16 For if the firstfruit be holy, the lump is also holy: and if the root be holy, so are the branches.[n]

17 And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree, wert graffed in [5]among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree;[o]

18 Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.[p]

19 Thou wilt say then, The branches were broken off, that I might be graffed in.

20 Well; because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not highminded, but fear:[q]

21 For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.

22 Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness: otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.[r]

23 And they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be graffed in: for God is able to graff them in again.[s]

24 For if thou wert cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and wert graffed contrary to nature into a good olive tree: how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be graffed into their own olive tree?

25 For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that [6]blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.[t]

26 And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob:[u] proclaimed to the Gentiles; and this fact became grandly prophetic of the universal diffusion of Christianity.

27 For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.[v]

19. "I will provoke you to jealousy:"—when the children of Israel fell into idolatry, God threatened, through his servant Moses, to cast them off, and to choose the Gentiles for a people unto himself—than which nothing could have incited them, as a nation, to greater jealousy, or more powerfully call forth their emulation.

CHAPTER XI.

Having pointed out the unbelief and guilt of his nation in rejecting God's revealed method of salvation, with their consequent rejection by God, he now proceeds, with great tenderness and yearnings of heart, to show that this apostacy of the chosen people is neither total nor perpetual; that God has preserved in Israel a holy seed, and the time is coming when all Israel shall be restored, and stand first and pre-eminent in the new and everlasting kingdom of Christ.

1. "I also am an Israelite:"—his own salvation rendered possible the salvation of all his brethren, and therefore was a clear proof that God had not finally and for ever rejected the Jewish nation or people; another proof of which is derived from the fact that at the very time the prophet Elias was preferring his complaint to God against the unfaithfulness and idolatry of Israel, he received the assurance that there were seven thousand which had not bowed the knee to Baal. There is a remnant still.

6—11. "If by grace, then is it no more of works:"—the Jews, as a people, were seeking "salvation by works," and in so doing rejected the richest overtures of "salvation by grace." The consequence was that God left them to themselves, and at length punished them with judicial blindness and hardness of heart. For what end? That they might finally and for ever perish? God forbid! but that the Gospel which they rejected might be offered to the Gentiles, and by the new relationship to Abraham of the Gentile world the Jews might be provoked to jealousy, and be led to seek redemption through the same Saviour, and on the ground of the same free and sovereign grace.

12—32. In these verses the Apostle speaks more immediately to the Gentiles, and reminds them that they owed their election and all the blessings of redeeming grace to the unbelief of the Jews; that they must not boast, for they did not bear the root, but the root bore them; that the 31 Even so have these also now not [1]believed, that through your mercy they also may obtain mercy.

32 For God hath [2]concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all.[a]

33 O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out![b]

34 For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor?[c]

35 Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again?[d]

36 For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to [3]whom be glory for ever. Amen.[e]

CHAPTER XII.

1 God's mercies must move us to please God 3 No man must think too well of himself, 6 but attend every one on that calling wherein he is placed 9 Love, and many other duties, are required of us. 19 Revenge is specially forbidden.

I BESEECH you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.[f]

2 And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God.[g]

3 For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think [4]soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith.[h]

4 For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office:[i]

5 So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.[j]

6 Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith;[k]

7 Or ministry, let us wait on our ministering: or he that teacheth, on teaching;[l]

8 Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that [5]giveth, let him do it [6]with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that sheweth mercy, with cheerfulness.[m]

9 Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good.[n]

10 Be kindly affectioned one to another [7]with brotherly love; in honour preferring one another;[o]

11 Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord;

12 Rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer;[p]

13 Distributing to the necessity of saints; given to hospitality.[q]

14 Bless them which persecute you: bless, and curse not.[r]

15 Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.[s]

16 Be of the same mind one toward another. Mind not high things, but [8]condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits.[t]

17 Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men.[u]

18 If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men.[v]

19 Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.[w]

20 Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.[x]

21 Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Subjection, and many other duties, we owe to the magistrates. 8 Love is the fulfilling of the law 11 Gluttony and drunkenness, and the works of darkness, are out of season in the time of the gospel.

LET every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are [9]ordained of God.[y]

2 Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.[z]

3 For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be

Jews would again be grafted in; that their restoration will be as life from the dead to the Gentile Church; and that both Jews and Gentiles, being equally indebted to the grace of God, will have for ever to give to that grace the undivided glory of their salvation.

CHAPTER XII.

The Apostle now follows up his doctrinal statement with the practical part, as is the case in almost all his Epistles. "As blossom and fruit grow only from a sound root, so, too, it is only from faith in Christ, and in the redemption wrought by him, that the true moral life proceeds. But from this faith it must indeed of necessity be produced, as surely as light and warmth must be diffused where there is fire." In the absence of a practical piety we infer the absence of the living principle. Where there is life there must be development, and the development will correspond with the principle, and be in the degree of its inward strength and operation.

1 "Present your bodies;"—that is, the whole man, with all its powers and capabilities; but he mentions the body to show that the idea of the Christian sanctification extends even to the lowest power of human nature. "The Christian life is an unceasing spiritual devotion of self—a living sacrifice or self-offering."

2. "Be ye transformed:"—it has been well said that "the idea of man's capability of formation—the inward reception of a holy or an unholy pattern—is, according to Scriptural principles, closely connected with the doctrine of the Divine image, and of the essential character of the soul."

3. "Not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think:"—the humility which the Apostle here inculcates lies at the basis, and is the support of all other Christian virtues. Hence the priority and the prominence which are here given to it.

"The measure of faith:"—according to the power with which God had blessed them for the reception of all needful gifts, which gifts were proportioned to the duties required. These gifts differed in different individuals, just as in the human body there are members, but each member has its own appropriate functions, and is fitted for the task assigned to it.

6. "Gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us:"—the term "grace" here must be taken in the same sense as "the measure of faith" in the preceding context. These gifts were diversified, and were bestowed on the recipients according to the will of God.

"According to the proportion of faith:"—according to the nature and extent of the gift bestowed, is the use which we are to make of it. To whom much is given, from such much is expected.

19. "Give place unto wrath:"—do not let it break forth; at once restrain and hold it in check.

afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same: [a]

4 For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

5 Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake. [b]

6 For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

7 Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour. [c]

8 Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law. [d]

9 For this, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. [e]

10 Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. [f]

11 And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. [g]

12 The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light. [h]

13 Let us walk [1]honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. [i]

14 But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof. [j]

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Men may not contemn nor condemn one the other for things indifferent: 13 but take heed that they give no offence in them. 15 for that the apostle proveth unlawful by many reasons.

HIM that is weak in the faith receive ye, but [2]not to doubtful disputations. [k]

2 For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs. [l]

3 Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him which eateth not judge him that eateth: for God hath received him. [m]

4 Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth. Yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand. [n]

5 One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be [3]fully persuaded in his own mind. [o]

6 He that [4]regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks. [p]

7 For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. [q]

8 For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.

9 For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living. [r]

10 But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. [s]

11 For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. [t]

12 So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. [u]

13 Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way. [v]

14 I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing [5]unclean of itself; but to him that esteemeth any thing to be [6]unclean, to him it is unclean. [w]

15 But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not [7]charitably. Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died. [x]

16 Let not then your good be evil spoken of: [y]

17 For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. [z]

18 For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men. [a]

20. "Heap coals of fire"—this is an allusion to the process employed in the melting of metals. it is not enough that the vessel containing the ore be placed on the fire, nor that fire be placed around it; the fire must be heaped upon it, and this accumulation of fire no metal can withstand. He that overcomes an enemy by the force of reiterated acts of kindness, may be said, in effect, to heap coals of fire on his head.

CHAPTER XIII.

1. "There is no power but of God."—he is its source; civil government is one of his high ordinations; nevertheless, if that power be not exercised in harmony with his will, we must obey him rather than man. If human authority contravene the will of God, the guilt of disobeying that authority rests not upon us, but upon those who, by an abuse of power, have interfered with the Divine order of things. At the same time, a distinction is to be drawn between a simple refusing to obey, and an active or armed resistance, which is, doubtless, the kind of resistance spoken of in the text.

2. "Receive to themselves damnation:"—if the civil power keeps within its own proper line of jurisdiction, and we resist it, then we are justly condemned to suffer temporal punishment. The magistrate thus becomes the minister of God, to chastise the disobedient.

12—14. "The night is far spent:"—the brightness of the resurrection morning, and of the future glory, gives to the present life all the darkness of a long and dreary night. It therefore becomes the Christian to use all diligence that he may be freed from the darkness and the defilement of earth, and be prepared for the purity and perfection of heaven.

CHAPTER XIV.

Having just exhorted the Romans to keep themselves from all such fleshly indulgence as would defile the renewed soul, and to seek after that holiness which will attain its perfection in the spotless purity of heaven, the Apostle now passes to speak of an error which was disturbing and dividing the Roman believers—that asceticism which interdicted certain articles of food, and which insisted on this abstinence as something affecting the salvation of the soul.

1. "Weak in the faith:"—the man of morbid conscience, with his scruples and his prejudices, his habits and his observances, but still a believer.

7—9. "None of us liveth to himself:"—"an unreserved devotedness to the Lord is that which must ever be the essential of the Christian life: whatever can consist with this, may be willingly borne with in a brother."

19 Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another.[a]

20 For meat destroy not the work of God. All things indeed are pure; but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence.[b]

21 It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak.[c]

22 Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth.[d]

23 And he that [1]doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for whatsoever is not of faith is sin.[e]

CHAPTER XV.

1 The strong must bear with the weak. 2 We may not please ourselves, 3 for Christ did not so, 7 but receive one the other, as Christ did us all, 8 both Jews 9 and Gentiles. 15 Paul excuseth his writing, 28 and promiseth to see them, 30 and requesteth their prayers.

WE then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.[f]

2 Let every one of us please his neighbour for his good to edification.[g]

3 For even Christ pleased not himself; but, as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.[h]

4 For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope.[i]

5 Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be likeminded one toward another [2]according to Christ Jesus:[j]

6 That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.[k]

7 Wherefore receive ye one another, as Christ also received us to the glory of God.[l]

8 Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers:[m]

9 And that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy; as it is written, For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name.[n]

12 And again, Esaias saith, There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust.[q]

13 Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost.[r]

14 And I myself also am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye also are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another.[s]

15 Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, because of the grace that is given to me of God,[t]

16 That I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel of God, that the [3]offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.[u]

17 I have therefore whereof I may glory through Jesus Christ in those things which pertain to God.[v]

18 For I will not dare to speak of any of those things which Christ hath not wrought by me, to make the Gentiles obedient, by word and deed,[w]

19 Through mighty signs and wonders, by the power of the Spirit of God; so that from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ.[x]

20 Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation:[y]

21 But as it is written, To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand.[z]

22 For which cause also I have been [4]much hindered from coming to you.[a]

23 But now having no more place in these parts, and having a great desire these many years to come unto you;[b]

24 Whensoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you: for I trust to see you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled [5]with your company.[c]

25 But now I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints.[d]

26 For it hath pleased them of Macedonia and

13. "But judge this rather;"—or determine this, or resolve upon this, as of more immediate and more vital moment—to do nothing to occasion a brother to stumble or fall.

14. "Nothing unclean of itself:"—it is not unclean on account of any impurity in itself, but only relatively to the Mosaic law, and the ends involved in that law, which Christianity had abolished with all its prohibitions and restrictions. Still, if any one look upon a creature as unclean, to him it is unclean, and he ought not to eat it. Nor should the strong brother eat such food in the presence of his weak brother, whose conscience it might offend.

22. "Hast thou faith?"—that is, Does the character of your faith lift you above all scruples in such matters, still let your conduct to others be such as you can justify before God. If there be a doubt in your mind as to your line of action, it is a virtual condemnation of your conduct. Whatsoever is not of faith, or the result of deep and enlightened conviction, is sinful, and therefore to be condemned.

CHAPTER XV.

The Apostle having laid down the general principle of mutual forbearance in those matters in which a difference of opinion prevailed among these Roman converts, now sets forth Christ himself as the great Exemplar of all human conduct, and in whose life there is exhibited the most self-sacrificing love and devotedness.

3. "Christ pleased not himself:"—just as his sufferings reveal the purest form of self-denial—just as he loved those who hated him, and out of love to their souls willingly endured all the ignominy and woe which they heaped upon him, so we must practise the same self-denying love.

5. "According to Christ Jesus:"—according to the perfect pattern which he had set them, and in harmony with the genius and spirit of his Gospel.

7. "As Christ also received us:"—welcoming both Jews and Gentiles into his own spiritual kingdom.

16. "Offering up of the Gentiles:"—the Apostle here, by a beautiful figure, "represents himself as an officiating priest, and the Gentile world as a

Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem.[a]

27 It hath pleased them verily; and their debtors they are. For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is also to minister unto them in carnal things.[b]

28 When therefore I have performed this, and have sealed to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spain.[c]

29 And I am sure that, when I come unto you, I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.[d]

30 Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me;[e]

31 That I may be delivered from them that [1]do not believe in Judæa; and that my service which I have for Jerusalem may be accepted of the saints;[f]

32 That I may come unto you with joy by the will of God, and may with you be refreshed.[g]

33 Now the God of peace be with you all. Amen.[h]

CHAPTER XVI.

3 Paul willeth the brethren to greet many, 17 and adviseth them to take heed of those which cause dissension and offences, 21 and after sundry salutations endeth with praise and thanks to God.

I COMMEND unto you Phebe our sister, which is a servant of the church which is at Cenchrea:[i]

2 That ye receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you: for she hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also.[j]

3 Greet Priscilla and Aquila my helpers in Christ Jesus:[k]

4 Who have for my life laid down their own necks: unto whom not only I give thanks, but also all the churches of the Gentiles.

5 Likewise greet the church that is in their house. Salute my wellbeloved Epænetus, who is the firstfruits of Achaia unto Christ.[l]

6 Greet Mary, who bestowed much labour on us.

7 Salute Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellowprisoners, who are of note among the apostles, who also were in Christ before me.[m]

8 Greet Amplias my beloved in the Lord.

9 Salute Urbane, our helper in Christ, and Stachys my beloved.

10 Salute Apelles approved in Christ. Salute them which are of Aristobulus' [2]household.

11 Salute Herodion my kinsman. Greet them that be of the [3]houshold of Narcissus, which are in the Lord.

12 Salute Tryphena and Tryphosa, who labour in the Lord. Salute the beloved Persis, which laboured much in the Lord.

13 Salute Rufus chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine.[n]

14 Salute Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, and the brethren which are with them.

15 Salute Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympas, and all the saints which are with them.

16 Salute one another with an holy kiss. The churches of Christ salute you.[o]

17 Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them.[p]

18 For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple.[q]

19 For your obedience is come abroad unto all men. I am glad therefore on your behalf: but yet I would have you wise unto that which is good, and [4]simple concerning evil.[r]

20 And the God of peace shall [5]bruise Satan under your feet shortly. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.[s]

21 Timotheus my workfellow, and Lucius, and Jason, and Sosipater, my kinsman, salute you.[t]

22 I Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord.

23 Gaius mine host, and of the whole church, saluteth you. Erastus the chamberlain of the city saluteth you, and Quartus a brother.[u]

24 The grace of our Lord Jesus, Christ be with you all. Amen.[v]

25 Now to him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began,[w]

26 But now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith:[x]

27 To God only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen.[y]

EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE

TO THE CORINTHIANS

CHAPTER I.

1 After his salutation and thanksgiving, 10 he exhorteth them to unity, and 12 reproveth their dissensions. 18 God destroyeth the wisdom of the wise 21 by the foolishness of preaching, and 26 mighty, and noble, but 27, 28 the foolish, weak, and men of no account.

ANNO DOMINI 59

PAUL, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God, and Sosthenes our brother,[a]

2 Unto the church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both their's and our's:[b]

3 Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.[c]

4 I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God which is given you by Jesus Christ;[d] c Rom. i. 7; 2 Cor i 2; Eph. i. 2; 1 Peter i. 2.

d Rom. i. 8.

5 That in every thing ye are enriched by him, in all utterance, and in all knowledge;[a]

6 Even as the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you:[b]

7 So that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the [1]coming of our Lord Jesus Christ:[c]

8 Who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.[d]

9 God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord.[e]

10 Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no [2]divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment.[f]

11 For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them which are of the house of Chloe, that there are contentions among you.

12 Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ.[g]

13 Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?[h]

14 I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius;[i]

15 Lest any should say that I had baptized in mine own name.

16 And I baptized also the houshold of Stephanas: besides, I know not whether I baptized any other.[j]

17 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of [3]words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect.[k]

18 For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God.[l]

19 For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent.[m]

20 Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?[n]

21 For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.[o]

22 For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom:[p]

23 But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness;[q]

24 But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God.[r]

25 Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men.

26 For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called:[s]

27 But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty;[t]

28 And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are:[u]

29 That no flesh should glory in his presence.[v]

30 But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption:[w]

31 That, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.[x]

CHAPTER I.

Corinth was a city of great antiquity, and was believed to be older even than Troy. It stood upon the Peloponnesus, and close to the isthmus which divided it from the Morea. It therefore seemed to stand upon two seas, and its commerce was most extensive and important. Its western harbour was called Lechæum, and its eastern one Cenchræa. The city stood upon a rather elevated site, at the foot of a lofty rock called the Acropolis, which is seen in the engraving on the left. From this rock, upon which a strong citadel stood, a magnificent prospect was obtained. The isthmus was famous for its games, which were of very early origin, and are celebrated as the Isthmian Games in many of the old Greek writers. Arts and sciences were greatly promoted at Corinth, but its inhabitants were given to luxury and vice. The history of the city is one of much interest. It was at one time independent, but it was conquered by one of the successors of Alexander the Great, and afterwards by the Romans. At present the place exists, but it is uncomfortable and unhealthy. A few relics of its ancient grandeur remain: these include part of the baths of Hadrian; an amphitheatre excavated in the rock; and seven massive Doric columns, which are believed to mark the site of a splendid temple of Minerva. The Acropolis, or Acro-Corinthus, rises 1,800 feet above the sea. Lechæum was once connected with Corinth by two walls. The port of Cenchræa was at a greater distance; and it now takes two hours to reach it. The forum of Corinth was very splendid, and it and its ornaments are described by Pausanias, who tells us that it contained many temples and statues. The engraving at the head of this Epistle is an imaginary restoration of the ancient city.

The Apostle first visited this city during his second great apostolic or missionary journey, and impressed with its importance as a centre of action, he remained here for eighteen months, prosecuting his missionary labours with unwearied interest. The fruit of his labours was seen in the planting of this Church, whose members were composed chiefly of Gentile converts; but there arose certain opinions and modes of action which called for the Apostle's advice and decision. Hence the production of this Epistle, in which he seeks to reclaim the Corinthians from their party divisions, rebukes their immoral proceedings, and prescribes for the removal of many irregularities and abuses in their mode of worship and service. The Apostle also lays down, in his answers to questions of local and temporary interest, principles of universal application and perpetual obligation.

The Epistle was written from Ephesus, A.D. 57, and is of inestimable value to the whole Christian Church, and will continue to be valuable till the end of time.

1. "Sosthenes our brother:"—whoever this was, he must have been eminent for his faith and labour, and well known to the Church at Corinth. He is not to be confounded with the Sosthenes mentioned in Acts xviii. 17.

2. "Call upon the name of Jesus Christ:"—is not this "a direct testimony to the divine worship of Jesus Christ as universal in the Church?"

4—9. Whatever was holy and attractive in these Corinthian believers, the Apostle places strongly in the foreground, and thus appeals to the better side of their character, that he may bring out the contrast which follows more plainly and impressively.

11. "The house of Chloe:"—who this Chloe was, and which of the members of his family gave Paul his information, we have no means of now knowing, and it is vain to conjecture.

12. "I am of Paul:"—we are not to infer from this verse that there were so many separate parties in the Church as that the Church was being rent by its internal feuds—the fruit of contention.

14. "Crispus and Gaius:"—see marginal references, Acts xviii. 8; Rom. xvi. 23.

17. "Not with wisdom of words:"—the Apostle here does not refer so much to the graces of rhetoric, or the force of eloquence, as those speculations of philosophy which were so prevalent in Greece, as the centre of the world's wisdom.

30. "Made unto us wisdom:"—by no reach of knowledge, by no accumulation of wisdom, has the world ever found out God; but what philosophy has failed to discover, the Gospel has revealed; and that Incarnate who came full of grace and truth, renders us, in this respect, independent of all human enlightenment, for he himself is our wisdom—the real, essential knowledge of God. With this inward illumination comes that righteousness which insures our acceptance with God; this is followed by that sanctification which is the gradual development of the new and spiritual life; and then comes that redemption or final deliverance of our whole nature, which is described in God's word as life and joy eternal. We have thus the great phases of the Christian life from its commencement to its completion; and for all that is involved in this life, and for all that will follow hereafter, we are indebted immediately and for ever to Christ.

CHAPTER II.

He declareth that his preaching, 1 though it bring not excellency of speech, or of 4 human wisdom: yet consisteth in the 4, 5 power of God: and so far excelleth 6 the wisdom of this world, and 9 human sense, as that 14 the natural man cannot understand it.

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God.[a]

2 For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.[b]

3 And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling.[c]

4 And my speech and my preaching was not with [1]enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power:[d]

5 That your faith should not [2]stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.[e]

6 Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to nought:[f]

7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory:[g]

8 Which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.[h]

9 But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.[i]

10 But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.[j]

11 For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.[k]

12 Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God.[l]

CHAPTER II.

The Apostle having exposed the insufficiency of all human enlightenment and philosophy in reference to man's highest interests, now proceeds to dilate on that Divine wisdom which is without any admixture of the human element, and which formed the burden of his preaching, not only in Corinth, but in all places whithersoever he went. The Gospel, in its essence, is neither theoretic, abstract, or reflective, nor even imaginative; but it is historical, and the history is divine. The preaching of the Gospel is a revelation of God's doings, and especially of the one great act of God's love—the gift of his only Son for the sins of the world.

2. "I determined;"—that is, he judged within himself—he had the fullest, most profound conviction, that it became him, as a minister of the New Testament, to know nothing in his preaching but CHRIST THE CRUCIFIED. His ministry was not something about Christ, but Christ himself. "The historical Christ is also the living Christ, who abides by his own until the last day. Therefore is Christ himself, the Crucified and the Risen, everywhere the object of preaching."

3. "In weakness:"—this refers not so much to his mode of address, as to his personal consciousness of his inward weakness and fear, in contrast with the magnitude and the grandeur of the work which he had to perform.

6. "Among them that are perfect:"—just as the ancient schools of philosophy had their more advanced pupils, and just as the heathen priesthood had those who were more deeply and intimately initiated in their mysteries, so the Apostle speaks only to the enlightened and regenerated—to those who had received the truth in demonstration and power of the Spirit—as alone qualified to understand the sublime disclosures of the Gospel.

7. "The wisdom of God:"—this wisdom can refer to nothing but the wondrous scheme of redeeming mercy by Jesus Christ, as its immutable and eternal centre. It is elsewhere called "the manifold wisdom of God."—See Eph. i. 7—14; iii. 1—12; Col. i. 14—29.

9, 10. "Eye hath not seen:"—these words are not to be applied to the unseen glories of heaven, but to the brighter, fuller discoveries of the Gospel, for, says the Apostle, "the Spirit hath revealed them unto us"—that is, to the Apostles, and through the Apostles to the whole Church. The great idea involved in the words is this—that Christianity is a grand advance upon all preceding Revelation.

CHAPTER III.

Having set forth the Gospel in its sublime discoveries, the Apostle distinctly intimates that he was prepared to take up the very highest forms of truth in his teaching, had the Corinthians been in a state of mind and feeling adapted to receive them. But the fact of their feuds and divisions was a clear proof that they were yet far from that spiritual standard which is set before every believer, and were subject to influences which indicated more or less of fleshly-mindedness. Hence the strictures and the tone of the present chapter.

1. "Could not speak unto you;"—that is, he could not bring before them those higher forms of truth which bespeak a higher degree of spiritual perception—a greater receptive faculty in those who receive them. Their carnal or fleshly condition was their disqualification, and hence he had to feed them with milk, or give them the most rudimental, elemental truth.

5. "As the Lord gave to every man:"—the Corinthians were attaching themselves to men according to the gifts or endowments which they possessed; but the Apostle reminds them that both he himself, and every one associated with him in the work of the ministry, had received his gifts from one: and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour.[a]

9 For we are labourers together with God: ye are God's [1]husbandry, ye are God's building.[b]

10 According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.[c]

11 For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.[d]

12 Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble;

13 Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it [2]shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is.[e]

14 If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward.[f]

15 If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.[g]

16 Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?[h]

17 If any man [3]defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.

18 Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.[i]

19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.[j]

20 And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.[k]

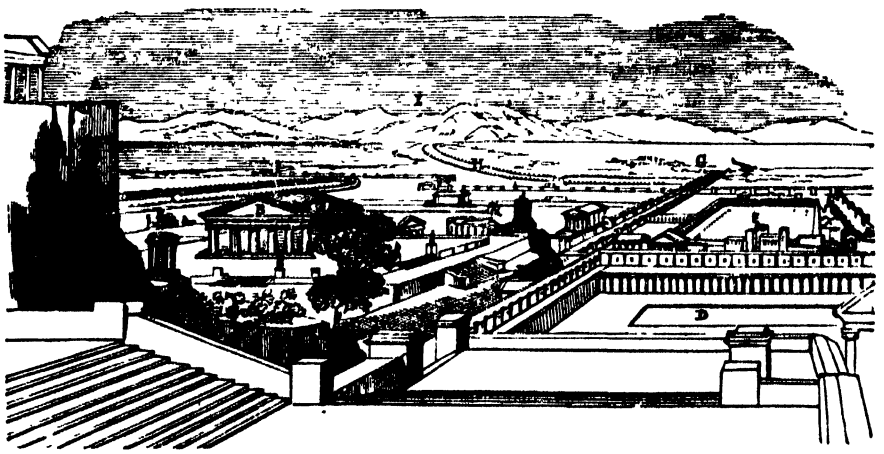
LET a man so account of us, as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God.[n]

2 Moreover it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful.

3 But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's [4]judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self.

4 For I know nothing by myself; yet am I not hereby justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.[o]



5 Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God.[p]

6 And these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos for your sakes; that ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another.[q]

God; and that since God worked in them, on him, and not on any man, must all depend.

6, 7. "I have planted:"—it is to be carefully observed that the Apostle does not say that this planting is nothing, or that the watering is nothing; for both the planting and the watering are essential to the increase; but that increase is to be ascribed neither to the planter nor to the waterer, but to God, who acts through them, and gives the result.

12. "If any man build upon this foundation:"—the gold, silver, and precious stones are generally interpreted of truth; while the wood, hay, and stubble are referred to error; and the builder in each case is said to be the professing Christian. This, we think, is a mistake. The Apostle is speaking, not of doctrine, but of character. He had laid the basis of the Church in Corinth. He had set forth Christ as the exclusive object of faith and de-looked as converts, or as Christians, would at last be rejected by the Lord and Saviour.

CHAPTER IV.

1. "Stewards of the mysteries of God:"—it is true that Paul looked upon himself as only the servant of Christ, and, for his sake, the servant of the Church; but as a steward intrusted with the unsearchable riches of Christ, the Gospel of salvation, he refused to be judged officially by any man — to hold himself amenable to any human authority. "It is required of a steward that he be found faithful;" and therefore he has to please not himself, nor man, but God only.

4. "I know nothing by myself:"—in other words, "I am not conscious to myself of being unfaithful; but I do not rest in this: I appeal to the final authority—to the Judge of all, who knoweth all who perverted this doctrine, and they had corrupted the Church by the introduction of unholy, unregenerate men. He therefore warns the teachers and the Church that whatever material they introduced would be subject to the severest ordeal. If they acted from pure motives, they themselves would be saved, but only by passing through this ordeal; while their work, unless good and approved, would be burnt; and hence they would suffer loss, for those on whom they tle's remarks applied not to himself, nor to Apollos, his fellow-labourer, but to [illegible] to exalt themselves above them; but by applying admonitions to himself and Apollos, he gave them a keener edge in their application to their antagonists.

8. "I would to God ye did reign:"—if their influence in the Church had been legitimately obtained—if their empire over others had been well founded—if their reign had been founded on the will of God—the Apostle

7 For who [1]maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?[a]

8 Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us: and I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you.[b] would have been acknowledged by them, and shared in their honour: but they deemed themselves full or entire without him; as rich, and therefore independent of him: and hence he was depreciated and despised. But he gloried in his sufferings for Christ's sake. Though deemed the least and the vilest of men—though made a spectacle to the whole universe—he preferred this to any worldly honour, to any spurious exaltation.

CHAPTER V.

"It is undoubted that in the most exalted and best constituted community an individual may fall into gross error; but then it is requisite that the said body should decidedly exhibit its displeasure against the offending member. This, however, was not the case in Corinth. The universal moral sluggishness displayed itself by the manner in which this occurrence was

6 Your glorying is not good. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?[c]

7 Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is [1]sacrificed for us:[d]

8 Therefore let us keep [2]the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.[e]

9 I wrote unto you in an epistle not to company with fornicators:[f]

10 Yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world.[g]

11 But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat.[h]

12 For what have I to do to judge them also that are without? do not ye judge them that are within?[i]

13 But them that are without God judgeth. Therefore put away from among yourselves that wicked person.[j]

CHAPTER VI.

1 The Corinthians must not vex their brethren, in going to law with them: 6 especially under infidels. 9 The unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God. 15 Our bodies are the members of Christ, 19 and temples of the Holy Ghost. 16, 17 They must not therefore be defiled.

DARE any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?

2 Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world? and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters?[k]

3 Know ye not that we shall judge angels? how much more things that pertain to this life?[l]

4 If then ye have judgments of things pertaining to this life, set them to judge who are least esteemed in the church.[m]

5 I speak to your shame. Is it so, that there is not a wise man among you? no, not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers.

7 Now therefore there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law one with another. Why do ye not rather take wrong? why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?[n]

8 Nay, ye do wrong, and defraud, and that your brethren.[o]

9 Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind,[p]

10 Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.

11 And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.[q]

12 All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not [3]expedient: all things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.[r]

13 Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats: but God shall destroy both it and them. Now the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord; and the Lord for the body.[s]

14 And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power.[t]

15 Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ? shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid.[u]

16 What? know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for two, saith he, shall be one flesh.[v]

17 But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit.[w]

viewed; for they still tolerated the offender in their community, and thus gave evidence that they were not sensible of the enormity of his offence. Paul, therefore, justly reproves the Church, not as a number of separate individuals, but in one—all—as a living, united body; and, together with directions for the excommunication of the offender, he delivers a serious rebuke to the whole Church."

1. "His father's wife;"—that is, the step-mother of the offender. The offence here referred to by the Apostle was one of rare occurrence even among the Gentile nations.

2. "Ye are puffed up:"—notwithstanding such an offence had been committed by one of their community, they were pluming themselves on their diversified gifts and endowments, and overlooking the existence of an evil which should have filled them with grief, and led to the act of immediate expulsion.

3—5. "With the power of our Lord Jesus Christ:"—this clause must be taken in connection with the third verse, thus—I verily, as absent in body, but present in spirit, have already determined, as much as if I were present among you, that he who has committed this offence shall, in the name of Christ, be given over to Satan, to be bodily afflicted; therefore, when ye assemble together, deliver such an one to Satan, and cut him off from the Church, that by his afflictions, and by his separation from the faithful, he may learn how he has fallen, may repent of his sin, and find salvation for his deathless spirit."

7. "Christ our passover is sacrificed for us:"—he died for sin, and therefore sin is not to be tolerated in any of his followers. They must present themselves at his table, and celebrate the great paschal feast of his sacrifice with pure hearts and clean hands.

9. "I wrote in an epistle:"—not in the former part of this epistle, but some other apostolic letter which has not come down to us, and of which we have no further knowledge. It has been suggested by Dr. Stanley that the whole passage, from this verse on to chapter vi. 8, may have been a postscript or note inserted subsequently to the rest of the Epistle.

10—13. "Not altogether with the fornicators of this world:"—lest the Corinthians should mistake his meaning, the Apostle now limits his prohibition, and keeps its action within the Church. To entirely withdraw ourselves from men as men, on the ground of moral character, would require us to go out of the world altogether. We must leave the unrenewed world in the hands of God as their only Judge; but we have to preserve our own purity, and also the purity of the Church, in her various members.

CHAPTER VI.

The Apostle having laid it down as an incontrovertible position that the government of the Church is within itself, he reminds the Corinthians that not only had they the power to exclude the profligate and inconsistent from their community, but to determine every question affecting the integrity of a Christian brother's character; and that to appeal in such cases to judicial and heathen authority was in fact to undermine the constitution of the Church. Just as they were not to erect themselves into judges over the heathen, so they were not to set the heathen, though invested with judicial power, as judges over themselves.

18 Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body.[a]

19 What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?[b]

20 For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.[c]

CHAPTER VII.

2 He treateth of marriage, 4 shewing it to be a remedy against fornication: 10 and that the bond thereof ought not lightly to be dissolved. 18, 20 Every man must be content with his vocation. 25 Virginity wherefore to be embraced. 35 And for what respects we may either marry, or abstain from marrying.

NOW concerning the things whereof ye wrote unto me: It is good for a man not to touch a woman.[d]

2 Nevertheless, to avoid fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.

3 Let the husband render unto the wife due benevolence: and likewise also the wife unto the husband.[e]

4 The wife hath not power of her own body, but the husband: and likewise also the husband hath not power of his own body, but the wife.

5 Defraud ye not one the other, except it be with consent for a time, that ye may give yourselves to fasting and prayer; and come together again, that Satan tempt you not for your incontinency.[f]

6 But I speak this by permission, and not of commandment.[g]

7 For I would that all men were even as I myself. But every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that.[h]

8 I say therefore to the unmarried and widows, It is good for them if they abide even as I.[i]

19 Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God.[r]

20 Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called.

21 Art thou called being a servant? care not for it: but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather.

22 For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's [3]freeman: likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant.[s]

23 Ye are bought with a price; be not ye the servants of men.[t]

1. "Not before the saints:"—questions affecting themselves in their Christian characters and church relations were to be settled by themselves, for of such questions they were far more competent to judge than any merely civil tribunal.

2. "The saints shall judge the world:"—not conduct the great process of the final judgment, for that involves infinite knowledge and absolute dominion; but their own justification having been first pronounced and ratified, they will then sit as assessors of Christ the Judge of all.

3. "We shall judge angels:"—are these good angels, or bad? We imagine it to be the devil and the fallen angels, as the angels who preserved their first estate, we presume, are not brought under any judicial act. But the course to be followed in the case of these intelligences is not yet revealed.

4. "Judgments of things pertaining to this life;"—that is, if in the ordinary affairs of this life there arise any case which calls for investigation and judgment among you as Christian brethren, set them to judge or determine it who are least esteemed in the Church; for any man endowed with common sense and the power of perception is equal to such a duty.

6—8. "Brother goeth to law with brother:"—if the subject here is to be referred to disputes which had arisen about property or earthly possessions, then the force of the passage lies in the fact that instead of submitting to the injury in the spirit of Christian forbearance, they were guilty of wronging and defrauding each other.

12. "All things are lawful unto me:"—great difficulty has been found in tracing the connection of this verse with what precedes. Bellroth conceives it to be this:—"Some one may have alleged Christian liberty as an excuse for these crimes; but therein he would certainly err: this may not be misused even in the case of meats, how much less in things immoral in themselves." In other words, they would argue, if meats were indifferent, so was impurity. Against such a doctrine the Apostle sternly protests.

CHAPTER VII.

It would seem from the contents of this chapter that the Corinthians, from some cause or other, had begun to depreciate the marriage relation, and in their letter to the Apostle they have suggested whether it were not better to avoid any such relationships, and, even in those cases in which persons had been united by marriage, whether it would not be better to break off this alliance, especially if one of the parties were still an unbeliever. These questions show how little they understood the genius of Christ's Gospel. And yet to this fact we are indebted for this treatise of St. Paul, which, "with the exception of the detailed laws respecting marriage in the Old Testament, is the most important treatise in the Holy Scriptures on that sacred ordinance—the type of Christ and the Church."

6. "By permission."—he did not lay it down as a law, but as a suggestion, making all due allowance for them in their present circumstances.

10. "Not I, but the Lord:"—it is not a command uttered by the Apostle for the first time, for it had already been given by Christ in Mark x. 11, 12, and only here reiterated by Paul. It rested not on his authority, but on the authority of the Lord himself.

12. "Speak I, not the Lord;"—that is, Christ had said nothing on the points to which the Apostle is about to refer, and therefore they are to be received on his apostolic authority—an authority derived immediately from Christ, and exercised only for his glory.

14. "But now are they holy;"—that is, relatively so; for "things belonging to relatives inseparably connected with the people of God are said to be hallowed," or holy, in virtue of their sanctification.

15, 16. "Let him depart:"—let a separation take place rather than live in alienation, and destroy the peace and happiness of the domestic circle. The sixteenth verse is taken by some as a reason for this separation; for neither husband nor wife could tell that their remaining together would be favour-

24 Brethren, let every man, wherein he is called, therein abide with God.[a]

25 Now concerning virgins I have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful.[b]

26 I suppose therefore that this is good for the present [1]distress, I say, that it is good for a man so to be.[c]

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

28 But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned. Nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I spare you.

29 But this I say, brethren, the time is short: it remaineth, that both they that have wives be as though they had none;[d]

30 And they that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as though they possessed not;

31 And they that use this world, as not abusing it: for the fashion of this world passeth away.[e]

32 But I would have you without carefulness. He that is unmarried careth for the things [2]that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord:[f]

33 But he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife.

34 There is difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit: but she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband.[g]

35 And this I speak for your own profit; not that I may cast a snare upon you, but for that which is comely, and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction.

36 But if any man think that he behaveth himself uncomely toward his virgin, if she pass the flower of her age, and need so require, let him do what he will, he sinneth not: let them marry.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 To abstain from meats offered to idols. 8, 9 We must not abuse our Christian liberty, to the offence of our brethren: 11 but must bridle our knowledge with charity.

NOW as touching things offered unto idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.[k]

2 And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.[l]

3 But if any man love God, the same is known of him.[m]

4 As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice unto idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one.[n]

5 For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,)[o]

6 But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we [3]in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.[p]

7 Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge: for some with conscience of the idol unto this able to the conversion of the unbelieving party; but others find in it a reason for still living together, in the fact that the holy and peaceful life of the one might act savingly on the heart of the other. To this latter view the closing words of the fifteenth verse seem to lend peculiar force—"but God hath called us to peace"—to love and unity, and not to separation.

17. "Distributed to every man:"—given him his place and position, and in that place and position called him by his grace: let him, therefore, walk or act accordingly.

21—23. "Art thou called?"—these verses are rather obscure. To paraphrase them will be to explain them. "Art thou called while a slave, or in servitude? Let not that puff you up; but if thou canst obtain thy freedom, then use every means to this end, always bearing in mind that the slave who is called in the Lord is the Lord's free man; likewise also the free man who is called is Christ's servant. Whether bond or free, both have been bought with the same price; and as Christ's servants, they were not, in things spiritual, to be in subjection to any man."

24. "Abide with God:"—maintain in all conditions of life, in slavery as in freedom, the higher relation with God—live in him and for him.

34. "There is difference also between a wife and a virgin;"—that is, a difference in the objects of their solicitude and interest.

35. "That which is comely;"—or which is seemly and fitting in such circumstances.

36. "Uncomely toward his virgin:"—the Apostle is not speaking here of parties betrothed to each other, but of the conduct of a father towards his virgin daughter, in seeking to prevent her marriage, even when she has passed the flower of her age, or has reached full age. She is resolved to marry; then if it be unseemly longer to oppose, let him give up his daughter—there can be no sin in such a surrender—and let her marry.

37. "Having no necessity:"—if no such necessity exists, as in the former case. If a daughter is not engaged, and therefore is under no promise, her father is not called to give her up.

40 "I think also that I have the Spirit of God."—a beautiful example of our Apostle's humility. "Not that he is speaking without inspiration; but that, in the consciousness of inspiration, he is giving that counsel which should determine the question."

CHAPTER VIII.

It is more than probable that some of the members of the Corinthian Church had gone so far as not only to eat meat which had been offered in sacrifice to idols, but actually to take part in some of those sacrificial festivities which were celebrated within the heathen temple itself. The Apostle, therefore, proceeds in this chapter to treat of the use of meats offered in sacrifice—of participation in idolatrous festivities—of Christian liberty, and of other related points.

1. "Things offered" were those portions of the animal which were offered in sacrifice, and which were sometimes eaten in private.

"We know:"—all that follows these words, down to the end of the third verse, should be read as a parenthesis. In the fourth verse the Apostle again takes up his subject.

The beauty of the last clause in the first verse comes out very strikingly by a slight change in two words, thus—"Knowledge puffeth up, but love buildeth up." Knowledge when alone is of infinitely less value than this great principle of love.

2. "He knoweth nothing."—he can have no true knowledge of God, and of spiritual realities, till his soul is interpenetrated with the love of God. "The knowledge of God, therefore, presupposes the being known of him. The soul will not vivify with life from above until God has drawn nigh," and taken the soul into union with himself.

hour eat it as a thing offered unto an idol; and their conscience being weak is defiled.[a]

8 But meat commendeth us not to God: for neither, if we eat, [1]are we the better; neither, if we eat not, [2]are we the worse.[b]

9 But take heed lest by any means this [3]liberty of yours become a stumblingblock to them that are weak.[c]

10 For if any man see thee which hast knowledge sit at meat in the idol's temple, shall not the conscience of him which is weak be [4]emboldened to eat those things which are offered to idols;[d]

11 And through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died?[e]

4 Have we not power to eat and to drink?[j]

5 Have we not power to lead about a sister, a [5]wife, as well as other apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?[k]

6 Or I only and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working?[l]

4. "An idol is nothing:"—the more proper rendering would be, "there is no idol in the world;" for what these idols are meant to represent has no existence. The idol thus becomes a nonentity. But the one God, of whom there can be no representation, is the sublimest reality. He is, and he cannot cease to be.

7. "Eat it as a thing offered unto an idol:"—there were those who had not the same enlightened views regarding the non-existence of the idol—those whose consciousness up to that very hour led them to a different conclusion, and who, believing in the reality of the idol, could not eat the meat but under the idea that it had been really offered in sacrifice to some deity, and hence their conscience accused them, and they thus became tainted with the sin of idolatry.

9—13. "Take heed lest by any means this liberty:"—on these verses see Rom. xiv. 13—23.

CHAPTER IX.

Having urged upon the Corinthians the duty of self-denial, and of the strong bearing with the infirmities of the weak, the Apostle here digresses, to introduce his own conduct as an example for them to follow. He contrasts his rights as an Apostle with his actual conduct in renouncing that freedom which in itself is lawful—a freedom he might have exercised, but which, in the spirit of that love that "endureth all things," he willingly gave up.

3. "That do examine me;"—or, who call in question my line of action.

5. "A sister, a wife;"—that is, to bring with him a believing wife, or, as a wife, a believing sister, to be maintained by the church; for it is the question of support, and not of marriage, which is here involved.

6. "I only and Barnabas:"—this is the only time, Dean Stanley remarks, where Barnabas is mentioned in conjunction with St. Paul since that difference of opinion prevailed which is mentioned in Acts xv. 39.

7 Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?[a]

8 Say I these things as a man? or saith not the law the same also?

9 For it is written in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen?[b]

10 Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope.[c]

11 If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?[d]

12 If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheless we have not used this power; but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ.[e]

13 Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things [1]live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?[f]

14 Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.[g]

15 But I have used none of these things: neither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me: for it were better for me to die, than that any man should make my glorying void.[h]

16 For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel![i]

17 For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me.[j]

18 What is my reward then? Verily that, when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel of Christ without charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel.[k]

19 For though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more.[l]

21 To them that are without law, as without law, (being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.[n]

22 To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some.[o]

23 And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.

24 Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain.[p]

25 And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.[q]

26 I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air:[r]

27 But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.[s]

CHAPTER X.

1 The sacraments of the Jews 6 are types of our's, 7 and their punishments, 11 examples for us. 14 We must fly from idolatry. 21 We must not make the Lord's table the table of devils: 24 and in things indifferent we must have regard of our brethren.

MOREOVER, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea

2 And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea;

3 And did all eat the same spiritual meat;[u]

4 And did all drink the same spiritual drink: for of that spiritual Rock that [2]followed them: and that Rock was Christ.[v]

"To forbear working:"—and so look to the church for our support. Are we only denied this right?

12. "Suffer all things:"—forego our right, give up our claim to support, for the sake of that Gospel which we preach, that nothing on our part may hinder its progress.

15. "Make my glorying void:" — his boast was, that his own hands had ministered to his necessities, while seeking to propagate that Gospel which, by a solemn and irremovable necessity, he was bound to make known.

17 "A dispensation:"—if unwillingly he gave up the claim to support, still he could not give up his solemn trust. A stewardship had been intrusted to him—to him had been committed the word of reconciliation; he must preach—he must be faithful.

19. "Free from all men;"—or, independent of them for support.

24. "Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize?"—in this verse the word translated "race" is, in the original "stadium," or the course upon which foot races were run. The general form of the stadium is represented by the plan of the site of Sicyon, on the preceding page. The semicircular theatre, marked A, is the ordinary theatre of Greece. The oblong area, marked B, is the stadium. The stadium was originally meant for foot races, but it was used for other athletic contests. Seats for spectators were arranged along the sides and around the semicircular end of the stadium, which was generally about six hundred feet in length. The sides and end of the stadium were formed either of a natural or an artificial embankment of earth, upon which the seats were placed. The racers started from the point B, where a wall traversed the space, and they ran to a point or pillar at the semicircular end of the area. In simple races this was the goal; but in some races, the runners had to return to a pillar at the end from which they started. The first to reach the pillar agreed upon received the prize. Corinth was famous for the games celebrated upon the Isthmus hard by, and hence called the Isthmian games. Among these games those of the stadium, and the foot race in particular, supplied the Apostle with his illustrations. He assumed what every child among them was familiar with when he asked, "Know ye not that they who run in a stadium all run, but only one receives the prize?" If there was anything they knew it was this; and in their pagan experience they had doubtless often been animated to enthusiasm by references to their ancient and world-famous Isthmian games. St Paul then uses an illustration, than which none could be more striking and impressive to a Corinthian. Although the foot race is here meant, the other games are sometimes glanced at, as in verse 26; they were, boxing, wrestling,

5 But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness.[a]

6 Now these things were [1]our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.[b]

7 Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.[c]

8 Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand.[d]

9 Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents.[e]

10 Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer.[f]

11 Now all these things happened unto them for [2]ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come.[g]

12 Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.[h]

13 There hath no temptation taken you but such as is [3]common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.[i]

14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, flee from idolatry.[j]

15 I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.[k]

16 The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?[l]

17 For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread.[m]

18 Behold Israel after the flesh: are not they which eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?[n]

19 What say I then? that the idol is any thing, or that which is offered in sacrifice to idols is any thing?[o]

20 But I say, that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils.[p]

21 Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils.[q]

22 Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? are we stronger than he?[r]

23 All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not.[s]

24 Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth.[t]

25 Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, that eat, asking no question for conscience sake:[u]

26 For the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.[v]

27 If any of them that believe not bid you to a feast, and ye be disposed to go; whatsoever is set before you, eat, asking no question for conscience sake.[w]

28 But if any man say unto you, This is offered in sacrifice unto idols, eat not for his sake that shewed it, and for conscience sake: for the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof:[x]

29 Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the other: for why is my liberty judged of another man's conscience?

30 For if I by [4]grace be a partaker, why am I evil spoken of for that for which I give thanks?[z]

31 Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.[a]

32 Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the [5]Gentiles, nor to the church of God:[b]

33 Even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.[c]

CHAPTER XI.

1 He reproveth them, because in holy assemblies 4 their men prayed with their heads covered, and 6 women with their heads uncovered, 17 and because generally their meetings were not for the better but for the worse, as 21 namely in profaning with their own feasts the Lord's supper. 23 Lastly, he calleth them to the first institution thereof.

BE ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ.[d]

2 Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the [6]ordinances, as I delivered them to you.[e]

3 But I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God.[f] leaping, quoits, and others of a similar character. There were also contests of skill in music, poetry, &c. The remains of Sicyon, from which our engraving is taken, are remarkable, and are to be found at the modern Basilico, a few miles west of Corinth.

25. "A corruptible crown:"—in this verse the Apostle compares the unfading crown of the Christian with the fading crown of the victor in the Grecian games. Both Greeks and Romans were wont to confer a crown, a wreath, a chaplet, or a garland upon victors of all sorts. The conqueror of a besieged city wore, as the highest of military honours, a crown of grass, weeds, or wild flowers. A soldier who saved the life of a Roman citizen was decorated with the civic crown of oak leaves and acorns. A triumphant general wore upon his head a crown of laurel or bay leaves. Other warlike conquerors wore crowns of myrtle or of olive. Other crowns, again, were formed of ears of corn or other vegetable productions. At the Olympic games the victor received a crown of wild olive; at the Nemean games, a crown of parsley; at the Pythian games, a crown of laurel; and at the Isthmian games, a crown of pine leaves. To the last we may suppose St. Paul especially alludes. It was the trophy of the day, and soon perished; whereas the Christian victor receives a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

CHAPTER X.

As the Corinthians were in danger of abusing the doctrine of Christian liberty, the Apostle warns them of the danger, and strengthens his exhortation by the most striking examples derived from sacred history.

1—4. "I would not that ye should be ignorant:"—he had urged the duty of self-denial; that self-mortification was to be exercised when tempted to fornication and idolatry, lest those judgments should come upon them which befell the ancient fathers in the wilderness, and of which they could not be ignorant.

"Rock that followed them:"—a Divine power, ever present and ever active, accompanied the Israelites, and never ceased to do great things and marvellous in their behalf. It was the power of God their Saviour.

11. "The ends of the world:"—the ends of the ages; or, the final ages of the world's history.

16—21. "The cup of blessing:"—the reason why the Apostle here mentions the Lord's Supper, is to show, that as in the Christian communion we become partakers of all that is symbolised by the bread and the wine, so in uniting in idol-sacrifice and idol-worship we own our participation in all that such sacrifice and worship is meant to embody or express.

"They sacrifice to devils:"—the idolatry of the heathen is based on the worst principles—it is the outward embodiment of that which is inwardly bad; and as all evil has its source and consummation in the Evil One, to take part in any idolatrous service, while claiming the character of a Christian professor, is to sacrifice to devils, and not to God.

4 Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head.[a]

5 But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven.[b]

6 For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered.[c]

7 For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.[d]

8 For the man is not of the woman; but the woman of the man.[e]

9 Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man.[f]

10 For this cause ought the woman to have [1]power on her head because of the angels.[g]

11 Nevertheless neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord.[h]

12 For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; but all things of God.[i]

13 Judge in yourselves: is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?

15 But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a [2]covering.

16 But if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God.[j]

17 Now in this that I declare unto you I praise you not, that ye come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear that there be [3]divisions among you; and I partly believe it.[k]

30 For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

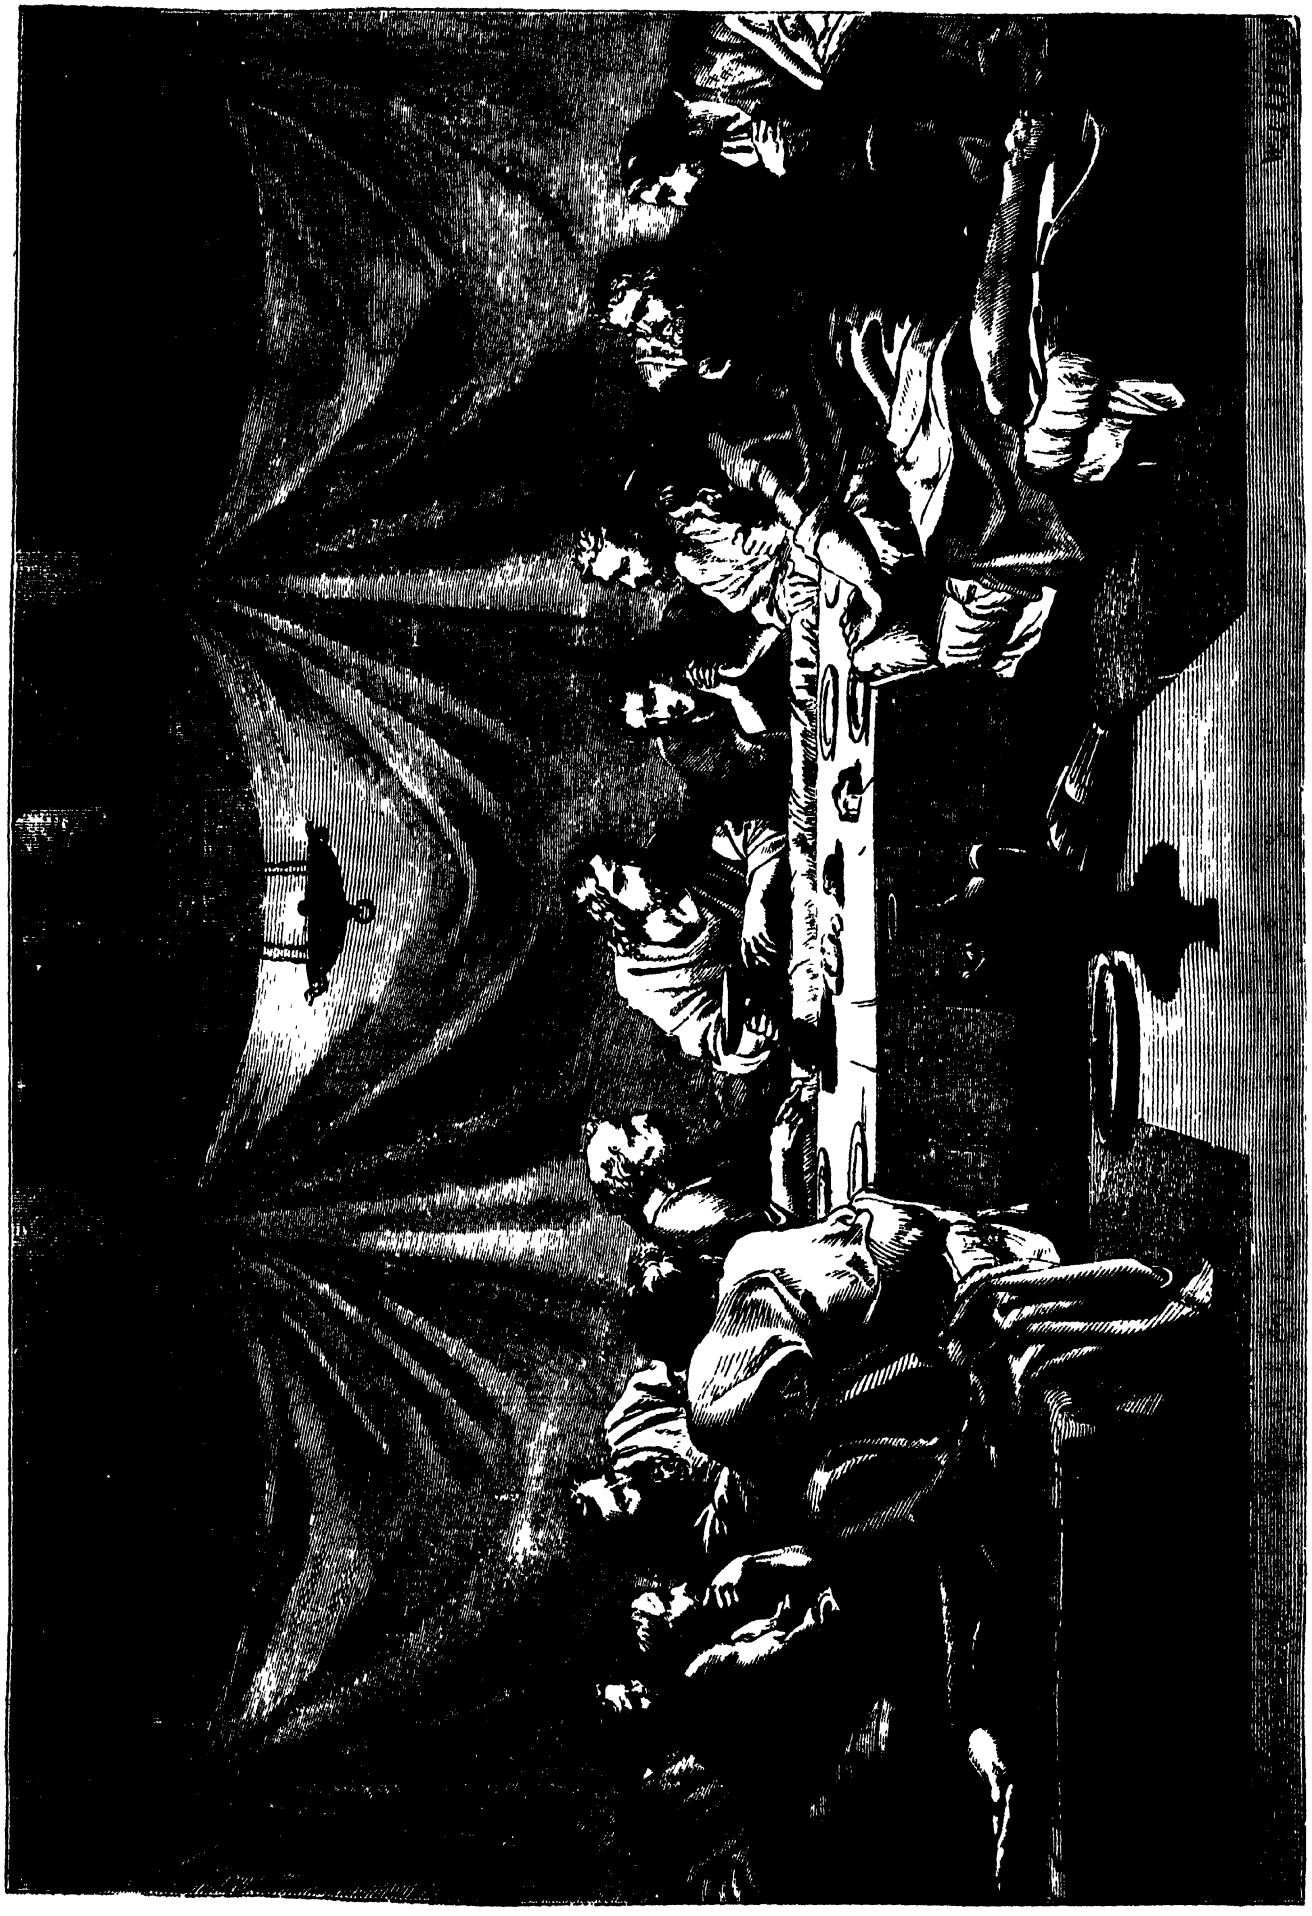
CHAPTER XI.

1. "Be ye followers."—this verse belongs to the preceding chapter; and as the Apostle's conduct was formed on the perfect pattern of the Saviour's life, so far as it corresponded with that pattern, he exhorts the Corinthians to follow him.

2. "Keep the ordinances."—the Apostolic maxims of faith and practice, delivered to them in common with other Christian communities for their guidance Still, certain disorders had arisen among them, which the Apostle now seeks to rectify and remove

3—16 "The head of every man is Christ."—in this section, in which the Apostle treats of the impropriety of women appearing in public unveiled, he founds his argument on the fact that the law of subordination reigns throughout the universe, from Christ himself, who in his mediatorial character was subject to the Father, down to the least and lowest form of existence. Now, just as the man is subordinate to Christ, the woman is subordinate to the man; and as it is right that the man should acknowledge his subjection by uncovering his head in holy service, so the woman should acknowledge her subjection by having on her head the token of a power above her. She is to be veiled, to denote her subordination, because of the angels, or in conformity with them. They stand veiled before the throne, and are therefore subordinate to Him who occupies that throne.

"Her head uncovered:"—the use of the veil by females was very extensive in ancient times, and indeed may be said to be so now. The peplum of the Greeks and Romans was properly a shawl, but it was often thrown over the head so as to cover it. These shawls were sometimes very elaborate and expensive, as we learn from the classic writers. In the East a veil is an essential part of female attire, and is therefore universally worn, not only abroad, but at home. The in-door veils are smaller and lighter than the others, which are so formed that the wearer can sometimes cover herself with it. It would be considered highly indecorous for an Oriental woman to appear unveiled. Both in ancient and in modern times there has been the greatest possible diversity in the shape, material, and mode of wearing the veil. It is still both a Jewish and a Christian custom for the woman to worship in public with her head covered.



ROMAN LADY WEARING THE PEPLUM.

19. "There must be also heresies:"—as the consequence of division; or, perhaps, even as the ground and cause of divisions; and thus the internal feuds more strongly brought into view their departure from truth, or their denial of the most vital principles.

26. "This bread," "shew the Lord's death:"—it is evident from these expressions that the institution of the Lord's Supper is figurative, and commemorative of Christ's death, and that what is eaten therein is still bread.

29. "Eateth and drinketh damnation;"—that is, whosoever approaches the Lord's table, and partakes of the elements without an enlightened and sanctified perception of what those elements represent and express, brings upon himself the condemnation and the judgment. They converted the Lord's Supper into an ordinary meal, and ate and drank to excess. Hence the punishment which fell upon them in bodily weakness, sickness, and even death.

31. "If we would judge;"—or rather, had we examined and dealt faithfully with ourselves, we should not have been guilty of so depreciating the Saviour's death, and should thus have escaped the penalty of our sin.

"THIS CUP IS THE NEW TESTAMENT IN MY BLOOD: THIS DO YE, AS OFT AS YE DRINK IT, IN REMEMBRANCE OF ME."—1 CORINTHIANS XI. 25.

32 But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.[a]

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

34 And if any man hunger, let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto [1]condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come.[b]

CHAPTER XII.

1 Spiritual gifts 4 are divers, 7 yet all to profit withal. 8 And to that end are diversely bestowed: 12 that by the like proportion, as the members of a natural body tend all to the 16 mutual decency, 22 service, and 26 succour of the same body; 27 so we should do one for another, to make up the mystical body of Christ.

NOW concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.[c]

2 Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led.[d]

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus [2]accursed: and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.[e]

4 Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.[f]

5 And there are differences of [3]administrations, but the same Lord.[g]

6 And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all.[h]

7 But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.[i]

8 For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit;[j]

9 To another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit;[k]

10 To another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues:[l]

11 But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.[m]

12 For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ.[n]

13 For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or [4]Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.[o]

14 For the body is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17 If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?

18 But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.[p]

19 And if they were all one member, where were the body?

20 But now are they many members, yet but one body.

21 And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you.

22 Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary:

23 And those members of the body, which we think to be less honourable, upon these we [5]bestow more abundant honour; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness.

24 For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that part which lacked:

25 That there should be no [6]schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another.

26 And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it.

CHAPTER XII.

This section, in which the Apostle treats of supernatural gifts and endowments, extends to the close of the fourteenth chapter; and as Olshausen says, "it is well calculated to convey a lively impression of the most remarkable times in the history of the world—of the period when the wings of the infant Church were gradually extending over mankind, and which was marked by the most important appearances ever revealed."

1. "Spiritual gifts:"—there is no reason for confining these gifts, as some do, to the power of speaking other languages. All supernatural endowments are included.

2. "Ye were Gentiles:"—as such, they had hitherto had no knowledge of spiritual realities, and therefore needed instruction as to the nature and use of the gifts which had been bestowed upon them.

3. "Speaking by the Spirit:"—the existence of the gifts bespoke the presence and active agency of the Spirit of God; and if they possessed that Spirit, the fact would reveal itself in their recognition and acknowledgment of Jesus Christ as the Saviour and Head of the Church. In their heathen state they had been wholly unconscious of inward life, and the life of which they were now conscious was to be traced to Christ as its source; and since the Spirit has come to glorify Christ, he in whom that Spirit dwells will not only not blaspheme that Saviour, but will, with joy and gladness, bow before him as the only Lord of all.

4. "Diversities of gifts:"—the gifts proceeded from one Spirit, but did not all meet or concentrate in one individual. As the one pure white beam of light is made up of many colours, and these colours are divided by the prism, so "the unity of the Spirit is refracted into various gifts." But while all gifts are in an especial manner the gifts of the Holy Ghost, who has come to complete the work of God in the Church, they are, from the unity of the Divine nature, the gifts equally of the Son and of the Father, and correspond equally with the Father or the Son.

8. "Word of wisdom—word of knowledge:"—the former of these points to the power of presenting to others the highest forms of Christian truth; and the latter expression to the profounder investigation of those truths, and the ability to discourse upon them.

10. "Divers kinds of tongues:"—the power of speaking in various languages; while the interpretation of these languages was reserved for some other member of the Church, and was bestowed as a separate gift.

13. "All baptized into one body:"—this does not refer to baptism by water, but to the baptism or communication of the Spirit, in which all the minor differences of country and condition are forgotten in the oneness of life and love possessed by all.

22. "Those members of the body:"—the Apostle continues the image of the human body, but the end which he has in view is different. He distinguishes the several members of the body—some as feeble, yet necessary; others as less honourable; others as more comely; yet all compacted into one; so that what affects one part affects the whole body. The Corinthians had formed a very wrong estimate of the gifts which God had bestowed upon them. The gift of tongues, or the power to speak different languages, for example, with all its brilliant effects, was placed above and before every other; while endowments less attractive, but, it may be, of more practical worth, were depreciated or despised. But the Church is one body, filled by one Spirit, of which the individual believers, with their various gifts, are the

27 Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular.[a]

28 And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, [1]diversities of tongues.[b]

29 Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all [2]workers of miracles?

30 Have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret?

31 But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way.[c]

CHAPTER XIII.

1 All gifts, 2, 3 how excellent soever, are nothing worth without charity. 4 The praises thereof, and 13 prelation before hope and faith.

THOUGH I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.[d]

3 And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.[e]

4 Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity [3]vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up,[f]

5 Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil;[g]

6 Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth [4]in the truth;[h]

7 Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.[i]

8 Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

9 For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.[j]

10 But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I [5]thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

12 For now we see through a glass, [6]darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.[k]

13 And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Prophecy is commended, 2, 3, 4 and preferred before speaking with tongues, 6 by a comparison drawn from musical instruments. 12 Both must be referred to edification, 22 as to their true and proper end. 26 The true use of each is taught, 27 and the abuse taxed. 34 Women are forbidden to speak in the church.

FOLLOW after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.[l]

2 For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God: for no man [7]understandeth him; howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries.[m]

3 But he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.

4 He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth edifieth the church.

5 I would that ye all spake with tongues, but rather that ye prophesied: for greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the church may receive edifying.

component parts; and therefore, whatever may be the gifts of the individual member—whether the greatest or the least—all should be employed for the common good.

28. "First apostles:"—the Apostles, as the immediate and specially endowed ambassadors of Christ, took the first place in the Christian Church; then came the prophets, who not only could predict future events, but who were favoured with immediate revelation, and under a special impulse of the Spirit so spake as at once to disclose the depths of the human heart and of the Divine counsels. Such an office was of the greatest importance in that early age. "It was the awakening power necessary to the extension of the infant Church." But as the Church became consolidated, teachers were required to build up the believers in faith and knowledge—to promote their spiritual life and perfection.

31. "Covet earnestly the best gifts:"—those gifts which would be of the greatest practical good to the whole Church. As Alford very justly remarks, "This exhortation is not inconsistent with the eleventh verse; but as we look for the Divine blessing on tillage and careful culture, so we may look for the aid of the Spirit on carefully cultivated powers of the understanding and of speech; and we may notice that the greater gifts—those of prophecy and teaching—consisted in the inspired exercise of the natural faculties, in which culture and diligence would be useful accessories."

"A more excellent way:"—this refers to what follows. And to prepare their minds for what he had yet to say on the subject of supernatural gifts, he directs their attention to the nature and action of love, as that which is to give direction and aim to all Christian efforts.

CHAPTER XIII.

This inimitable ode on Christian love, here styled "charity," as Olshausen says, is doubly beautiful in the mouth of the Apostle Paul. It is the spirit of John the Evangelist, whose theme is ever of love, while Paul may be regarded as the preacher of that faith which manifests itself in acts of love. This paragraph is an evidence of his new nature—in his old man Paul was quite unacquainted with the Divine source from which this holy principle rises. The most exalted exhibitions of natural love, such as that of the mother towards her infant, and the child's love towards its parent, are but weak reflections of the love to God through Christ Jesus, and the love to others for Christ's sake, which the consciousness of redemption awakens.

1. "Tongues of men and of angels;"—that is, every form and variety of articulate language known or spoken within the universe of God.

2. "All mysteries:"—the gift of prophecy included the revelation of what lay concealed in the counsels of God; and yet such knowledge was in itself infinitely inferior to the one principle of holy love.

3. "My body to be burned:"—not as a martyr for Christ, for that would imply his possession of this love, but to give his life for country or kindred.

4—7. "Charity suffereth long."—in these verses the Apostle describes the peculiar characteristics of this heavenly, divine love, as forbearing and beneficent; free from envy and jealousy; is seemly and attractive in demeanour; is self-denying in its spirit; withstands the force of provocation; imputes no evil; weeps over sin; rejoices in the triumph of truth, and is one with it; conceals rather than exposes what is not good; has no suspicion; hopes where it cannot fully believe; and patiently bears up under all adversity, wrong, and suffering.

8—10. "Charity never faileth:"—he places the permanent nature of love in contrast with the temporary character of all supernatural endowments. Their utmost knowledge was but limited. They knew but in part. There was no limit to love, and love could never pass away.

11. "I thought as a child;"—or rather, reasoned as a child. The feeling of the Corinthians, in referring to their supernatural gifts, corresponded with the desires of a child for the acquisition of some new object, which desire ceases to prevail in mature manhood.

12. "Through a glass, darkly;"—that is, in a mirror of polished brass, in which things are discerned but imperfectly. The world to come is one of perfect light and perfect revelation, where we shall know even as we are known.

13. "The greatest of these is charity:"—in itself—in its nature and influence—love is greater than either faith or hope, "because it contains

ANNO DOMINI 59.

6 Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?[a]

7 And even things without life giving sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction in the [1]sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?

9 So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words [2]easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air.

10 There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world, and none of them is without signification.

11 Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me.

12 Even so ye, forasmuch as ye are zealous [3]of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church.

13 Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.

14 For if I pray in an unknown tongue, my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is unfruitful.

15 What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also.[b]

16 Else when thou shalt bless with the spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?[c]

17 For thou verily givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 I thank my God, I speak with tongues more than ye all:

19 Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue.

20 Brethren, be not children in understanding: howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding [4]be men.[d]

21 In the law it is written, With men of other tongues and other lips will I speak unto this people; and yet for all that will they not hear me, saith the Lord.[e]

22 Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe.

23 If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad?[f]

24 But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all:

25 And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down on his face he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth.[g]

26 How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. Let all things be done unto edifying.[h]

27 If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret.

28 But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church; and let him speak to himself, and to God.

29 Let the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge.[i]

30 If any thing be revealed to another that sitteth by, let the first hold his peace.[j]

31 For ye may all prophesy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted.

32 And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.[k]

33 For God is not the author of [5]confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints.[l]

34 Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law.[m]

35 And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church.

within itself the other two: we believe only when we hope—we hope only for that which we love."

CHAPTER XIV.

The full heart of the Apostle having found utterance in the matchless ode on Christian love, he here resumes the subject of which he was treating at the close of the twelfth chapter; and reminds the Corinthians that among all the gifts which had been bestowed upon them, that of prophecy was to be preferred. The gift of tongues, which they most coveted, "might operate very beneficially; but as soon as it came to be over-estimated, it could not but be prejudicial to the peace and order of any community. It was precisely so in Corinth. Many had spoken at the same time, and thereby caused confusion without profit. They had despised other gifts less dazzling, in comparison with their gifts of tongues; and this, with other abuses, is now condemned by Paul," who places before them something more worthy of attainment, and more practically beneficial.

1 "Desire spiritual gifts;"—that is, in subordination to love, for love is permanent and abiding. Love is to be the supreme aim, and next to love the gift of prophecy, which included immediate revelation from God, and the power to make it known.

2. "In the spirit:"—what he says is a mystery, because expressed in a language which no one understands, or can interpret.

5. "I would that ye all spake with tongues:"—the Apostle depreciated no gift, but he differed from them in his relative estimate of the gifts.

14. "My spirit prayeth:"—he has within him all the feeling and enjoyment of devotion; but his mind—his understanding—is not informed, and therefore is unfruitful both to himself and to others.

15. "What is it then?"—this may mean, How then stands the case? Or, What should we prefer? Or, What is our purpose and determination—our aim and end? To have the mind informed, as well as the spirit moved and affected.

16. "When thou shalt bless with the spirit:"—the Apostle is speaking of the act of praise, or giving of thanks, as performed in a language unknown to those who hear; and therefore, in such a state of total ignorance of the language spoken, how could they add their Amen? The very statement of the case proves its impropriety.

19. "In an unknown tongue;"—that is, in a language unknown to those to whom he spoke.

20. "Be not children in understanding;"—which they had proved themselves to be, by their preference for a gift which was dazzling and imposing, but of little benefit comparatively in the Church, and which had given rise to envy, malice, and ill-will among them.

21. "With men of other tongues:"—or rather, in the person of men speaking other languages; yet this would not profit them.

24. "He is convinced of all:"—his mind being informed, conviction is produced, his heart is laid open, and judgment is, as it were, passed upon his whole life.

36 What? came the word of God out from you? or came it unto you only?

37 If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord.[a]

38 But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.

39 Wherefore, brethren, covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues.[b]

40 Let all things be done decently and in order.[c]

9 For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.[k]

10 But by the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.[l]

11 Therefore whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed.

12 Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?

13 But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen:[m]

14 And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

32. "The spirits of the prophets:"—their own spirit, though filled with the sublimest inspiration, is yet subject to their control; and therefore the prophets were unlike the claimants to a Divine influence so oft to be found among the heathens, who appeared to be bereft of reason while under the supposed influence of their deities.

33. "Out from you:"—the Gospel was communicated to them by the Apostle; and to his authority, as acting in the name and by the power of the glorified Saviour, they must yield in matters of discipline, that all things may be done "decently and in order."

CHAPTER XV.

The doctrine of incorruption had never been even conceived by the sages of antiquity, and it was held in ridicule by the philosophy of Greece. Her light had never pierced that realm, and her loftiest aspirations had never approached that sublime discovery. It is by the Gospel of Christ alone that life and incorruption are brought to light. Yet there were those in the Corinthian Church who denied the doctrine of the resurrection. Hence the present consummate argument of the Apostle, in which he asserts the doctrine as a great historical fact, and as the most essential part of the 15 Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not.[a]

16 For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised:

17 And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins.[b]

18 Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.

19 If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.[c]

20 But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept.[d]

21 For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.[e]

22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

23 But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming.[f]

24 Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power.[g]

25 For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet.[h]

26 The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.[i]

27 For he hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him.[j]

28 And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.[k]

29 Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?

30 And why stand we in jeopardy every hour?[l]

31 I protest by [1]your rejoicing which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily.[m]

32 If [2]after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to morrow we die.[n]

33 Be not deceived: evil communications corrupt good manners.[o]

34 Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame.[p]

35 But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?[q]

36 Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die:[r]

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain:

38 But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds.

40 There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.

41 There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory.

42 So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption:[s]

43 It is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power:[t]

44 It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.

45 And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit.[u]

46 Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual.

47 The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven.[v]

48 As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.[w]

49 And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.[x]

50 Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.[y]

Christian system. He shows that our resurrection rests upon the fact of Christ's resurrection, and that any doubt in reference to the one must affect our faith in the other. He then "illustrates the life after the resurrection, and the glorification of the material, by showing its analogy to a growing grain of corn, proving that in the resurrection the perishable body will become imperishable; that then death will be finally conquered, and everlasting life brought to light by this glorious transformation."

3—8. "How that Christ died:"—of the Gospel which he had preached to them the central fact was the death and resurrection of Christ; and of this fact the evidence, as he shows in these verses, was complete and incontrovertible.

"Born out of due time:"—the Apostle refers to his call to the apostleship. No one could be an apostle but by Christ's own appointment. The glorified Saviour, therefore, appeared in a vision to Saul when on his way to Damascus to persecute the infant Church, spoke to him, called him into his kingdom, and gave him his great commission; but all this was after Christ had left the world; and hence the Apostle appeared to himself like one born out of the ordinary course of things.

28. "The Son also himself be subject:"—Christ's mediatorial reign will then come to an end, as he will resign his empire into the hands of his Father, from whom he received it: not that the Father may reign alone any more than the Son; but that God (meaning thereby the Godhead, which comprehends the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit) may reign without the intervention of a Mediator.

29. "Baptized for the dead:"—the interpretation sometimes put upon these verses is, that new converts were baptised in the name of those who had died in Christ; but what connection this has with the Apostle's argument we are at a loss to perceive. He is combating the opinion that there is no resurrection; and he says, if there be no resurrection, then is Christ not raised; and if Christ be not raised, why are they baptised in the name of One who is still under the power of death? and why are they led to cherish a hope of a resurrection from the dead, when that hope is to end in annihilation?

32. "Fought with beasts at Ephesus:"—it does not follow from these words that St. Paul had actually fought with beasts at Ephesus. He probably designed to show that he had been exposed to much the same danger from men at Ephesus as if he had fought with wild beasts. Those who fought with each other were called gladiators by the Romans, and monomachi by the Greeks. The gladiators were either freemen, or captives, or slaves, or criminals. By some the combats were followed as a profession, and by others from compulsion. Those who fought with wild beasts were called bestiarii by the Romans, and theriomachi by the Greeks. Some of them fought for pay, and had weapons; but others were criminals, and went

51 Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed,[a]

52 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.[b]

53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.[c]

54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.[d]

55 O death, where is thy sting? O [1]grave, where is thy victory?[e]

56 The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law.[f]

57 But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.[g]

58 Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.[h]

2 Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.[j]

3 And when I come, whomsoever ye shall approve by your letters, them will I send to bring your [2]liberality unto Jerusalem.[k]

4 And if it be meet that I go also, they shall go with me.[l]

5 Now I will come unto you, when I shall pass through Macedonia: for I do pass through Macedonia.[m]

6 And it may be that I will abide, yea, and winter with you, that ye may bring me on my journey whithersoever I go.[n]

7 For I will not see you now by the way; but I trust to tarry a while with you, if the Lord permit.[o]

8 But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost.

9 For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries.[p]

10 Now if Timotheus come, see that he may be with you without fear: for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do.[q]

11 Let no man therefore despise him: but conduct him forth in peace, that he may come unto me: for I look for him with the brethren.[r]

12 As touching our brother Apollos, I greatly desired him to come unto you with the brethren: but his will was not at all to come at this time; but he will come when he shall have convenient time.[s]

13 Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.[t]

14 Let all your things be done with charity.[u]

15 I beseech you, brethren, (ye know the house of Stephanas, that it is the firstfruits of Achaia, and that they have addicted themselves to the ministry of the saints,)[v]

16 That ye submit yourselves unto such, and to every one that helpeth with us, and laboureth.[w]

17 I am glad of the coming of Stephanas and Fortunatus and Achaicus: for that which was lacking on your part they have supplied.[x]

18 For they have refreshed my spirit and your's: therefore acknowledge ye them that are such.[y]

19 The churches of Asia salute you. Aquila and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord, with the church that is in their house.[z]

20 All the brethren greet you. Greet ye one another with an holy kiss.[a]

21 The salutation of me Paul with mine own hand.[b]

22 If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema Maran-atha.[c]

23 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.[d]

24 My love be with you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

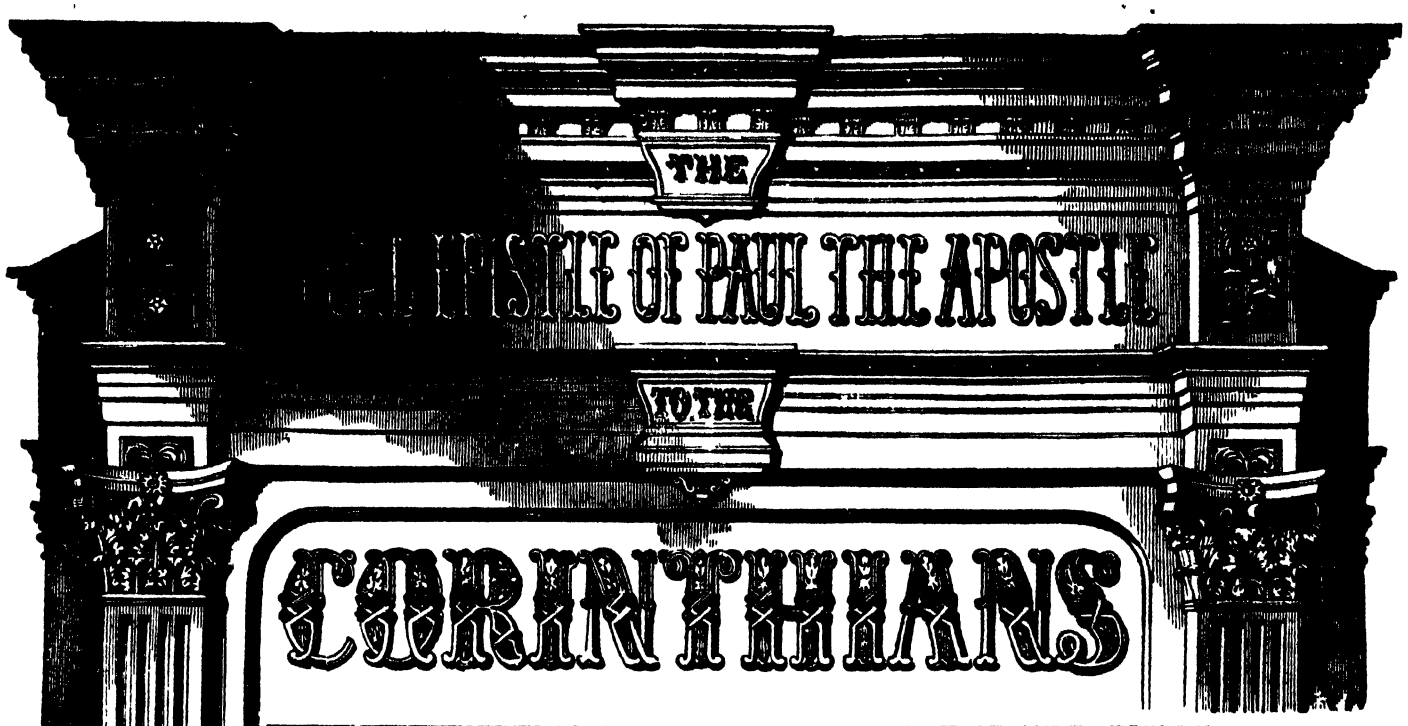
into the combat unarmed. Those who fought with beasts were not called gladiators. There were schools at Rome in which such persons were trained. These contests with wild beasts became a popular mode of punishment where the sentence was death, and many instances are recorded in the early history of the Church where persons have been condemned for their faith in Christ, and have been turned into an amphitheatre, to have infuriated lions and other wild beasts let loose upon them. In this way numbers were called upon to suffer martyrdom. Several representations of professional fighting with wild beasts are preserved in ancient paintings and sculptures. Of these we have introduced an example for the illustration of the text. There were cases in which the wild beasts were set to fight and tear each other.

45. "A living soul . . . a quickening spirit:"—the first man had life given to him; the Second Man, the Lord from heaven, communicates life from himself. He not only quickens the soul, which is dead in trespasses and sins into pure and spiritual life, but [illegible] is to quicken the body into incorruptible life, and thus swallow up death in victory.

54–57. "Death is swallowed up in victory:"—death triumphs over life, but hereafter life shall triumph over death; nor is this the Christian's only victory, for it is sin which gives terror to death; but if sin is lamented and forsaken, and pardon sought—in penitence, in prayer, and with faith in Christ, through the aid of God's Holy Spirit—then Death, even in his hour of triumph, has lost his sting, for he has conquered only to be reconquered.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Apostle having drawn, from his profound and conclusive argument in favour of the resurrection of the dead, an incentive to steadfastness and perseverance in the work of the Lord, there now follows, most appropriately, a call to Christian liberality on behalf of suffering and afflicted brethren. Paul was a man of deep sympathies and solicitudes, and he loved large-heartedness in others. He who preserved to the Church those bright and beautiful words of Jesus, "IT IS MORE BLESSED TO GIVE THAN TO RECEIVE," knew the blessedness of generous deeds.



2. "The first day of the week:"—a clear proof that it was the practice of the Apostolic Churches to keep holy the day of our Lord's resurrection.

3. "By your letters:"—letters addressed to the Church at Jerusalem.

5. "When I shall pass through Macedonia:"—from 2 Cor. i. 15, 16 we learn that his original intention was to pass through them to Macedonia, and again return to them from Macedonia, and thence to Judea; but he changed his plan.

8. "Tarry at Ephesus:"—it is the opinion of eminent divines that it was from Ephesus Paul wrote his Epistle to them. We may observe, for the guidance of our readers, that the postscripts make no part of the apostolic writings.

11. "Let no man therefore despise him:"—let no man undervalue him, or his message, on account of his youth. Timothy seems to have preceded Paul in the journey to Macedonia.

CHAPTER I.

3 The apostle encourageth them against troubles, by the comforts and deliverances which God had given him, as in all his afflictions, 8 so particularly in his late danger in Asia. 12 And calling both his own conscience and their's to witness of his sincere manner of preaching the immutable truth of the gospel, 15 he excuseth his not coming to them, as proceeding not of lightness, but of his tenity towards them.

CHAPTER I.

This Second Epistle bears upon it evidence of having proceeded from the same pen as the preceding, and is designed as a sequel to the former Epistle. It was written from some city in Macedonia; the subscription at the end says Philippi, others say Thessalonica, late in the year 57. In Macedonia the Apostle met Titus, who reported to him the effect produced on the Corinthians by his first Epistle, which, upon the whole, had been favourable, and therefore a source of great comfort to him. Still, there were those who were using every means to undermine his authority. Hence he mingles rebuke with consolation, and severity with gentleness.

1. "And Timothy our brother:"—in the first Epistle (xvi. 10, 11) we find directions given to the Corinthians to receive Timothy kindly and heartily, in the event of his arrival at Corinth. The probability is that he had been to Corinth, though he was now with Paul in Macedonia.

4. "In all our tribulation:"—the reference is, no doubt, to his manifold sufferings in the prosecution of his arduous labours, and of which we have a detailed account in the eleventh chapter of this Epistle. In the midst of these sufferings there was vouchsafed to him special consolation, that while he sympathised with the tried and the sorrowful, he might also be able to comfort them in their tribulation.

5. "The sufferings of Christ:"—the sufferings endured for his sake, and in the doing of his work. The sufferings of Christ thus repeat themselves in the believer.

6. "Effectual in the enduring of the same sufferings:"—the grace bestowed on them, in common with the Apostle, supplied a power which made them equal to the endurance of any amount of suffering which God in his wisdom might see fit to appoint or to permit.

8. "Trouble which came to us in Asia:"—some conceive that the Apostle what ye read or acknowledge; and I trust ye shall acknowledge even to the end;

14 As also ye have acknowledged us in part, that we are your rejoicing, even as ye also are our's in the day of the Lord Jesus.[a]

15 And in this confidence I was minded to come unto you before, that ye might have a second [1]benefit;[b]

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, and to come again out of Macedonia unto you, and of you to be brought on my way toward Judæa.[c]

17 When I therefore was thus minded, did I use lightness? or the things that I purpose, do I purpose according to the flesh, that with me there should be yea yea, and nay nay?[d]

18 But as God is true, our [2]word toward you was not yea and nay.

19 For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me and Silvanus and Timotheus, was not yea and nay, but in him was yea.[e]

20 For all the promises of God in him are yea, and in him Amen, unto the glory of God by us.[f]

here refers to that extreme danger into which he was brought by the tumult at Ephesus (Acts xix.); but others are of opinion that he is speaking of some grievous sickness accompanied by great mental anxiety, and in which he despaired even of life.

9. "Had the sentence of death in ourselves:"—his recovery was hopeless, he gave up all idea of renewed vigour. He may have been given up by others, and was thus virtually dead. Still, this did not diminish his faith in God, in whose hands he left the solemn issue.

11. "Ye also helping together:"—this verse, as it stands in our English version, is extremely obscure. Various translations of the words have been attempted; but that of De Wette seems to us entitled to the preference, and is to this effect:—"Ye also helping together by prayer for us, in order that the mercy shown to us, in answer to the intercession of many persons, may be gratefully acknowledged by the thanks of many on our behalf." We see here how human means are connected with Divine interposition and aid.

12. "Not with fleshly wisdom;"—that is, wisdom proceeding from unsanctified human nature, and which, left to its own impulses, is liable to change and prone to error.

13—18. "We write none other things:"—he had been charged with fickleness, because he had changed his mind as to his visit to Corinth; but he asserts that not only was he wholly free from this charge, but in his own writings his character stood out in the light of truth and sincerity. He could appeal to the past in his life and history, and he hoped to remain the same to the end.

19—22. "For the Son of God:"—his belief in an unchanging Saviour, and his preaching an immutable truth, were wholly inconsistent, if, in his dealing

1 Having shewed the reason why he came not to them, 6 he requireth them to forgive and to comfort that excommunicated person, 10 even as himself also upon his true repentance had forgiven him, 12 declaring withal why he departed from Troas to Macedonia, 14 and the happy success which God gave to his preaching in all places.

BUT I determined this with myself, that I would not come again to you in heaviness.[e]

2 For if I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad, but the same which is made sorry by me?

3 And I wrote this same unto you, lest, when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice; having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.[f]

4 For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears; not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.[g]

5 But if any have caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part: that I may not overcharge you all.[h]

6 Sufficient to such a man is this [1]punishment, which was inflicted of many.[i]

7 So that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.[j]

8 Wherefore I beseech you that ye would confirm your love toward him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things.[k]

11 Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 Furthermore, when I came to Troas to preach Christ's gospel, and a door was opened unto me of the Lord,[l]

13 I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother: but taking my leave of them, I went from thence into Macedonia.[m]

14 Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place.[n]

15 For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish:[o]

16 To the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?[p]

17 For we are not as many, which [3]corrupt the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we [4]in Christ.[q]

CHAPTER III.

1 Lest their false teachers should charge him with vainglory, he sheweth the faith and graces of the Corinthians to be a sufficient commendation of his ministry. 6 Whereupon entering a comparison between the ministers of the law and of the gospel, 12 he proveth that his ministry is so far the more excellent, as the gospel of life and liberty is more glorious than the law of condemnation.

DO we begin again to commend ourselves? or need we, as some others, epistles of commendation to you, or letters of commendation from you?[r]

2 Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men:[s]

3 Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart.[t]

4 And such trust have we through Christ to Godward:

with men on the most solemn questions, he could be justly accused of fickleness and change. Happily, his ministry could be charged with no such inconsistency; and he felt that his life and character were equally free from censure.

"Yea . . . and Amen:"—are faithfulness and truth. In Christ all the promises receive their ratification and fulfilment.

"The earnest of the Spirit:"—an earnest is a portion given as a guarantee that in due time the transaction to which it refers shall be completed in like manner; the Spirit, dwelling within us, is given as an earnest of final salvation.

23. "To spare you I came not:"—the change in the plan of his journey was not the effect of fickleness, but sprung out of love to them. He was desirous of giving them more time for reflection, and to change their course of procedure.

24. "By faith ye stand:"—their communion with God depended on their faith; and with that faith not even an Apostle dare to interfere.

CHAPTER II.

First, for the sake of the Church itself, the Apostle had deferred his visit to Corinth; now he tells them that he did so on his own account also, that he might not add to his own present sorrow, and the sorrow of others, by appearing among them only to reprove and correct them.

2. "If I make you sorry:"—in allusion to the immoral person, who, by command of the Apostle, had been excommunicated, and who had been brought to repentance and reformation—a fact which gave joy to the Apostle.

4. "I wrote unto you with many tears:"—it is clear from these words that the subject of his writing was not the postponement of his journey, for that would not cause him many tears; nor yet the unfounded charge of fickleness; but the internal feuds and divisions, impurities and indecorum of the Church, made him weep, and caused him to write his former letter in deep affliction.

6 "Sufficient . . . is this punishment:"—it had produced penitence. The excommunication (see 1 Cor. v. 9—13) had produced repentance, and the end was thus secured. The man was no longer to be treated as an offender, but to be forgiven and received back as a penitent.

10, 11. "In the person of Christ:"—they were not to be slow in forgiving the offender, for he forgave him, as one who was acting in the name of Christ, and on his behalf. Should they refuse to take the offender back when truly penitent, it might lead him to despair, and thus Satan would gain an advantage over him, if, from despair, the unhappy individual fell again into sin.

13. "I had no rest in my spirit:"—at Troas he expected to meet with Titus, and to learn from him the actual state of things at Corinth. Disquieted in spirit, he hastened on to Macedonia, so eager was he to receive intelligence, and there he found this evangelist, who reported well of the Corinthian Church.

14—16. "Thanks be unto God:"—he compares his success in preaching the Gospel to a Roman triumph held in honour of a victorious general. As the procession moved along, the air was filled with various kinds of incense, which, though refreshing and acceptable to those who were the friends of the conqueror, could only be regarded as the forerunners of death to those persons in the procession who were numbered among his foes. At the close of a

5 Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think any thing as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God;[a]

6 Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit [1]giveth life.[b]

7 But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away:[c]

8 How shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious?[d]

9 For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.[e]

10 For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth.

11 For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious.

12 Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great [2]plainness of speech:[f]

13 And not as Moses, which put a vail over his face, that the children of Israel could not stedfastly look to the end of that which is abolished:[g]

14 But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same vail untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which vail is done away in Christ.[h]

15 But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the vail is upon their heart.

16 Nevertheless when it shall turn to the Lord, the vail shall be taken away.[i]

17 Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.[j]

18 But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as [3]by the Spirit of the Lord.[k]

CHAPTER IV.

1 He declareth how he hath used all sincerity and faithful diligence in preaching the gospel, 7 and how the troubles and persecutions which he daily endured for the same did redound to the praise of God's power, 12 to the benefit of the church, 16 and to the apostle's own eternal glory.

THEREFORE seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not;[l]

2 But have renounced the hidden things of [4]dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.[m]

3 But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost:[n]

4 In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them.[o]

5 For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake.[p]

6 For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, [5]hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.[q]

7 But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.[r]

8 We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but [6]not in despair;[s]

9 Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed;[t]

10 Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body.[u]

11 For we which live are alway delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.[v]

Roman triumph the friends were honoured, and the captives who were condemned suffered death. So the Gospel must result either in the life or in the death of those to whom it is proclaimed.

The last clause of the sixteenth verse should be connected with the seventeenth, thus:—"And who is sufficient for these things? for we are not as many, which corrupt the word of God."

CHAPTER III.

The reference at the close of the preceding chapter to the success of the Gospel leads the Apostle to expatiate more on the office of the Christian ministry, as one of unparalleled dignity and glory in itself and in its results. The parallel which he draws between the ministration of the old covenant and that of the new economy—between the letter and the spirit—is striking and impressive.

1. "Commend ourselves:"—it is not improbable that some of the Judaising teachers had come to them with letters of commendation from others, and had obtained letters of commendation from the Corinthians in return. The Apostle asked for no such credentials. He appealed to the fruits of his ministry, in hearts renewed unto holiness, as his highest and most incontrovertible credentials; and these were seen and could be read of all men.

4. "Such trust;"—that is, such is the confidence which we possess in the fruit of our labours, that we appeal to it, not in the way of vain and empty boast, but as revealing the power of God vouchsafed to us through Christ, and insuring the great end of the Saviour's mediation.

6. "The letter killeth:"—the literal command and the design and spirit of the command are placed in opposition—the law and the Gospel are contrasted. The law, as the letter, brings the knowledge of sin; but the law, knowing of no provision for the pardon of sin, condemns the transgressor to death: the Gospel, through which the Holy Spirit acts, reveals forgiveness and eternal life.

10, 11. "Had no glory:"—just as a whole firmament of stars disappears amid the effulgence of the sun, so the Gospel eclipses the law. The glory connected with the law melts away amid the glories of a brighter dispensation.

13. "Look to the end:"—not surely the mere fading away of that refulgence from the face of Moses, on which they were unable to gaze; but the termination of that whole economy of which Moses was the earthly head and representative.

18. "Open face;"—or, with faces unveiled look into the Gospel as into a mirror, and are changed into the image of the Holy Spirit.

CHAPTER IV.

The Apostle now speaks of himself officially, as one to whom had been entrusted this ministration of the Gospel, and he proceeds to prove that the trials and struggles of his earthly life are subsidiary to the great end of perfecting himself and the Church.

1. "As we have received mercy:"—his ministry was the ministration of life, and the day on which he was called to that ministry was the day in which he became the conscious subject of Divine grace. The same mercy which called him at first had sustained him in the prosecution of his work.

3. "To them that are lost;"—or, to them that are perishing, because they will not accept of proffered grace and life.

4. "The image of God:"—implying not only that he was like God, but partaker of the same nature, and therefore one with God.—See John i. 1—3; Philipp. ii. 6—8; Heb. i. 3.

7. "In earthen vessels:"—the Gospel is entrusted for its propagation to men encompassed with like passions as those to whom they preach, and therefore the power that produces conviction in the minds of them that hear and receive the truth is not of man, but is of God, that the glory of the triumph over sin may redound to God alone, and to him for ever.

8—12. In these verses the Apostle describes his bodily weakness, and the grace and power of God, which shone the more conspicuously in consequence of the depth of his sorrows and the greatness of his necessities.

12 So then death worketh in us, but life in you.[a]

13 We having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak;[b]

14 Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you.[c]

15 For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God.[d]

16 For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day.[e]

17 For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory;[f]

18 While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.[g]

CHAPTER V.

1 That in his assured hope of immortal glory, 9 and in expectance of it, and of the general judgment, he laboureth to keep a good conscience, 12 not that he may herein boast of himself, 14 but as one that, having received life from Christ, endeavoureth to live as a new creature to Christ only, 18 and by his ministry of reconciliation to reconcile others also in Christ to God.

FOR we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.[h]

2 For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven:[i]

3 If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked.[j]

4 For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.[k]

5 Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit.[l]

6 Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord:

7 (For we walk by faith, not by sight:)[m]

8 We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.[n]

9 Wherefore we [1]labour, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him.

10 For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.[o]

11 Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men; but we are made manifest unto God; and I trust also are made manifest in your consciences.[p]

12 For we commend not ourselves again unto you, but give you occasion to glory on our behalf, that ye may have somewhat to answer them which glory [2]in appearance, and not in heart.[q]

13 For whether we be beside ourselves, it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for your cause.[r]

14 For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead:[s]

15 And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.[t]

16 Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh: yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.[u]

17 Therefore if any man be in Christ, [3]he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.[v]

18 And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation;[w]

19 To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath [4]committed unto us the word of reconciliation.[x]

20 Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.[y]

In the phrase "not in despair" the reference is to the fact of being overcome in the course or the race, so as to be left behind; while the words "cast down" point to the act of wrestling, and to the perils of the conflict.

"The dying of the Lord Jesus" is a phrase best explained by the Apostle himself in the following verse, where he says we "are alway delivered unto death for Jesus' sake." Christ's abode on earth was a continual dying, his life was always in jeopardy; and though he is no longer here, and can no longer suffer in his own person, his followers suffer in his cause and on his behalf. Thus the Apostle carried about with him the dying of the Lord Jesus—he was daily dying in his service; but the life of Jesus, the same matchless power which revealed itself in his life, was made manifest in Paul's weak and mortal nature. Nay, more; the life which flows from the risen, living, glorified Head of the Church was daily communicated to him in his conflicts and his sorrows, while the ultimate end of all was the everlasting life of those among whom the Apostle laboured, and for whom he suffered.

15. "The abundant grace:"—all that he was called either to do or to suffer was for their final good, nor did he otherwise than rejoice; for in answer to the intercession of many, there had been bestowed upon him the most abundant grace; this abundance of grace, revealed in his life and ministry, could not but call forth the more abundant thanksgiving, and thus the grace granted and the praise rendered would both redound to the glory of God.

CHAPTER V.

1. "For we know:"—this fifth chapter is but a continuation of the sublime subject of the preceding verses.

The contrast in this verse is not, we think, between the body and heaven, as some commentators have considered; but between the body as an earthly house—a tent pitched on earth for a temporary dwelling—and that spiritual, incorruptible body with which the soul is invested on the resurrection morn, and which is eternal, not temporary; not destined for earth, but to abide in heaven.

4. "Not for that we would be unclothed:"—the Apostle in no respect recognises the idea of a purely spiritual existence in eternity separated from the body. Hence he shrinks from the very thought of being divested of the body, or, as he himself terms it, of being "unclothed;" but exults in the idea of the redeemed spirit being arrayed in its glorified body.

5. "The earnest of the Spirit;"—or, the Spirit as an earnest of future life and glory. The glorification of the body, as the perfection of man, is the one idea specially present in the mind of the Apostle.

10. "That every one may receive:"—the words following may be read thus:—"in the body, according to the things that he hath done, whether they be good or bad;" that is, we shall be rewarded or punished in the body, as we have here upon earth, when in the body, done [illegible] or evil.

11—14. "We persuade men:"—he had [illegible] accused of deceit and treachery, but his solicitude on their behalf was the best refutation of that unfounded charge. The Apostle consoles himself with the consciousness that his sincerity was known unto God, the Searcher of the heart.

16. "After the flesh:"—just as he no longer recognised or spoke of Christ otherwise than as the living and glorified Saviour, so he looked upon them not otherwise than as new creatures, born again, and raised up together with

MACEDONIAN CHRISTIANS PRESSING THEIR GIFTS ON PAUL.—II. COR. VIII. 1—4.

21 For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.[a]

CHAPTER VI.

1 That he hath approved himself a faithful minister of Christ, both by his exhortations, 3 and by integrity of life, 4 and by patient enduring all kinds of affliction and disgraces for the gospel. 10 Of which he speaketh the more boldly amongst them, because his heart is open to them, 13 and he expecteth the like affection from them again, 14 exhorting to flee the society and pollutions of idolaters, as being themselves temples of the living God.

3 Giving no offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed:[d]

4 But in all things [1]approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses,[e]

5 In stripes, in imprisonments, [2]in tumults, in labours, in watchings, in fastings;[f]

6 By pureness, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned,

7 By the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armour of righteousness on the right hand and on the left,[g]

8 By honour and dishonour, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true;

9 As unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed;[h]

10 As sorrowful, yet alway rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things.

Christ; and therefore he had no occasion to employ any worldly considerations in his intercourse with them, as the false teachers were in the habit of doing.

18. "All things are of God:"—the change of heart that takes place in the redeemed, and which translates them from the bondage of Satan to the service of God, is the work of God the Holy Ghost, and the Gospel itself is God's revelation of mercy to fallen man, offered to men as penitent through faith in Christ Jesus, and is the effect of the love of God; and by this Divine plan of showing mercy, the love of God can without injury to the truth and justice of God, be extended to transgressors, bringing them to the enjoyment of heavenly blessings.

CHAPTER VI.

1. "Workers together with him:"—the words "with him" are not in the original.

"The grace of God in vain:"—he takes for granted that they have been reconciled to God, and made partakers of the heavenly calling, and therefore beseeches them so to live and act as to answer the great end of their redemption.

11 O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, our heart is enlarged.[a]

12 Ye are not straitened in us, but ye are straitened in your own bowels.[b]

13 Now for a recompence in the same, (I speak as unto my children,) be ye also enlarged.[c]

14 Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?[d]

15 And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?

16 And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.[e]

17 Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you,[f]

18 And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.[g]

CHAPTER VII.

1 He proceedeth in exhorting them to purity of life, 2 and to bear him like affection as he doth to them. 3 Whereof lest he might seem to doubt, he declareth what comfort he took in his afflictions, by the report which Titus gave of their godly sorrow, which his former epistle had wrought in them, 13 and of their lovingkindness and obedience towards Titus, answerable to his former boastings of them.

HAVING therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.[h]

2 Receive us; we have wronged no man, we have corrupted no man, we have defrauded no man.[i]

3 I speak not this to condemn you: for I have said before, that ye are in our hearts to die and live with you.[j]

4 Great is my boldness of speech toward you, great is my glorying of you: I am filled with comfort, I am exceeding joyful in all our tribulation.[k]

5 For, when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears.[l]

6 Nevertheless God, that comforteth those that are cast down, comforted us by the coming of Titus;[m]

7 And not by his coming only, but by the consolation wherewith he was comforted in you, when he told us your earnest desire, your mourning, your fervent mind toward me; so that I rejoiced the more.

8 For though I made you sorry with a letter, I do not repent, though I did repent: for I perceive that the same epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but for a season.[n]

9 Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry [1]after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.

10 For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death.[o]

11 For behold this selfsame thing, that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of yourselves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement desire, yea, what zeal, yea, what revenge! In all things ye have approved yourselves to be clear in this matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong, nor for his cause that suffered wrong, but that our care for you in the sight of God might appear unto you.[p]

13 Therefore we were comforted in your comfort: yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we for the joy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed by you all.[q]

14 For if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I am not ashamed; but as we spake all things to you in truth, even so our boasting, which[s] I made before Titus, is found a truth.

15 And his [2]inward affection is more abundant toward you, whilst he remembereth the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling ye received him.[r]

16 I rejoice therefore that I have confidence in you in all things.[s]

2 "For he saith:"—this is a quotation from Isa. xlix. 8, which points forward to the advent of the Messiah, and the fulness of blessings to be enjoyed in the new and everlasting dispensation of grace. It follows that "the accepted time" and "the day of salvation" are to be limited only by the period which God may please to appoint for the cessation of the Gospel message.

3. "Giving no offence:"—their life was to correspond with the morality inculcated by the Gospel of Christ, that they who profess to be the servants of Christ may by their life and conduct give offence to no one, and that the ministry be not blamed.

6. "By the Holy Ghost;"—or, by the ability and patience imparted to him by the Spirit of God.

8. "As deceivers:"—the Apostle places the assertion of his antagonists in contrast with his own true character Like a man clothed in armour, he presses forward triumphantly, regardless of the efforts to assail him.

13. "Now for a recompence in the same;"—that is, "return my affection; let your heart glow with love to me, even as my heart is animated with affection to you. I speak as unto my spiritual children."

CHAPTER VII.

1. "Having therefore these promises"—this verse belongs to the preceding chapter, connecting itself with the most precious promises of God, and on these promises founding an argument for the progressive sanctification of all believers.

2. "Receive us:"—his opponents had charged him with wronging, corrupting, and defrauding the Church, and there were those in the Church who were disposed to believe the charge, and therefore to dispute his authority. But turning to the better affected portion of the community, he says, "Receive us"—believe in the integrity of our character, and act like men who so believe.

5. "Without were fightings:"—he refers to his manifold trials and conflicts in Macedonia; in addition to which he was filled with apprehension and fear as to the effect of his first letter on the minds of the Corinthians, till the intelligence brought by Titus set his mind at rest.

8, 9. "Though I did repent:"—his love towards them led him to regret the letter which a sense of duty had constrained him to write, but now he rejoiced truly over the sorrow which his letter had produced in their minds; not that the sorrow itself was any source of satisfaction to him, but the repentance which it implied as well as expressed—"the godly sorrow which he had been instrumental in producing, had proved to them of the nature of a blessing."

10. "Worketh death"—how true is it that the sorrow of the world, which only deplores sin on account of its painful consequences, has no spirituality in it! Nay, it rather destroys any rising desires which may exist, either by leading to erroneous notions respecting the value of this worthless repentance, or by driving the sinner into a state of despair.

11. "What carefulness it wrought:"—his letter had aroused the whole Church from its lethargy, and led them to take that line of action towards the offending members of the Church which not only redeemed their own characters from inconsistency, but so affected their erring brother as to issue in his repentance and restoration.

14. "Is found a truth:"—Titus had found everything confirmed which

CHAPTER VIII.

He stirreth them up to a liberal contribution for the poor saints at Jerusalem, by the example of the Macedonians, 7 by commendation of their former forwardness, 9 by the example of Christ, 14 and by the spiritual profit that shall redound to themselves thereby: 16 commending to them the integrity and willingness of Titus, and those other brethren, who upon his request, exhortation, and commandation, were purposely come to them for this business.

MOREOVER, brethren, we do you to wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia;

2 How that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their [1]liberality.[a]

3 For to their power, I bear record, yea, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves;

4 Praying us with much intreaty that we would receive the gift, and take upon us the fellowship of the ministering to the saints.[b]

5 And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God.

6 Insomuch that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same [2]grace also.[c]

7 Therefore, as ye abound in every thing, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also.[d]

8 I speak not by commandment, but by occasion of the forwardness of others, and to prove the sincerity of your love.[e]

9 For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.[f]

10 And herein I give my advice: for this is expedient for you, who have begun before, not only to do, but also to be [3]forward a year ago.[g]

the Apostle had told him concerning these Corinthian believers, and this fact could not fail to increase the joy of the Apostle as their first teacher, and the founder of the Corinthian Church.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Apostle here, resuming the subject which he introduced in 1 Cor. xvi. 1, relative to the collection on behalf of the suffering brethren in Jerusalem, exhorts to liberality; and to secure himself against the calumnies of his adversaries, recommends that their contribution should be intrusted to certain persons chosen from among themselves, who might be the bearers of it to the parent Church.

1—3. "We do you to wit;"—that is, we would have you know. "The grace of God" refers to that liberality which the Macedonian Christians, under the impulse of God's grace, had exhibited in their peculiar sufferings and deep poverty, in entreating the Apostle to accept at their hands a contribution far beyond their means.

4. "Take upon us the fellowship:"—to take part with them in the distribution of their bounty, so as to identify himself with both the gift and the givers. They not only intrusted him with their contribution, but asked him to dispense it as a proof of their sympathy and fellowship with their suffering brethren.

5. "First gave their own selves:"—in the benevolent actions of these pious persons we have exhibited for our own imitation the charity which is acceptable unto God. They first gave themselves to God, to be his servants and to obey his will; they then gave up a portion of their property for the support of those in need; thus, the gift was well pleasing unto God, because of the spirit of the givers. That our liberality may benefit alike the receiver and the donor, we must first yield up ourselves to Christ and to his service.

8, 9. "I speak not by commandment:"—he did not dictate to the Corinthians; but, to test the sincerity of their love, he puts them to the proof. The Macedonians were beforehand, and even anticipated the Apostle with their gifts, and Paul wishes to know whether the Corinthians were equally forward; and that he might bring the mightiest and the holiest influences to bear upon them, he reminds them of the grace, the boundless compassion and love of Christ, in emptying himself of his glory to enrich them with the blessings of eternal life and salvation.

10. "To be forward a year ago;"—that is, they began a year ago to lay by or store up, according to the instructions given in 1 Cor. xvi. 1, 2.

18. "The brother:"—his name is not given, but some have fixed on Luke, the companion of Paul, as the person here intended.

19. "Declaration of your ready mind:"—Paul administered their gift, first with a view to God's glory, and then as the evidence or proof of their willingness to succour and help their afflicted brethren.

CHAPTER IX.

This chapter is connected with the preceding, and in it the Apostle returns to the subject of the collection, intimating, in the most delicate manner, that it was not needful for him to write more upon that point, and therefore he throws himself upon their confidence and generous conduct.

2. "Your zeal:"—they had taken up this matter with such heart and purpose, that he could hold them up even to Macedonia as an example, just as he held up Macedonia to them for their pattern. Hence their zeal and effort had provoked many to follow in their steps.

5. "As a matter of bounty:"—as something proceeding from a loving and benevolent spirit, unalloyed by anything approaching to that covetousness which is ever eager to possess and retain, but which knows nothing of the blessedness of giving.

7. "Not grudgingly, or of necessity:"—this refers to the spirit and temper of the giver. Unless we give in a Christian spirit, and from Chris-

CHAPTER IX.

1 He yieldeth the reason why, though he knew their forwardness, yet he sent Titus and his brethren beforehand. 6 And he proceedeth in stirring them up to a bountiful alms, as being but a kind of sowing of seed, 10 which shall return a great increase to them, 13 and occasion a great sacrifice of thanksgivings unto God.

FOR as touching the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you:[a]

2 For I know the forwardness of your mind, for which I boast of you to them of Macedonia, that Achaia was ready a year ago; and your zeal hath provoked very many.[b]

3 Yet have I sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf; that, as I said, ye may be ready:[c]

4 Lest haply if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not, ye) should be ashamed in this same confident boasting.

5 Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your [1]bounty, [2]whereof ye had notice before, that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousness.

6 But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.[d]

7 Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver.[e]

8 And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:[f]

9 (As it is written, He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: his righteousness remaineth for ever.[g]

10 Now he that ministereth seed to the sower both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness;)[h]

11 Being enriched in every thing to all [3]bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God.[i]

12 For the administration of this service not only supplieth the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God;[j]

CHAPTER X.

Against the false apostles, who disgraced the weakness of his person and bodily presence, he setteth out the spiritual might and authority, with which he is armed against all adversary powers, 7 assuring them that at his coming he will be found as mighty in word, as he is now in writing being absent, 12 and withal taxing them for reaching out themselves beyond their compass, and vaunting themselves into other men's labours.

NOW I Paul myself beseech you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who [4]in presence am base among you, but being absent am bold toward you:[n]

2 But I beseech you, that I may not be bold when I am present with that confidence, wherewith I think to be bold against some, which [5]think of us as if we walked according to the flesh.[o]

3 For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh:

4 (For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty [6]through God to the pulling down of strong holds;)[p]

5 Casting down [7]imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ;[q]

6 And having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled.[r]

7 Do ye look on things after the outward appearance? If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's, let him of himself think this again, that, as he is Christ's, even so are we Christ's.[s]

8 For though I should boast somewhat more of our authority, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction, I should not be ashamed:[t]

9 That I may not seem as if I would terrify you by letters.

tian motives, we lose our reward. We may be doing good to others by our generosity, and yet be far from exercising Christian liberality.

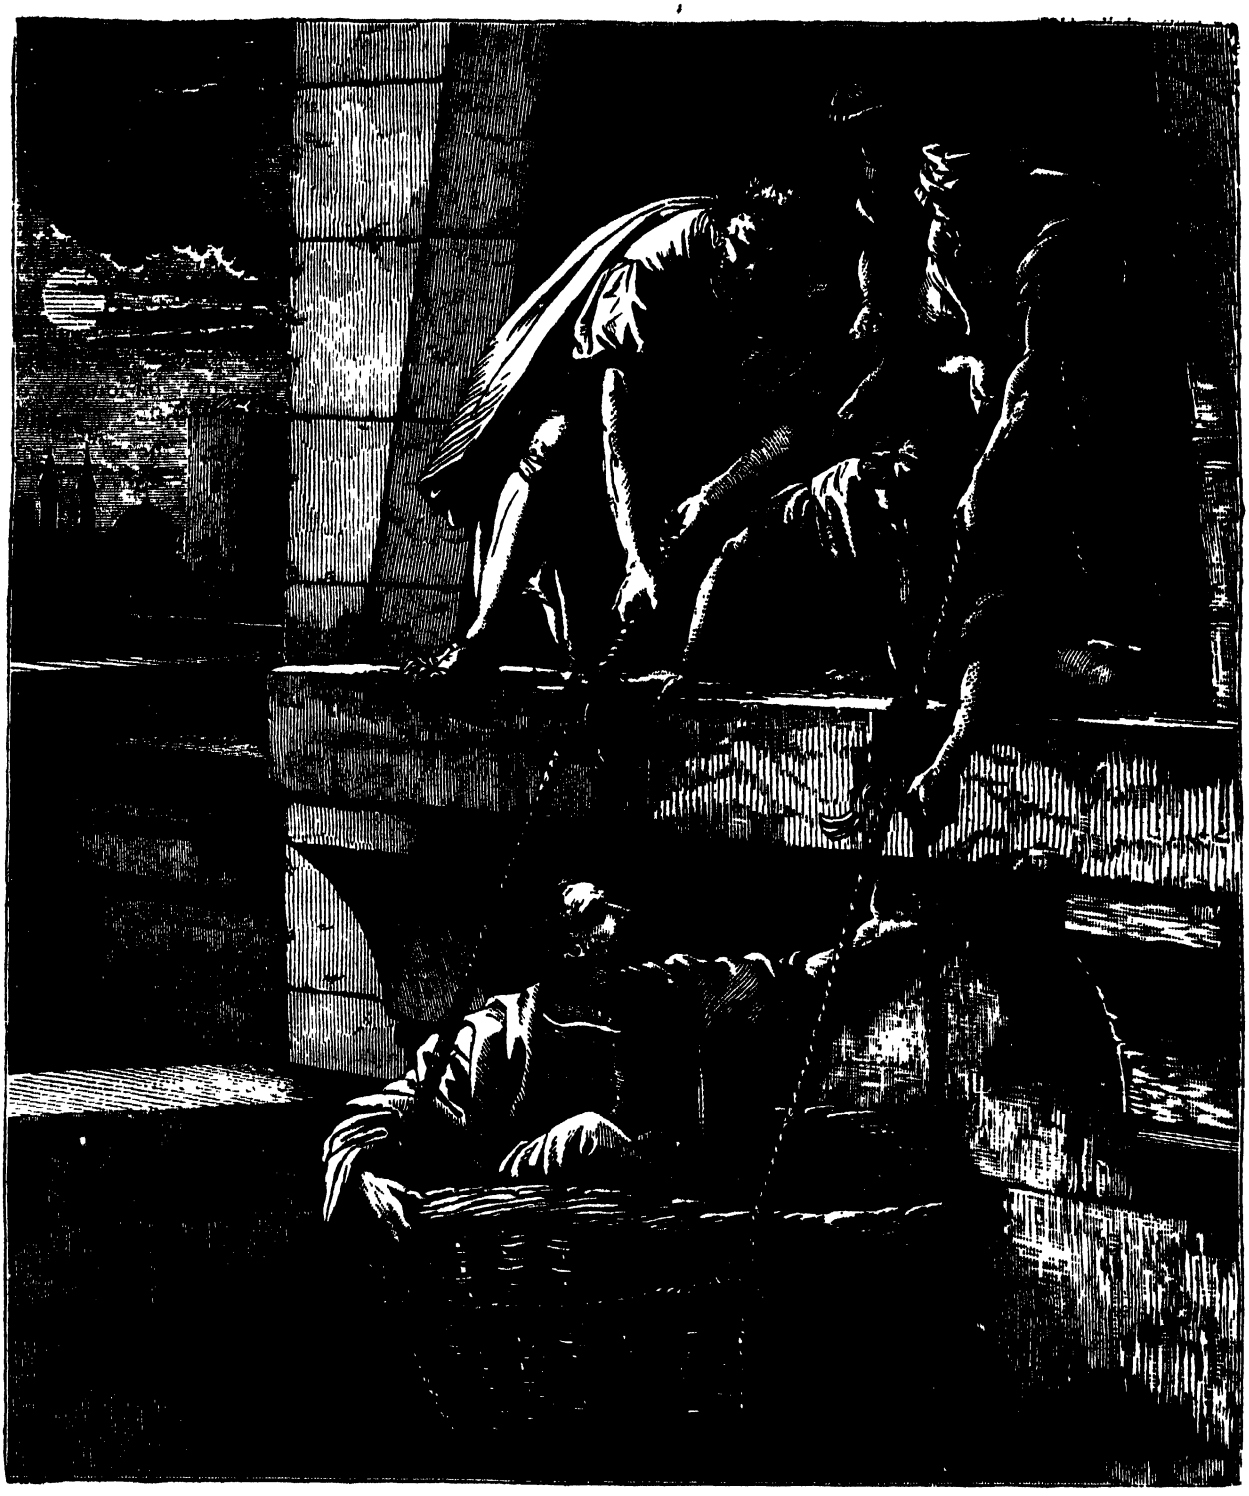
8. "Make all grace abound."—the grace here refers to those outward means of sufficiency out of which they might contribute; but the disposition to give must be traced to that grace which is communicated by God to every believer, and from which all good works do proceed.

9. "His righteousness remaineth for ever:"—his Christian liberality will always be attended with the blessing of Almighty God.

10, 11. "Seed to the sower."—the image of the sower, which was introduced in the sixth verse, is employed in relation to the right use of property; and the Apostle assures the Corinthians that God, who provides seed for the sower, would so increase their love, as the most vital of all holy seeds, as to make it perfect in good works, or in the fruits of righteousness; and thus their being rich in all bountifulness, widely and freely dispensing their benevolence, would redound to the praise and glory of God. If they had the heart to give, God would supply them with the means to be liberal.

12—15. "The administration of this service:"—the Apostle, in this and the following verses, says, in effect, that the collection on behalf of the suffering brethren had not only called forth the spirit of unwonted liberality, but of prayer and thanksgiving; and as both the devotion and the beneficence sprung from the "grace of God in them," everlasting thanks were to be ascribed to God for His unspeakable gift.

CHAPTER X.



There were those in the Corinthian Church who had used every effort to depreciate the Apostle by lowering his dignity and weakening his authority; and against these his adversaries he now directs his address, reminding them that such as he proved himself in his letters they would find him to be when he was personally present with them. Still, his boast was not of himself nor in himself, but in God, whom he served in the Gospel of his Son.

1. "The meekness and gentleness of Christ:"—this is the motive by which he entreats them not to compel him to adopt a line of action which, in the contrast, might appear harsh and severe.

"In presence:"—in personal appearance, the Apostle was unattractive.

2, 3. "Walked according to the flesh:"—the charge preferred against him was that he acted from the lowest and most selfish motives, which he indignantly repels, and tells them that though he lived in a body subject to all the weaknesses of our common humanity, yet in his great work he was governed by no worldly principles or maxims, but depended on the truth of God alone as his weapon in subduing the heart and will of man, and bringing all into subjection to Christ.

6. "A readiness to revenge:"—it is true that he was engaged in a spiritual warfare, and therefore used only spiritual weapons; yet he was prepared to punish all disobedience either by excommunication or by any other means which he deemed expedient in the exercise of his Apostolic authority; but

11 Let such an one think this, that, such as we are in word by letters when we are absent, such will we be also in deed when we are present.

12 For we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, [2]are not wise.[b]

13 But we will not boast of things without our measure, but according to the measure of the [3]rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you.[c] not till he had given them admonitions, and afforded them time to renounce their errors.

"We shall be enlarged:"—as the mission of the Apostle extended far beyond the city of Corinth, he expresses the hope that the faith of the Corinthians would soon be so established as to allow him to leave them, that he might proceed to other regions, and there make known the glorious tidings of mercy and peace which he had proclaimed among his Corinthian brethren.

measure, as though we reached not unto you: for we are come as far as to you also in preaching the gospel of Christ:[a]

15 Not boasting of things without our measure, that is, of other men's labours; but having hope, when your faith is increased, that we shall be [1]enlarged by you according to our rule abundantly,[b]

16 To preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another man's [2]line of things made ready to our hand.

17 But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.[c]

18 For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.[d]

CHAPTER XI.

1 Out of his jealousy over the Corinthians, who seemed to make more account of the false apostles than of him, he entereth into a forced commendation of himself, 5 of his equality with the chief apostles, 7 of his preaching the gospel to them freely, and without any their charge, 13 shewing that he was not inferior to those deceitful workers in any legal prerogative, 23 and in the service of Christ, and in all kind of sufferings for his ministry, far superior.

WOULD to God ye could [3]bear with me a little in my folly: and indeed bear with me.[e]

2 For I am jealous over you with godly jealousy: for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ.[f]

3 But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.[g]

4 For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear [4]with him.[h]

5 For I suppose I was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles.[i]

6 But though I be rude in speech, yet not in knowledge; but we have been throughly made manifest among you in all things.[j]

7 Have I committed an offence in abasing myself that ye might be exalted, because I have preached to you the gospel of God freely?[k]

8 I robbed other churches, taking wages of them, to do you service.

25 Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep;[b]

CHAPTER XI.

While the false teachers sought only their own glory and profit, the Apostle points to his sufferings and his conflicts in proof of his disinterestedness, and of the divinity of that Gospel which he preached, and from which he was fearful that they might be moved away.

1. "My folly:"—in the twelfth verse of the preceding chapter he had charged them with folly who sought to commend themselves; and now that he is forced to defend and justify himself, he asks them to bear with him, if he indulged in what to them might appear to be folly. His object was their stability and final salvation.

4. "Preacheth another Jesus:"—if there be another Saviour, another Spirit, and another Gospel, then they might well bear with these teachers of this doctrine; but if there were but one Gospel, revealing but one Saviour from sin, and but one Spirit of life and holiness, then it was at the peril of their souls that they relinquished it, or allowed themselves to be seduced from it.

7. "Abasing myself:"—by declining all support from the Church, and professing to labour with his own hands; and especially in accepting the bounty of other churches, that he might gratuitously serve them.

10. "As the truth of Christ is in me;"—that is, as I am appointed to propagate and defend the truth of Christ, and in which I personally believe, no man shall stop me.

21. "Concerning reproach:"—the Apostle had just censured them for submitting to the unworthy treatment which they had received at the hands of the false teachers, because it implied that they looked upon him as inferior to themselves, while he could put forth a far better founded claim to their love and obedience. So that if any one of these false teachers was bold and unreserved in his claim, he had reason to be still bolder. Hence the verses which follow.

23—27. Of many of the sufferings here enumerated by the Apostle, as endured in the prosecution of his sublime work, and as evidence of the magnitude of his labours, we should have been ignorant but for this portion of the epistle.

29. "Who is weak?"—this verse expresses the deep sympathy which Paul had with the Corinthians in everything which affected them as a community of professed believers.

32. "Let down by the wall:"—it was not unusual for houses to be so built cities, that their windows overlooked the city wall. Through

26 In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren;[a]

27 In weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness.[b]

28 Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches.[c]

29 Who is weak, and I am not weak? who is offended, and I burn not?[d]

30 If I must needs glory, I will glory of the things which concern mine infirmities.[e]

31 The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is blessed for evermore, knoweth that I lie not.[f]

32 In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king kept the city of the Damascenes with a garrison, desirous to apprehend me:[g]

33 And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hands.

CHAPTER XII.

1 For commending of his apostleship, though he might glory of his wonderful revelations, 9 yet he rather chooseth to glory of his infirmities, 11 blaming them for forcing him to this vain boasting. 14 He promiseth to come to them again: but yet altogether in the affection of a father, 20 although he feareth he shall to his grief find many offenders, and publick disorders there.

IT is not expedient for me doubtless to glory. [1]I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord.

2 I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) such an one caught up to the third heaven.[h]

3 And I knew such a man, (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;)

4 How that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not [2]lawful for a man to utter.[i]

5 Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.[j]

6 For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me.[k]

7 And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.[l]

8 For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me.[m]

9 And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.[n]

10 Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong.[o]

11 I am become a fool in glorying; ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles, though I be nothing.[p]

12 Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.[q]

13 For what is it wherein ye were inferior to other churches, except it be that I myself was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.[r]

14 Behold, the third time I am ready to come to you; and I will not be burdensome to you: for I seek not your's, but you: for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.[s]

15 And I will very gladly spend and be spent for [3]you; though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.[t]

16 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.[u]

17 Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?[v]

18 I desired Titus, and with him I sent a brother. Did Titus make a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?[w]

19 Again, think ye that we excuse ourselves unto you? we speak before God in Christ: but we do all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.[x]

20 For I fear, lest, when I come, I shall not find you such as I would, and that I shall be found unto you such as ye would not: lest there be debates, envyings, wraths, strifes, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults:[y]

some such window the Apostle Paul was let down by his brethren. The monks at Damascus still pretend to show the identical window through which St. Paul passed, but they are doubtless in error, as the wall has been repeatedly rebuilt. It is difficult to determine the form and materials of which the basket alluded to was made. Baskets were made and are still made of grass, rushes, reeds, osiers, &c., and exhibit as much diversity of shape and size as among ourselves. The Greek word used for basket in Acts ix. 25 commonly denotes a basket for corn or provisions; but in this passage another word is used, properly signifying a basket made of ropes or cords. In all probability the words for basket were used without much regard to their original meaning. It is, however, worthy of observation that Dr. Kitto says:—"The method of drawing up or letting down persons in baskets is still very much resorted to in the East, when danger is apprehended from the ordinary mode of ingress or egress."

CHAPTER XII.

2. "I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago:"—at the time referred to, the Apostle was about to enter upon an arduous duty, in which his faith would be constantly tested. In mercy God was pleased to prepare his servant for the forthcoming trials by permitting him to behold the glories that belong to a future state of blissful existence. The Apostle being anxious to make known the facts, and wisely anxious to avoid all appearance of exultation at the honour conferred, modestly speaks of these high privileges as though they had been conferred upon some other individual.

Theologians in their annotations upon this portion of the Apostle's history mostly consider it as descriptive of one event. This mode of treating the passage we regard as defective. The language of the Apostle is in the plural, not in the singular; he speaks of "visions," and he speaks of "revelations," by which we understand two distinct scenes, and two distinct communications made to his mind in reference to those scenes. The first privilege granted was that of being permitted to behold the blissful abode of the Deity, called by the Jews "the third heavens." There the honoured servant of God beheld the future home prepared for the redeemed, when the body glorified and the spirit made perfect shall be united to enjoy pleasures that are for ever new, and where for ever new pleasures are expected.

The second privilege conferred was an admission to the temporary resting-place of the souls of the redeemed—the Paradise into which the Captain of 21 And lest, when I come again, my God will humble me among you, and that I shall bewail many which have sinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanness and fornication and lasciviousness which they have committed.[a]

CHAPTER XIII.

1 He threateneth severity, and the power of his apostleship against obstinate sinners. 5 And advising them to a trial of their faith, 7 and to a reformation of their sins before his coming, 11 he concludeth his epistle with a general exhortation and a prayer.

THIS is the third time I am coming to you. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.[b]

2 I told you before, and foretell you, as if I were present, the second time; and being absent now I write to them which heretofore have sinned, and to all other, that, if I come again, I will not spare:[c]

3 Since ye seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty in you.[d]

4 For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. For we also are weak [1]in him, but we shall live with him by the power of God toward you.[e] their salvation entered after he had cried with a loud voice and dismissed his spirit. If our view of the passage be admitted, we ask, What more effectual mode for strengthening the faith of the Apostle could be devised than that of his being permitted for a time to gaze upon, and for a time to listen to, all that relates to the soul at the hour of death, and all that relates to both soul and body in the kingdom of God?

¶ The second epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi, a city of Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas.

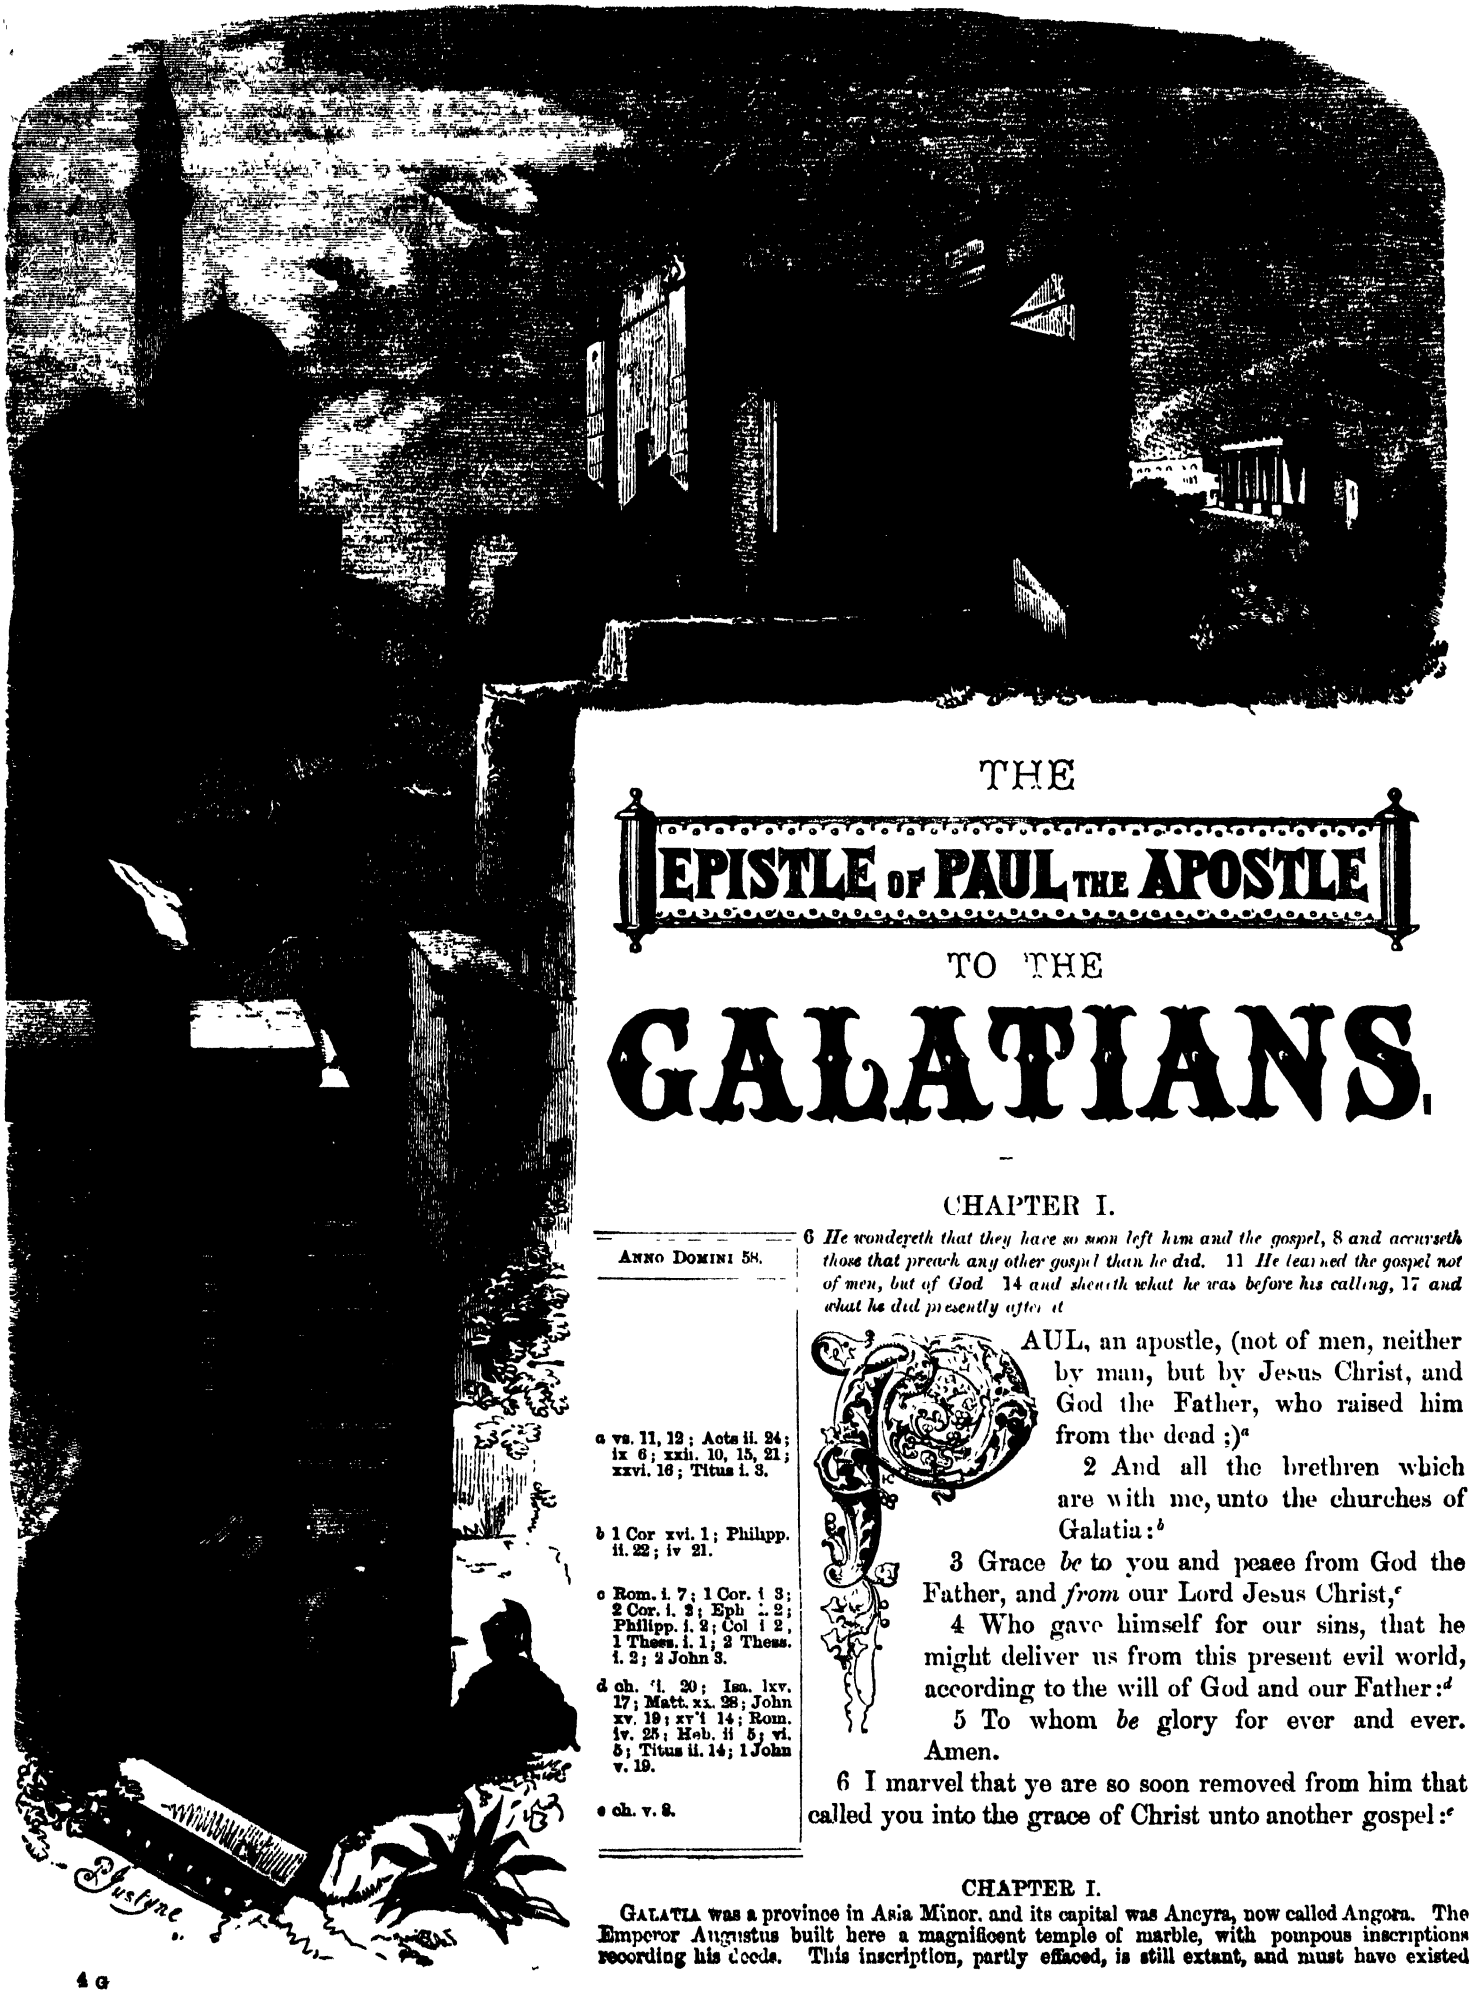
7. "A thorn in the flesh:"—this may have been some bodily ailment, possibly weakness of sight or impediment in speech.

19. "Excuse ourselves:"—he had no need to put forth a defence to his friends, but only to vindicate himself against the insinuations and charges of his opponents, and thus insure the careful edification of those who were attached to him.

20, 21. "I fear."—there were many evils existing in the Church which called for repentance and reformation. These he hoped might be removed before he came to them, otherwise their meeting would be a very painful one.

CHAPTER XIII.

Paul concludes his Epistle with a very impressive admonition, in which he seeks to incite them to great self-examination relative to their inward state, and warns them against self-deception.



1. "In the mouth."—If the Church did not reform itself before he came, he was resolved on its purification. Still, he had no intention of effecting this otherwise than in harmony with the great law laid down by Christ himself in Matt. xviii 15–20.

2. "As if I were;"—or rather, "as when I was present the second time; and now being absent, I write."

3. "A proof of Christ:"—a proof of the authority given to me as an Apostle by Christ, who is the Head of the Church. The power of Christ acted through the Apostles.

7, 8. "That ye do no evil."—he prays God that their conduct may be such as to require no such painful demonstration of his apostolic authority. If they, in their folly, and contrary to the evidence of their senses, and in defiance of his faithful teaching and of his holy counsels, treated him as a reprobate or as worthless, that was no reason why their life and conduct should not be in harmony with the principles and requirements of the Gospel. His power was to be exerted, not against the truth, but for the truth, and in behalf of those who maintained the truth.

14. "The grace:"—in this invocation to the Three Persons of the Sacred Trinity, the Apostle beseeches the Saviour to bestow his grace, the Father to exercise his love, and the Holy Spirit to communicate his teaching, sanctifying, and comforting influence upon the members of this infant Church. What approach can the most exalted intellect make to the full comprehension of the blessings embodied in the grace, the love, and the fellowship of the Triune Jehovah?

CHAPTER I.

GALATIA was a province in Asia Minor, and its capital was Ancyra, now called Angora. The Emperor Augustus built here a magnificent temple of marble, with pompous inscriptions recording his deeds. This inscription, partly effaced, is still extant, and must have existed

7 Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.[a]

8 But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.[b]

9 As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.[c]

10 For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.[d]

11 But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.[e]

12 For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.[f]

13 For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it:[g]

14 And profited in the Jews' religion above many my [1]equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers.[h]

15 But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace,[i]

16 To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood:[j]

17 Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus.

18 Then after three years I [2]went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.[k]

19 But other of the apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother.[l]

20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not.[m]

21 Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia;[n]

22 And was unknown by face unto the churches of Judæa which were in Christ:[o]

23 But they had heard only, That he which persecuted us in times past now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed.

24 And they glorified God in me.

CHAPTER II.

1 He sheweth when he went up again to Jerusalem, and for what purpose: 8 and that Titus was not circumcised: 11 and that he resisted Peter, and told him the reason, 14 why he and other, being Jews, do believe in Christ to be justified by faith, and not by works: 20 and that they live not in sin, who are so justified.

THEN fourteen years after I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also.[p]

2 And I went up by revelation, and communicated unto them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but [3]privately to them which were of reputation, lest by any means I should run, or had run, in vain.[q]

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised:

4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:[r]

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you.[s]

6 But of these who seemed to be somewhat, (whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me: God accepteth no man's person:) for they who seemed to be somewhat in conference added nothing to me:[t]

7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;[u]

8 (For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles:)[v]

9 And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.[w]

10 Only they would that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do.[x]

11 But when Peter was come to Antioch, I

when the Apostle visited Ancyra, as it is commonly believed he did, although the place is not expressly named. A view of the ruins of this palace appears on the preceding page. Angora contains some interesting ruins. The modern city stands on some small hills encircled on the north and east by a range of mountains Its citadel, which is mostly modern, stands on a high rock, perpendicular on three sides. The population of Angora is about 20,000, of whom one-third may be Armenians. The city occupies a position of importance, but this very circumstance has exposed it to many assaults. It was captured by the Persians in 611, and by the Christians in 1101, but has long been under Turkish dominion. The Church of Ancyra was in early times flourishing and influential, and two Christian councils were held there in 315 and 358. It was during his second grand missionary tour that Paul visited this province, introduced the Gospel, and founded several Christian communities.

As a people the Gallic race were vain, ostentatious, impetuous, and wanting in constancy. The object of this Epistle is to warn them against their tendency to change and apostacy under the influence of false and imposing teachers.

1. "Not of men:"—it is worthy of remark how careful the Apostle is to establish the position that human instrumentality had nothing whatever to do with his call to the office of an Apostle.

"By Jesus Christ, and God the Father:"—we say with Alford, "Had not the Apostle regarded Jesus Christ as one with the Father in the Godhead, he never would have written thus."

8, 9. "Though we, or an angel:"—what a proof do these two verses supply of the Divine authority of the Gospel!

10. "Do I now persuade men, or God?"—in saying what I have said about the preaching of the Gospel, have I to convince God or man of my sincerity? I have to approve myself to God; and therefore, were I, like your false teachers, to seek to please men by perverting the Gospel, I should not be the servant of Christ.

CHAPTER II.

1. "Went up again to Jerusalem:"—the occasion of his visit was to attend the great council which was convened in Jerusalem to settle some disputed points.—See Acts xv.

2. "By revelation:"—he had some supernatural influence acting upon his mind with concurrent events, which induced him to undertake this second visit to Jerusalem. There he came into immediate contact with some of the Apostles, to whom, in private, he made known his teaching and labours, that he might have increased confidence in his own line of action.

3—5. "Neither Titus:"—there are two modes of interpreting these words: either that the Apostles and others with whom Paul came into contact required Titus to be circumcised, and the Apostle interposed so as to prevent any such compulsory act; or the Apostles and others having failed to require his circumcision, the Judaising party insisted on its being done ere Titus could be recognised or received, to whom, as mere spies of Christian liberty, the Apostle refused to submit even for one moment, that the Gospel might, in its purity and simplicity, without the imposition of the Mosaic rites, be continued to the Gentiles.

6—9. "Who seemed to be somewhat:"—either in their own estimation, or in the estimation of others; it mattered not to the Apostle. He knew that God accepted no man's person as such; and as for himself, he was to be withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.[a]

12 For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.[b]

13 And the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth of the gospel, I said unto Peter before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?[c]

15 We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles,[d]

16 Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.[e]

17 But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.[f]

18 For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

19 For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.[g]

20 I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.[h]

21 I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain.[i]

CHAPTER III.

1 He asketh what moved them to leave the faith, and hang upon the law? 6 They that believe are justified, 9 and blessed with Abraham. 10 And this he sheweth by many reasons.

FOOLISH Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?[j]

2 This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?[k]

3 Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh?[l]

4 Have ye suffered [1]so many things in vain? if it be yet in vain.[m]

5 He therefore that ministereth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?[n]

6 Even as Abraham believed God, and it was [2]accounted to him for righteousness.[o]

7 Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.[p]

8 And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed.[q]

9 So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.[r]

11 But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, The just shall live by faith.[s]

12 And the law is not of faith: but, The man that doeth them shall live in them.[t]

13 Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:[u]

14 That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.[v]

15 Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; Though it be but a man's [3]covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto.[w]

16 Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ.[x]

17 And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect.[y]

18 For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise.[z]

19 Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator.[a] guided in his conduct solely by the will of Christ, as the one living and only Head of the Church. They could give him neither counsel nor aid, but left him to prosecute his work among the Gentiles in whatever way he deemed best; and in this James, and Peter, and John concurred, and gave him the right hand of fellowship, with their benediction.

20 Now a mediator is not a mediator of one, but God is one.[b]

10. "Remember the poor:"—the suffering saints in Jerusalem.

CHAPTER III.

1. "O foolish Galatians:"—the word "foolish" is to be taken in the sense of thoughtless or unreflecting; and the word "bewitched" points to the use of those subtle and artful means by which they had been seduced from the truth, in the presentation of which Christ the Crucified was clearly set before them as the one exclusive object of their faith, apart from Mosaic rites and [illegible] obligation.

2. "The hearing of faith."—this means the hearing of the Gospel, which exhibits the object of faith. And his question is, whether they received their spiritual life through that truth, or through the works of the law.

4. "Suffered so many things."—in reference to what they endured when they first embraced the Gospel. Why did they then suffer for the very truth which they were now seeking to renounce?

5. "He that ministereth:"—this is a repetition of the second verse in another form; and the Apostle asks whether God had given the Spirit and exerted his miraculous power among them in connection with Mosaic rites, or in connection with the Gospel of Christ? As the blessing came to Abraham through faith, so, the Apostle leaves them to infer, must all higher blessing come to them also through faith.

8. "The gospel unto Abraham:"—the glad tidings of a Redeemer, and of salvation through him.

21 Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.[a]

22 But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.[b]

23 But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed.

24 Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith.[c]

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster.

26 For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.[d]

27 For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.[e]

28 There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.[f]

29 And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.[g]

CHAPTER IV.

1 We were under the law till Christ came, as the heir is under his guardian till he be of age. 5 But Christ freed us from the law 7 therefore we are servants no longer to it 14 He remembereth their good will to him, and his to them, 22 and sheweth that we are the sons of Abraham by the freewoman

NOW I say, That the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all;

2 But is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father.

3 Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the [1]elements of the world:[h]

4 But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law,[i]

5 To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.[j]

6 And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father.[k]

18 But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing, and not only when I am present with you.

19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you,[v]

20 I desire to be present with you now, and to change my voice; for [6]I stand in doubt of you.

21 Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a freewoman.[w]

23 But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the freewoman was by promise.[x]

24 Which things are an allegory: for these are the two [7]covenants; the one from the mount [8]Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar.[y]

25 For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and [9]answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children.

11. "The just shall live by faith:"—the design of the Apostle is not to show by what the just live, but that the just—that is, those who are justified by faith—can alone have life, and thus he shuts out the law as a ground of justification and acceptance. The law does not require faith, but obedience; and in the absence of the obedience which the law demands to every precept there can be no life.

13, 14. "A curse for us"—the curse, or punishment of sin, is death, and this Christ endured for us when he became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross; that the blessing promised to believing Abraham might come upon all the Gentiles who had like faith with the patriarch.

20. "God is one:"—the Apostle tells us in the previous verses that God had made a covenant of mercy with Abraham, but some four hundred years afterwards THE LAW was added because of transgression, till the promised Messiah should appear. Does the law, asks the Apostle, set aside the promise? That is impossible: God is one. It is one God who gave both the promise and the law; and instead of the promise being set aside by the law, the law, which makes no provision for the pardon of sin, leads man to the promise, as revealing the only ground of dependence before God.

25. "Faith is come:"—not faith as a principle, but that in which the principle terminates and rests. In other words, not the act of faith, but the object of faith.

27. "Put on Christ:"—all who are truly in Christ have one adoption, and are heirs of one inheritance.

CHAPTER IV.

4. "The fulness of the time:"—when the world was in the state to receive the Incarnate One—ripe for his appearance, by the condition of things and the progress of events.

8. "Are no gods:"—have not in their nature any of the attributes that belong to God, and therefore they are "no gods," but the work of men's hands; and yet to such unmeaning objects they were wont, before being converted to Christianity, to proffer worship and service.

9. "Rather are known of God:"—their conversion to Christianity was effected, not by any effort of their own, but by the power and grace of God; and with this deep-seated consciousness within them, it was a marvel to the Apostle how they could return to those erroneous notions by which they had been formerly enthralled.

13—16. Though he had appeared among them the subject of such bodily

26 But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.[a]

27 For it is written, Rejoice, thou barren that bearest not; break forth and cry, thou that travailest not: for the desolate hath many more children than she which hath an husband.[b]

28 Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise.[c]

29 But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now.[d]

30 Nevertheless what saith the scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman.[e]

31 So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free.[f]

CHAPTER V.

1 He moveth them to stand in their liberty, 3 and not to observe circumcision: 13 but rather love, which is the sum of the law. 19 He reckoneth up the works of the flesh, 22 and the fruits of the Spirit, 25 and exhorteth to walk in the Spirit.

STAND fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.[g]

2 Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.[h]

3 For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law.[i]

4 Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace.[j]

5 For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith.[k]

6 For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love.[l]

7 Ye did run well; [1]who did hinder you that ye should not obey the truth?[m]

8 This persuasion cometh not of him that calleth you.[n]

9 A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.[o]

10 I have confidence in you through the Lord, that ye will be none otherwise minded: but he that troubleth you shall bear his judgment, whosoever he be.[p]

11 And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? then is the offence of the cross ceased.[q]

12 I would they were even cut off which trouble you.[r]

13 For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another.[s]

14 For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.[t]

15 But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.

16 This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and [2]ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.[u]

17 For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.[v]

18 But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law.[w]

19 Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness,[x] infirmity as might have led them to depreciate and reject him, they had been unbounded in their expressions of affection and attachment.

The infirmity and temptation, or trial, of which he speaks, and from which he suffered in the flesh, appears to have been some peculiar affection of the sight, as may be inferred from the words, "I bear you record, that, if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me."

17. "They zealously affect you:"—the reference is again to the Judaising teachers, who were zealous in using their influence to draw them away into a separate party.

20. "Change my voice;"—that is, his mode of address, in consequence of their change of feeling and conduct.

21—31. "Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law:"—the object of the Apostle in these verses is to illustrate in the form of an allegory the relative position of the law and the promises. The law, which demands perfect obedience, and makes no provision for transgression, brings men into bondage; but the promise which is founded on Christ's sinless obedience to law, while it preserves the majesty and the integrity of law intact, rises above law, by revealing to man the richest mercy: so that no believer can ever revert to the promise without being reminded of the law which his Saviour magnified and made honourable by his obedience unto death.

"Jerusalem which now is:"—Jerusalem with her children must here be taken in the sense of the Jewish Church, which was enslaved by its numerous rites and ceremonies; whereas the Jerusalem which is above—the kingdom of heaven set up on earth by the Messiah—the Christian Church—is free from such rites and ceremonies, and her members enjoy a spiritual freedom.

CHAPTER V.

1. "Stand fast:"—he had just stated in the most explicit terms the freedom enjoyed by believers in Christ in the new economy of grace, and by virtue of the Holy Spirit dwelling in them; and now he entreats them, with all the tenderness and all the solicitude of maternal affection, not to suffer themselves to be led away by their false teachers, whose aim it was to reduce them to the bondage of a system which had for ever passed away.

2, 3. "If ye be circumcised:"—to submit to this rite was, in fact, to come under the whole law; while subjection to the law, not as a rule of life, but as the means of safety—as a way of salvation—was nothing less than a rejection of the salvation which is by faith in Christ.

4 "Christ is become of no effect:"—the sequence is undeniable, that if a man seek to be declared free from all offence, or, in Scripture language, "to be justified" on the ground of conformity to the law, Christ and his obedience to the law are necessarily excluded, and thus Christ and his blessings become of no effect. In such a case, on the part of the Almighty, salvation would not be of grace, but of works; it would not be an act of mercy, but an act of justice Acts of mercy flowing from a sovereign are termed acts of grace; and "by grace we are saved," and not by any merit of our own.

6. "Faith which worketh by love:"—we are justified by faith, but this faith is inseparable from love, as true faith is an active principle that works by love. Faith that is vital is ever united to love that is active. If faith be inoperative, it is lifeless and worthless.

8. "This persuasion:"—they had set out well in their Christian life: who had intervened to impede their progress? The persuasion of the false teachers to which they were now listening and yielding could not be from God, who had called them into the fellowship of the Gospel; and therefore the Apostle exhorts them to be on their guard against all unholy influences, since a little leaven would soon leaven the whole mass.

10. "Shall bear his judgment:"—the disturber or seducer might have been acting secretly and under a mask; but the Apostle reminds the Galatians that he had confidence in their consistency, and therefore he felt assured that the offending party, whoever he might be, would be visited with merited punishment.

11. "If I yet preach circumcision:"—this was the charge preferred against him by the false teachers, who alleged that he enforced the rite of circumcision. The Apostle therefore asks with great point, "Why do I yet suffer persecution" from those of the circumcision? If I preach circumcision, then what is there in Christianity to object to? If circumcision, and not Christ crucified, be the ground of human acceptance and salvation, the offence of the Cross—the objection to our Christian doctrine—is taken away.

13. "An occasion to the flesh:"—he warns them against the abuse of their Christian liberty. Though free from the law as a ground of dependence, they were yet under law as a rule of conduct. And instead of turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, by continuing in sin that grace might abound, they

20 Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies,

21 Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.[a]

22 But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith,[b]

23 Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law.[c]

24 And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the [1]affections and lusts.[d]

25 If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.[e]

26 Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another.[f]

CHAPTER VI.

1 He moveth them to deal mildly with a brother that hath slipped, 2 and to bear one another's burden 6 to be liberal to their teachers, 9 and not weary of well doing 12 He sheweth what they intend that preach circumcision. 14 He glorieth in nothing, save in the cross of Christ.

BRETHREN, [2]if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.[g]

2 Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ.[h]

3 For if a man think himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself.[i]

4 But let every man prove his own work, and then shall he have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another.[j] were to lay a restraint on their fleshly appetites and desires, and to rise above the debasing influence of selfishness, by the exercise of Christian duties.

16, 17 "Walk in the Spirit."—by a sudden transition, yet not unnatural, the Apostle passes from the conflict with outward opponents, whether in the form of false teachers or others, to the inner conflict in the renewed man between the flesh and the Spirit. The ultimate object of God in this fight is, to withdraw man from the slavery of Satan to the service of Christ, and by the influence of the Divine Spirit to lead him to exclaim, "Not my will, but thine be done" Therefore, to "walk in the Spirit" is nothing less than to walk, not according to the demands of this world, but in willing obedience to God's commands in newness of life.

CHAPTER VI.

This chapter ought to have begun with the twenty-fifth verse of the preceding chapter If God the Holy Spirit dwells in the heart, the flesh will be subdued and mortified, in the degree in which the Spirit is allowed to work within; so that he who cherishes the influences of God's Spirit, and strives to be conformed to his will, cannot but exemplify it in his daily life and conversation.

1. "If a man be overtaken"—the Apostle conceives it possible—nay, probable—that there were those who might be surprised and taken in the very act of transgression; and he advises those who are the most spiritual, the most enlightened in mind, and the most holy in life, to treat the offender as a brother who is to be restored; and therefore to deal with him in the spirit of meekness—with the gentleness and love of Christ; for thus only would he be won.

2, 3. "Bear ye one another's burdens."—the chief hindrance to our sympathy with the afflictions of others is selfishness, and that must be surmounted; as self-denial, the opposite grace, is the starting-point of Christianity.

FAC-SIMILE OF AN ANCIENT GREEK UNCIAL MS. OF ST. MATTHEW, REPRESENTING CHAP. XX., PART OF VERSE 34. (FROM THE "DUBLIN CODEX" OF THE SIXTH CENTURY.)

5 "Bear his own burden."—this seems to contradict the exhortation just before, to bear each other's burdens. But it is not so. Whatever be the consequences, immediate or remote, of a man's work, he alone will be responsible.

11. "Ye see how large a letter I have written unto you:"—this passage has been variously explained; the reference is by many supposed to be to the ancient mode of writing in capital, or large letters. The accompanying illustration offers a specimen of this form of writing. It will be seen that the letters follow each other without any division of words. Frequently there was no stop at the end even of a sentence. This form of writing involved much labour, and was necessarily a very slow operation. "With mine own hand;"—this is said to be the only epistle which Paul wrote to the Churches without the aid of an amanuensis.

12, 13. "A fair shew in the flesh:"—the Judaising teachers relied on the external rite of circumcision, and vainly conceived that thereby they stood in peculiar relation and favour with God. Hence their opposition to Christianity. Not that they themselves kept the law, but they were exceedingly desirous of creating a party, in whose numbers and conformity to Jewish rites they might glory. But THE CROSS OF CHRIST, which they repudiated, was that in which the Apostle gloried.

17. "I bear in my body."—the Apostle repudiates those who had endeavoured to add to his solicitude and trouble by attempting to undermine his apostolic authority, and defeat the end of his ministry; and hence he says, "Let no man trouble me, for I"—and not your false teachers—"bear in my body the marks"—the scars, and wounds and stripes which he had received in the service of Christ.—See 2 Cor. xi. 24—27.

9 Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself:[d]

10 That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in [1]heaven, and which are on earth; even in him:[e]

11 In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will:[f]

12 That we should be to the praise of his glory, who first [2]trusted in Christ.[g]

13 In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise,[h]

14 Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory.[i]

15 Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints,[j]

16 Cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers;[k]

CHAPTER I.

EPHESUS, the chief of the twelve Ionian cities on the coast of Asia Minor, was situated in an alluvial plain, on the south side and near the mouth of the Cayster. In the plain beyond its walls stood the celebrated Temple of Diana, which was one of the wonders of the ancient world. This famous edifice was built in the sixth century before the Christian era, and after being burnt down by Eratostratus, in the very night on which Alexander the Great was born (B.C. 356), was restored by the joint efforts of the Ionian States.

Ephesus was a place of considerable commerce, and was always very flourishing. The engraving on the preceding page is an imaginary restoration of the city, based upon existing records.

After his sojourn for a year and a half in Corinth, our Apostle came for the first time to Ephesus. This was at the close of his second great missionary tour, and when on his way to Jerusalem to attend the feast of Pentecost. Apollos, with Aquila and Priscilla, carried on the work which he then commenced; and from Jerusalem he himself returned thither, and there spent three whole years, during which period, no doubt, the church was founded.—See Acts xix., xx.

13 But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ.[j]

14 For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us;[k]

15 Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace;[l]

16 And that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity [3]thereby:[m]

And came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh.[n]

18 For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father.[o]

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the houshold of God;[p]

20 And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone;[q]

21 In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord:[r] guished commentators refer the gift not to the faith of the believer, but to the salvation of God. Hence salvation is not of works, but of grace.

14. "Who hath made both one;"—that is, both Jews and Gentiles, who are equally indebted to the mediation of Christ, and who, through that mediation, are reconciled not only to God, but to each other, and thus are brought into union.

16. "Having slain the enmity thereby:"—on the cross the Saviour swept away the whole Jewish system.—See Col. ii. 13—15.

22 In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit.[a]

CHAPTER III.

5 The hidden mystery, 6 that the Gentiles should be saved, 8 was made known to Paul by revelation: 8 and to him was that grace given, that 9 he should preach it. 13 He desireth them not to faint for his tribulation, 14 and prayeth 19 that they may perceive the great love of Christ toward them.

FOR this cause I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles,[b]

2 If ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which is given me to you-ward:[c]

3 How that by revelation he made known unto me the mystery; (as I wrote [1]afore in few words,[d]

4 Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ)[e]

5 Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit;[f]

6 That the Gentiles should be fellowheirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel:[g]

7 Whereof I was made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by the effectual working of his power.[h]

8 Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ;[i]

9 And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ:[j]

10 To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God,[k]

11 According to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord:[l]

12 In whom we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith of him.[m]

13 Wherefore I desire that ye faint not at my tribulations for you, which is your glory.[n]

14 For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,

15 Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named,[o]

16 That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man;[p]

17 That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love,[q]

20 Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us,[t]

21 Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.[u]

CHAPTER IV.

1 He exhorteth to unity, 7 and declareth that God therefore giveth divers 11 gifts unto men, that his church might be 13 edified, and 16 grown up in Christ. 18 He calleth them from the impurity of the Gentiles, 24 to put on the new man, 25 to cast off lying, and 29 corrupt communic

THEREFORE, the prisoner [2]of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called,[v]

2 With all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love;[w]

3 Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.[x]

4 There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling;[y]

5 One Lord, one faith, one baptism,[z]

6 One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.[a]

7 But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ.[b]

8 Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led [3]captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men.[c]

9 (Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth?[d]

10 He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might [4]fill all things.)[e]

11 And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers;[f]

12 For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ:[g]

13 Till we all come [5]in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the [6]stature of the fulness of Christ:[h]

14 That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive;[i]

CHAPTER III.

1. "The prisoner of Jesus Christ"—Paul was now enduring his first imprisonment in Rome; but his joy was that he was suffering for Christ and the Gospel.

3. "By revelation:"—the Apostle will not suffer any human element to come into his call to and qualification for the work of the ministry.—See Gal. i. 11—17. On the phrase, "as I wrote before in few words," see chap. i. 9.

6. "His promise in Christ;"—that is, the promise of salvation, with all its plenitude of grace here and of glory hereafter, which includes the present and the future, and embraces every other promise.

CHAPTER IV.

1. "I therefore . . . beseech you"—here begins the second or hortatory part of the Epistle; and it is on what goes before that the Apostle founds the practical exhortations embodied in this latter section.

6. "One God and Father;"—who is above all, in his supremacy as the Universal Ruler; through all, or with all, as the God of providence; and in all, by his power and his Spirit.

11. "Some, evangelists:"—the evangelist differed from the pastor and teacher in the unconfined character of his mission. He proceeded from place to place, proclaiming redemption through the blood of Christ.

15 But [1]speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ:[a]

16 From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.[b]

17 This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind,[c]

18 Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the [2]blindness of their heart:[d]

19 Who being past feeling have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness.[e]

20 But ye have not so learned Christ;

21 If so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus:[f]

22 That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts;[g]

23 And be renewed in the spirit of your mind;[h]

24 And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and [3]true holiness.[i]

25 Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbour: for we are members one of another.[j]

26 Be ye angry, and sin not: let not the sun go down upon your wrath:[k]

27 Neither give place to the devil.[l]

28 Let him that stole steal no more: but rather let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have [4]to give to him that needeth.[m]

29 Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good [5]to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers.[n]

30 And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption.[o]

31 Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice:[p]

32 And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.[q]

CHAPTER V.

2 After general exhortations, to love, 3 to fly fornication, 4 and all uncleanness, 7 not to converse with the wicked, 15 to walk warily, and to be 18 filled with the Spirit, 22 he descendeth to the particular duties, how wives ought to obey their husbands, 25 and husbands ought to love their wives, 32 even as Christ doth his church.

BE ye therefore followers of God, as dear children;[r]

2 And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweetsmelling savour.[s]

3 But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints;[t]

4 Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient: but rather giving of thanks.[u]

5 For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God.[v]

6 Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of [6]disobedience.[w]

7 Be not ye therefore partakers with them.

8 For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light:[x]

9 (For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth;)[y]

10 Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord.[z]

11 And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.[a]

12 For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret.[b]

13 But all things that are [7]reproved are made manifest by the light: for whatsoever doth make manifest is light.[c]

14 Wherefore [8]he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.[d]

15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise,[e]

16 Redeeming the time, because the days are evil.[f]

17 Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is.[g]

18 And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit;[h]

19 Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord;[i]

20 Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ;[j]

21 Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God.[k]

22 Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord.[l]

23 For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body.[m]

24 Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.[n]

25 Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it;[o]

26 That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word,[p]

27 That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.[q]

28 So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:

30 For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.[r]

31 For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.[s]

CHAPTER VI.

1 The duty of children towards their parents, 5 of servants towards their masters. 10 Our life is a warfare, 12 not only against flesh and blood, but also spiritual enemies. 13 The complete armour of a Christian, 18 and how it ought to be used. 21 Tychicus is commended.

CHILDREN, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.[b]

2 Honour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise;[c]

3 That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth.

4 And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.[d]

5 Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling, in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ;[e]

6 Not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart;[f]

7 With good will doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men:

8 Knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord, whether he be bond or free.[g]

9 And, ye masters, do the same things unto them, [1]forbearing threatening: knowing that [2]your Master also is in heaven; neither is there respect of persons with him.[h]

10 Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.[i]

¶ Written from Rome unto the Ephesians by Tychicus.

18 "Through the ignorance that is in them"—their ignorance was wilful; or as the Apostle puts it in his Epistle to the Romans, "they did not like to retain God in their knowledge;" and this wilful ignorance estranged them more and more from the Divine life.

CHAPTER V.

1, 2. "Be ye therefore followers of God"—these two verses ought to have been included in the preceding chapter, since they supply the mightiest motive for the performance of those duties which he had just been pressing upon them

4. "Which are not convenient;"—that is, unbecoming the profession and the life of those who claim to be numbered with the children of God and the followers of Christ.

"Rather giving of thanks."—while they were to watch and strive against the abuse of the tongue, on the one hand, they were, on the other, exhorted to its holy and joyful use. Their cheerfulness was to reveal itself in the joy of a full and grateful heart.

CHAPTER VI.

5. "Fear and trembling;"—not dread, but that trembling solicitude to be found faithful

13—17. In these verses the Apostle mentions the principal items in a suit of ancient armour. For the term "whole armour," the Greek has the original of our word panoply, which includes all a man's armour, whether offensive or defensive. "Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth:" compare Isa. xi 5. Girdles were required for ordinary dresses, but they were of great importance to a soldier. Not only did they keep his dress compact and in its position, but they added much to his strength and energy in action. They were also partly made of brass for defence. "The breastplate of righteousness:"—breastplates, or cuirasses, were designed for the protection of the body from the waist upwards, and were made of metal or other materials. They were a most important part of ancient armour, and were often elaborately made and highly ornamented. "Your feet shod:"—the Roman soldiers wore shoes the soles of which were studded with nails, and they served as a protection for the feet. "The shield of faith"—shields were in universal use in ancient warfare They were of various shapes, and of different materials, especially of metal. "The helmet of salvation"—helmets, also, were of many forms, and were made of leather or of metal; frequently they were ornamented with a crest. "Fiery darts."—darts, spears, or javelins, were either made to be thrown at an enemy, or to be held in the hand. Those which were thrown were in some cases made to carry combustible materials, and hence, perhaps, the expression, "fiery darts." "The sword of the Spirit:"—swords were also a usual part of a soldier's armour. They were suspended by a belt passed over the shoulder, or round the waist, and worn in a sheath or scabbard. The previous enumeration exactly coincides with the figures of soldiers represented on some of the monuments at Rome. The items will be seen in the accompanying representation of an ancient Roman warrior.

ROMAN SOLDIER IN COMPLETE ARMOUR. FROM TRAJAN'S COLUMN.

21. "Tychicus, a beloved brother."—he was one of Paul's companions (see Acts xx. 4; Col. iv. 7; 2 Tim. iv. 12; Titus iii 12), but we have no farther knowledge of him.

23. "Love with faith:"—their faith is taken for granted; but love was to give embodiment to that faith in a life of holy conformity to Christ. And here he prays that the love of God may so flow into their hearts as to exalt them to a high degree of spirituality of mind, and thus to prepare them for the perfect life of heaven.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE Philippians

CHAPTER I.

ANNO DOMINI 64

3 He testifieth his thankfulness to God, and his love toward them, for the fruits of their faith, and fellowship in his sufferings, 9 daily praying to him for their increase in grace 12 he sheweth what good the faith of Christ had rec[illegible] by his troubles at Rome, 21 and how ready he is to glorify Christ either by his life or death, 27 exhorting them to unity, 28 and to fortitude in persecution.

PAUL and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons:[a]

2 Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.[b]

3 I thank my God upon every [1]remembrance of you.[c]

4 Always in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy,

5 For your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now;[d]

6 Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you [2]will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ:[e]

7 Even as it is meet for me to think this of you all,

[a] 1 Cor. i. 2.

[d] ch. iv. 14, 15; Rom. xii. 13, xv. 26, 2 Cor. viii. 1

[2] Or, will finish it.

[e] ver. 10; John vi. 29; 1 Thess. i. 3.

because [1]I have you in my heart; inasmuch as both in my bonds, and in the defence and confirmation of the gospel, ye all are [2]partakers of my grace.[a]

8 For God is my record, how greatly I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ.[b]

9 And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all [3]judgment;[c]

10 That ye may [4]approve things that [5]are excellent; that ye may be sincere and without offence till the day of Christ;[d]

11 Being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God.[e]

12 But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel;

13 So that my bonds [6]in Christ are manifest in all [7]the palace, and [8]in all other places;[f]

14 And many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear.

15 Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will:[g]

16 The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds:

17 But the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel.[h]

18 What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice.

19 For I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ,[i]

20 According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.[j]

21 For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

22 But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I wot not.

23 For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better:[k]

24 Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.

CHAPTER I.

It was in the prosecution of his second great missionary journey that the Apostle visited Philippi, a city of Macedonia Prima, which received its name from Philip, king of Macedon, and stood near the Ægean Sea, on the river Strymon. Here Timotheus and Silas were associated with Paul in his evangelical labours, and the converts which sprung up to reward their faith and toil became the first-fruits of a rich and abundant harvest. The engraving at the head of the Epistle represents the site of Philippi.

The Epistle was written from Rome, in the latter part of his first imprisonment, about A.D. 63. It is supposed that on the death of Burrhus, the prætorian prefect, A.D. 62, to whose care Paul had been committed, a change came over the government of Nero for the worse, and that the Apostle was removed from his own hired house into the barrack of the prætorian guards attached to the palace, put into stricter custody, treated with greater severity, and his life placed in more imminent peril. The Epistle is not only rich in its utterances of affection and love to the Philippians, but "is full of earnest exhortations, affectionate warnings, deep and wonderful settings forth of his spiritual desires and feelings. It describes the state of Christians and the condition of the world, sets before us the loving counsels of God the Father respecting us, and the self-sacrifice and triumph of our Redeemer."

16. "Preach Christ of contention:"—there were those even in the Church of Philippi who were opposed to the Apostle, and who endeavoured, by intrigue and other unworthy means, to undermine his influence and defeat the end of his ministry, and thus add to his solicitude and his sorrow. Still, if they held forth to the view of men Christ crucified, as the only Saviour of the lost, he could not but rejoice.

19. "Turn to my salvation;"—further my personal spiritual well-being, and hasten my deliverance from bonds and suffering.

25. "I know that I shall abide:"—the aspect of things around him may have so changed as to justify this confidence; or he may have received some supernatural revelation.

28. "An evident token of perdition:"—the faith and fortitude of the believers, in the midst of opposition and suffering, would impress their adversaries with the fact that they were waging war with a Power which must finally overcome them.

CHAPTER II.

1, 2. "If there be therefore any consolation:"—the Apostle exhorts the Philippians to holy unity: first, by the truth and consolation to be found in Christ; then, by the deep and ever-living joy which springs from Christian love; next, by the fellowship which they professed to have with the Holy Spirit; and, finally, by that tenderness and compassion which should characterise all the followers of the loving and merciful Saviour. Such unity on their part would complete his joy in them.

himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.[a]

9 Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name:[b]

10 That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth;[c]

11 And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.[d]

12 Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.[e]

13 For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure.[f]

14 Do all things without murmurings and disputings:[g]

15 That ye may be blameless and [1]harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom [2]ye shine as lights in the world;[h]

16 Holding forth the word of life; that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain.[i]

17 Yea, and if I be [3]offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy, and rejoice with you all.[j]

18 For the same cause also do ye joy, and rejoice with me.

19 [4]But I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Timotheus shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state.[k]

20 For I have no man [5]likeminded, who will naturally care for your state.[l]

21 For all seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's.[m]

22 But ye know the proof of him, that, as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel.[n]

23 Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me.

24 But I trust in the Lord that I also myself shall come shortly.[o]

25 Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labour, and fellowsoldier, but your messenger, and he that ministered to my wants.[p]

26 For he longed after you all, and was full of heaviness, because that ye had heard that he had been sick.[q]

27 For indeed he was sick nigh unto death: but God had mercy on him; and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.

28 I sent him therefore the more carefully, that, when ye see him again, ye may rejoice, and that I may be the less sorrowful.

29 Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness; and [6]hold such in reputation:[r]

30 Because for the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life, to supply your lack of service toward me.[s]

CHAPTER III.

1 He warneth them to beware of the false teachers of the circumcision, 4 shewing that himself hath greater cause than they to trust in the righteousness of the law: 7 which notwithstanding he counteth as dung and loss, to gain Christ and his righteousness, 12 therein acknowledging his own imperfection. 15 He exhorteth them to be thus minded, 17 and to imitate him, 18 and to decline the ways of carnal Christians.

FINALLY, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, but for you it is safe.[t]

2 Beware of dogs, beware of evil workers, beware of the concision.[u]

3 For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.[v]

4 Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more:[w]

5 Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee;[x]

6 Concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.[y]

7 But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.[z]

8 Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ,[a]

9 And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith:[b]

10 That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;[c]

11 If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead.[d]

5–11. "Let this mind be in you:"—he enforces his exhortation to self-denial and humility by the sublimest of all examples — the example of the Saviour in effecting the salvation of our fallen race.

"In the form of God:"—if the expression "the form of a servant" means that he was really and truly a servant, then this must mean that he was really and truly God. If not, then, give him what place we may in the scale of created being, he must have been a servant; and the words of the Apostle, "He took upon him the form of a servant," would not be a correct mode of expression. Christ, although divine, condescended to assume an office which did not originally belong to him.

"Not robbery to be equal with God;"—that is, in claiming equality with God, he was not seizing or laying hold of anything which did not belong to him, or by which he might enrich himself. Hence the phrase, "he made himself of no reputation," means that he laid aside or emptied himself of that which originally and eternally belonged to him. He used his equality with God as an opportunity, not for self-exaltation, but for self-abasement.

"That at the name of Jesus:"—Alford renders this, "That in the name of Jesus every knee should bend," in prayer or adoration.

17. "If I be offered;"—if I be called upon to suffer martyrdom in my efforts to promote among you that faith which is a sacrifice acceptable unto God, I shall count my sufferings a cause for joy, knowing that thereby I can testify the sincerity of my love towards you.

CHAPTER III.

2. "Beware of dogs;"—a designation very often used in reference to profane or impure persons, and here used in reference to corrupt teachers.

3. "We are the circumcision:"—the "concision," spoken of in the preceding verse, points to those who had been circumcised in the flesh, and who

12 Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus.[a]

13 Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before,[b]

14 I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.[c]

15 Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you.[d]

16 Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.[e]

17 Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an ensample.[f]

18 (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ:[g]

19 Whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things.)[h]

20 For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ:[i]

21 Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.[j]

CHAPTER IV.

1 From particular admonitions 4 he proceedeth to general exhortations, 10 shewing how he rejoiced at their liberality towards him lying in prison, not so much for the supply of his own wants, as for the grace of God in them. 19 And so he concludeth with prayer and salutations

THEREFORE, my brethren dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved.[k]

2 I beseech Euodias, and beseech Syntyche, that they be of the same mind in the Lord.[l]

3 And I intreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and with other my fellowlabourers, whose names are in the book of life.[m]

4 Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say, Rejoice.[n]

5 Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand.[o]

6 Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.[p]

7 And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.[q]

8 Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are [1]honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.[r]

9 Those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God of peace shall be with you.[s]

10 But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your care of me [2]hath flourished again; wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity.[t]

11 Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content.[u]

12 I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need.[v]

13 I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.[w]

14 Notwithstanding ye have well done, that ye did communicate with my affliction.[x]

15 Now ye Philippians know also, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated with me as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only.[y]

16 For even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again unto my necessity.

17 Not because I desire a gift: but I desire fruit that may abound to your account.[z]

18 But [3]I have all, and abound: I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you, an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, wellpleasing to God.[a]

19 But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.[b]

20 Now unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. Amen.[c]

21 Salute every saint in Christ Jesus. The brethren which are with me greet you.[d]

22 All the saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Cæsar's household.[e]

23 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.[f]

¶ It was written to the Philippians from Rome by Epaphroditus.

rested in that alone; while "the circumcision" were those who had been regenerated and renewed in heart, and offered spiritual worship to God, relying on the work of Christ alone for eternal life.

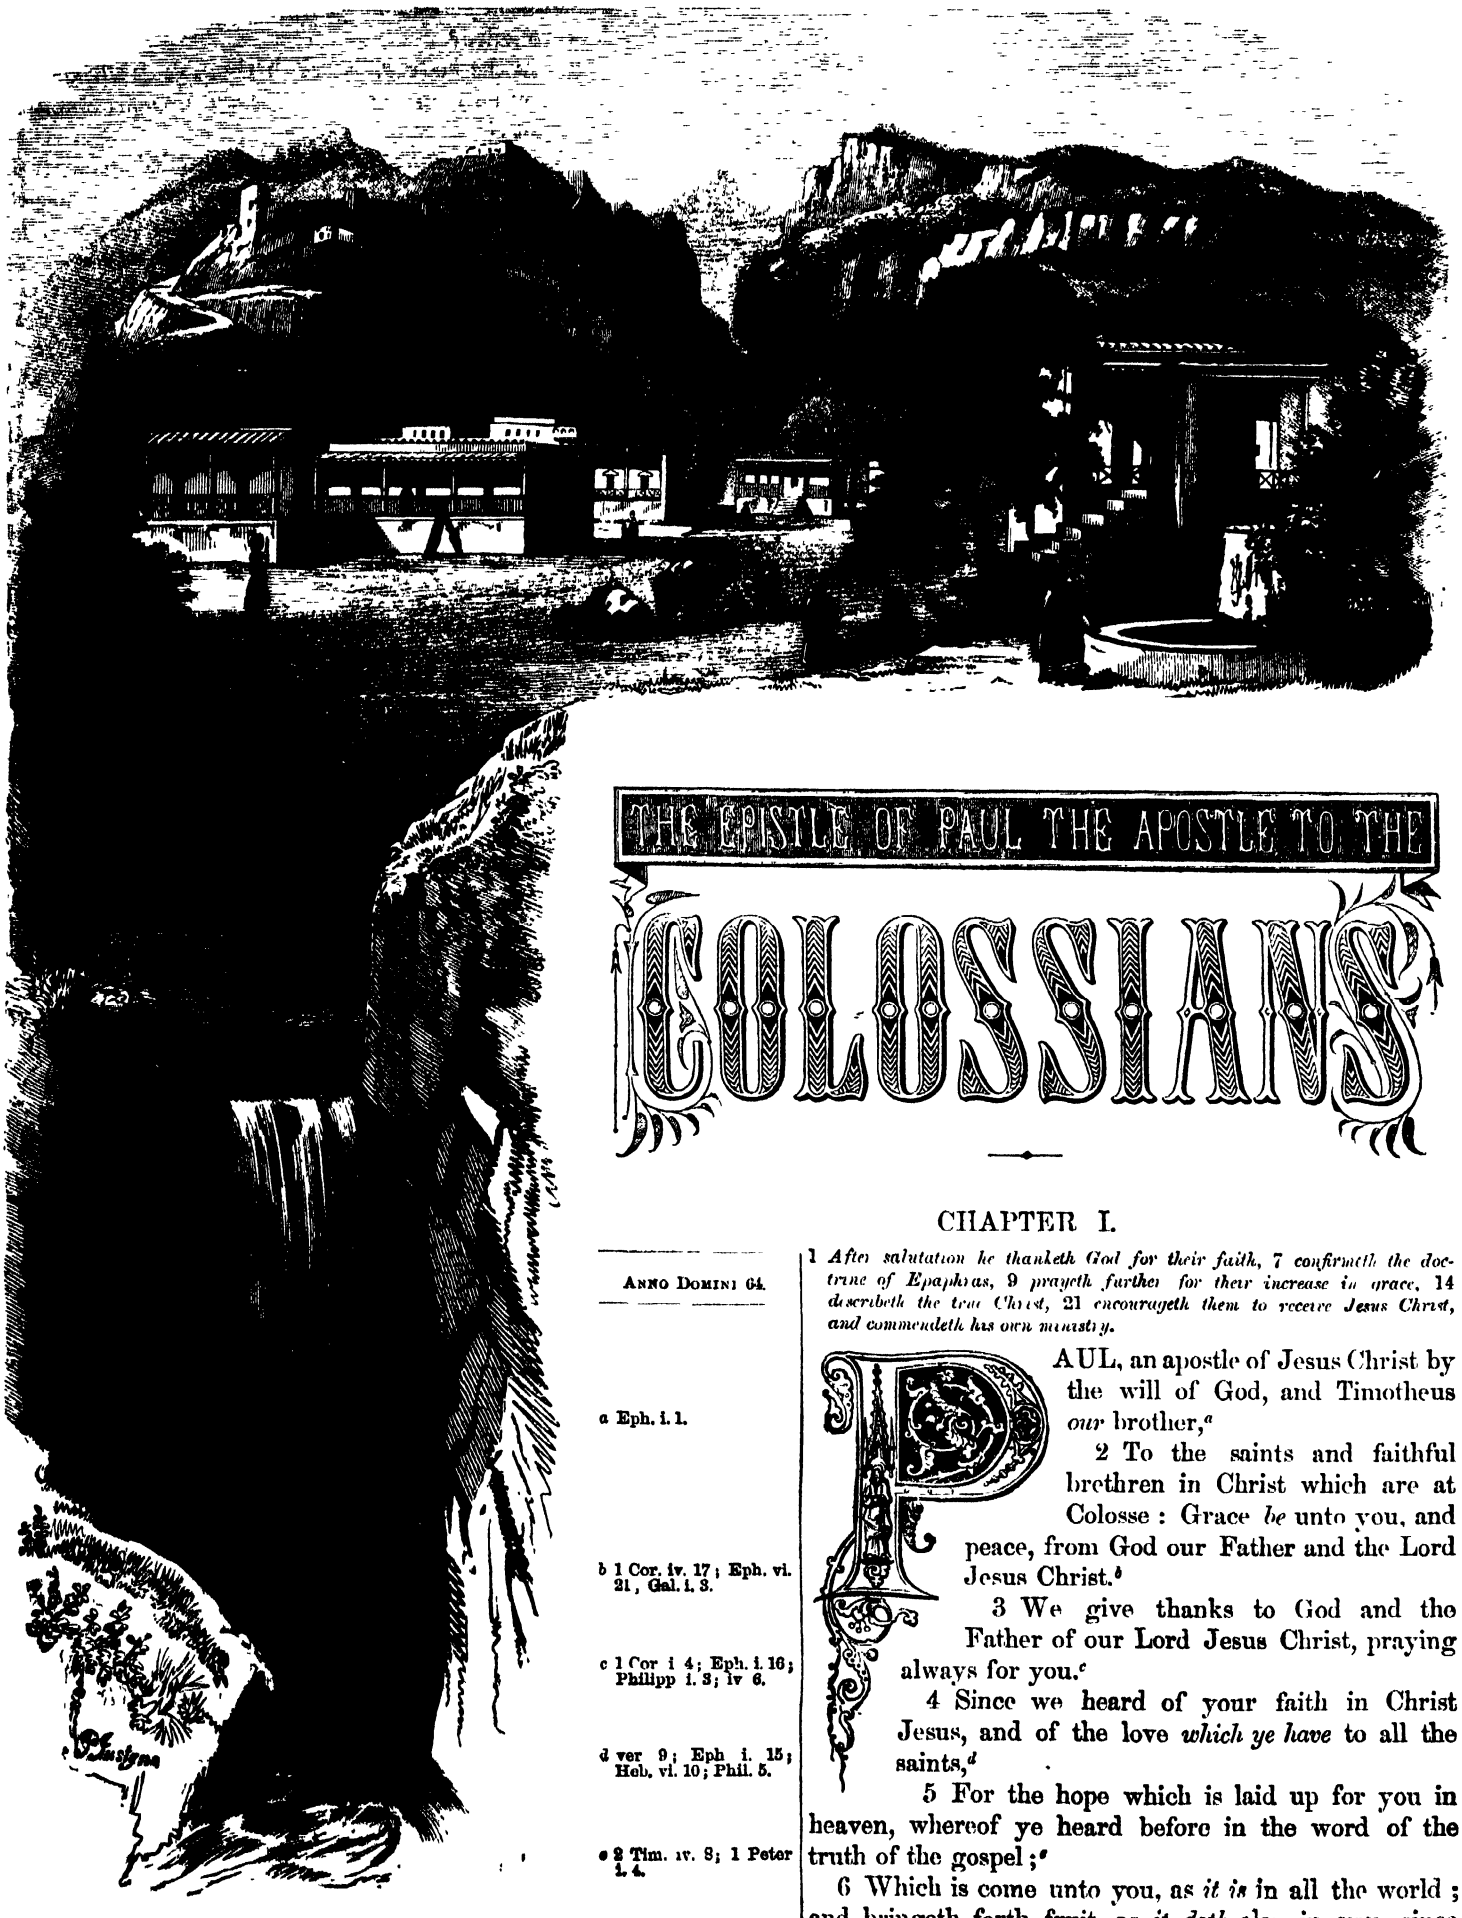
6. "Blameless:"—he so fulfilled the law, in all its external requirements, as to appear perfect or irreproachable in the sight of men; but perfect before God, who looks on the heart, he was not.

CHAPTER IV



1. "Therefore, my brethren dearly beloved," since we have our conversation or citizenship in heaven, and are to be glorified with Christ himself, let us be fixed and immovable in our adherence to Christ and the Gospel.

2. "I beseech Euodias:"—it may be that there was some disunion prevailing betwen these two good women, whose services in the Church the Apostle fully appreciated.—See Rom xvi. 1.

4. "Again I say, Rejoice:"—he began his third chapter with this call to higher joy, and he here repeats it.

5. "Let your moderation be known:"—their whole course of life and character was to be so regulated before men as to give most certain evidence of their relation to Christ and his kingdom; and this in prospect of their Lord's coming, so as to be found of him in peace.

6. "Be careful for nothing."—the word rendered "careful" points to that state of mind which involves intense solicitude and anxiety, which must imply a distrust in God's watchful providence, and also interfere with that quiet and composure of mind which ought to distinguish the followers of Christ.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS

CHAPTER I.

ANNO DOMINI 64.

1 After salutation he thanketh God for their faith, 7 confirmeth the doctrine of Epaphras, 9 prayeth further for their increase in grace, 14 describeth the true Christ, 21 encourageth them to receive Jesus Christ, and commendeth his own ministry.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timotheus our brother,[a]

2 To the saints and faithful brethren in Christ which are at Colosse: Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.[b]

3 We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you,[c]

4 Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints,[d]

5 For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel;[e]

6 Which is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth :[a]

7 As ye also learned of Epaphras our dear fellow-servant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ ;[b]

8 Who also declared unto us your love in the Spirit.[c]

9 For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding ;[d]

10 That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God ;[e]

11 Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness ;[f]

12 Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light :[g]

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of [1]his dear Son :[h]

14 In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins :[i]

15 Who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature :[j]

16 For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers : all things were created by him, and for him :[k]

17 And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.[l]

18 And he is the head of the body, the church : who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead ; that [2]in all things he might have the preeminence.[m]

CHAPTER I.

Colossæ, which was formerly a large and important city of Phrygia, was situated on the river Lycus, in the vicinity of Laodicea and Hierapolis The engraving at the head of this Epistle represents the modern village of Khonas, which is believed to occupy a portion of the site of ancient Colossæ. Extensive ruins still exist in its vicinity; the most prominent is a strong castle built upon a rock.

Though St Paul travelled twice through Phrygia (Acts xvi. 6; xviii. 23), it is more than probable, from his own words in this Epistle (chap. ii. 1), that he never touched at this city of Colossæ, since he includes the Colossians among those whom he had never seen in the flesh. The foundation of the Church in that city cannot therefore be ascribed to him. By the best authorities this is said to have been done by Epaphras, who was with St. Paul, at Rome, when the latter wrote this Epistle, and from whom St. Paul derived the information which induced him to write one of his apostolic letters to a community personally unknown to him.

Whether the Church was founded prior or subsequently to Paul's second journey into Phrygia, is uncertain; but if, as we learn from Acts xviii. 23, the object of that second journey was to "strengthen all the disciples," we can scarcely conceive of his omitting to visit Colossæ if a Church then existed there. It is very likely that Epaphras, a native of Colossæ, came into contact and communion with the Apostle during his sojourn in Ephesus (Acts xix.), and that he carried the seeds of Christian truth into his native city, where, under the fructifying influence of the Spirit of God, they took root, and resulted in the foundation of the Church, A.D 62; and thus our Apostle stood in very peculiar relations to this body.

1—4 "Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ:"—see the salutations to the Romans, Corinthians, and Ephesians.

5. "For the hope:"—did the Apostle give thanks for the hope, or for them as those in whom God had effectually wrought and made meet for that inheritance which to them was an object of joyous hope? The latter we conceive to be the true interpretation. Hope, then, is put for the object of hope—final and everlasting blessedness.

7. "As ye also learned of Epaphras:"—he introduced Christianity into Colossæ, and had taught them its doctrines and truths.

13 "The power of darkness:"—"Darkness" was one of the names given by the Jews to Satan.

18. "He is the head of the body:"—the Apostle passes from the outward universe to the moral creation, of which he is "the beginning," or the founder, as well as the Head; and in whose resurrection, as the first who rose with a glorified and perfected humanity, we have the pledge and assurance of the perfection and glorification of the whole Church. He, therefore, has in all things the pre-eminence or the priority. For God was pleased that in him should all fulness dwell, that from that fulness he might fill up and perfect the whole universe of being.

24. "That which is behind of the afflictions of Christ:"—we are not to suppose, even for a moment, that the mediatorial sufferings were in any sense incomplete; otherwise the whole work of Christ, as the Deliverer, becomes void; but as the sufferings which now fall to the lot of his devoted followers are designed to assimilate his disciples to himself, and as they have to enter into rest through much tribulation, they may be said to fill up that which is behind of the afflictions and sorrows of Christ.

acknowledgement of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ;[a]

3 [1]In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.[b]

4 And this I say, lest any man should beguile you with enticing words.[c]

5 For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order, and the stedfastness of your faith in Christ.[d]

6 As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him:[e]

7 Rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving.[f]

8 Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the [2]rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.[g]

9 For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.[h]

10 And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power:[i]

11 In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ:[j]

12 Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.[k]

13 And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses;[l]

14 Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross;[m]

15 And having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them [3]in it.[n]

16 Let no man therefore judge you [4]in meat, or in drink, or [5]in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days:[o]

17 Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ.[p]

18 Let no man [6]beguile you of your reward [7]in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels, intruding into those things which he hath not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind,[q]

19 And not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God.[r]

20 Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the [8]rudiments of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances,[s]

21 (Touch not; taste not; handle not;[t]

22 Which all are to perish with the using;) after the commandments and doctrines of men?[u]

23 Which things have indeed a shew of wisdom in will worship, and humility, and [9]neglecting of the body; not in any honour to the satisfying of the flesh.[v]

CHAPTER III.

1 He sheweth where we should seek Christ. 5 He exhorteth to mortification, 10 to put off the old man, and to put on Christ, 12 exhorting to charity, humility, and other several duties.

IF ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.[w]

2 Set your [10]affection on things above, not on things on the earth.

3 For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God.[x]

4 When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.[y]

5 Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry:[z]

6 For which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience:[a]

7 In the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them.[b]

8 But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.[c]

9 Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds;[d]

10 And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him:[e]

11 Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Christ is all, and in all.[f]

CHAPTER II.

1, 2. "What great conflict:"—this may refer to those sufferings in which, according to chap. i. 24, he rejoiced, as endured for Christ's sake, and in the promotion of their spiritual welfare; and also to that inward suffering which he experienced on their behalf, lest they should be drawn away from a pure and simple faith in Christ Jesus. He knew the danger to which they were exposed; and his supreme desire was that their hearts might be comforted or strengthened, being knit together in love—love being the essential element of unity, and unity the element of strength; and thus united they might have such a thorough understanding and knowledge of the transcendent doctrines of Christianity, as to lead them not only to avow their belief in them, but to glory in them. The term "mystery" is a favourite one with Paul to express the whole scheme of redeeming mercy, and which had not hitherto been clearly and fully revealed.

11. "The circumcision of Christ;"—that is, the new state which is effected through the work of Christ and by faith in him.

15. "Spoiled principalities and powers:"—the reference is to the powers of darkness, with whom the Saviour entered into deep but triumphant conflict.

17. "The body is of Christ:"—Christ is the substance of all of which the law was only the shadow.

18. "In a voluntary humility:"—with a humility which the Word of God does not enjoin, they professed to worship angels as an intermediate order of being, and as intercessors—God being too exalted and too distant for man to approach; thus dishonouring Almighty God by a disbelief in his condescension, and by setting some imaginary bound to his knowledge and his power

20 "The rudiments of the world,"—that is, the mere outward ritual of worship. They professed to be dead with Christ, and therefore to be the subjects of a new and spiritual life. As the subjects of this higher life, he asks them how they could submit to go back to mere outward rites, and this in obedience to the commandments and doctrines of men.

CHAPTER III.

1. "If ye then be risen with Christ:"—in the preceding chapter he had spoken to them as those who professed not only to be dead with Christ, and even buried with him in baptism, but as those who were risen with him through the faith of the operation of God; and now he exhorts them to that course of action which became the followers of a risen and glorified Saviour.

3. "Your life is hid:"—not their inward spiritual life, but their resurrection life; and hence they are to look forward to the time when Christ shall appear, to enjoy life in its perfection.

5. "Mortify therefore your members:"—these verses embody a series of exhortations to purity of character, arising out of purity of principle. A Christian life must have its root in Christian principles; therefore, practice must be founded on doctrines, and doctrines must lead to practice

12 Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering;[a]

13 Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a [1]quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.[b]

14 And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness.[c]

15 And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful.[d]

16 Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.[e]

17 And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.[f]

18 Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.[g]

19 Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them.[h]

20 Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord.[i]

21 Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.[j]

22 Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God:[k]

23 And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men;[l]

24 Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ.[m]

25 But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons.[n]

CHAPTER IV.

1 He exhorteth them to be fervent in prayer, 5 to walk wisely toward them that are not yet come to the true knowledge of Christ 10 He saluteth them, and wisheth them all prosperity.

MASTERS, give unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven.[o]

2 Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving;[p]

3 Withal praying also for us, that God would open unto us a door of utterance, to speak the mystery of Christ, for which I am also in bonds:[q]

4 That I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak.

5 Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time.[r]

6 Let your speech be alway with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man.[s]

7 All my state shall Tychicus declare unto you, who is a beloved brother, and a faithful minister and fellowservant in the Lord:[t]

8 Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that he might know your estate, and comfort your hearts;[u]

9 With Onesimus, a faithful and beloved brother, who is one of you. They shall make known unto you all things which are done here.[v]

10 Aristarchus my fellowprisoner saluteth you, and Marcus, sister's son to Barnabas, (touching whom ye received commandments: if he come unto you, receive him;)[w]

11 And Jesus, which is called Justus, who are of the circumcision. These only are my fellowworkers unto the kingdom of God, which have been a comfort unto me.

12 Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ, saluteth you, always [2]labouring fervently for you in prayers, that ye may stand perfect and [3]complete in all the will of God.[x]

13 For I bear him record, that he hath a great zeal for you, and them that are in Laodicea, and them in Hierapolis.

14 Luke, the beloved physician, and Demas, greet you.[y]

15 Salute the brethren which are in Laodicea, and Nymphas, and the church which is in his house.[z]

16 And when this epistle is read among you, cause that it be read also in the church of the Laodiceans; and that ye likewise read the epistle from Laodicea.[a]

17 And say to Archippus, Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it.[b]

18 The salutation by the hand of me Paul. Remember my bonds. Grace be with you. Amen.[c]

11. "Where there is neither Greek nor Jew:"—within the circle and sphere of this new spiritual life all outward distinctions are merged and lost.

14 "The bond of perfectness;"—just as the Oriental was wont to gather up and bind his dress with a girdle or belt, so love is that which compacts and binds together all other virtues.

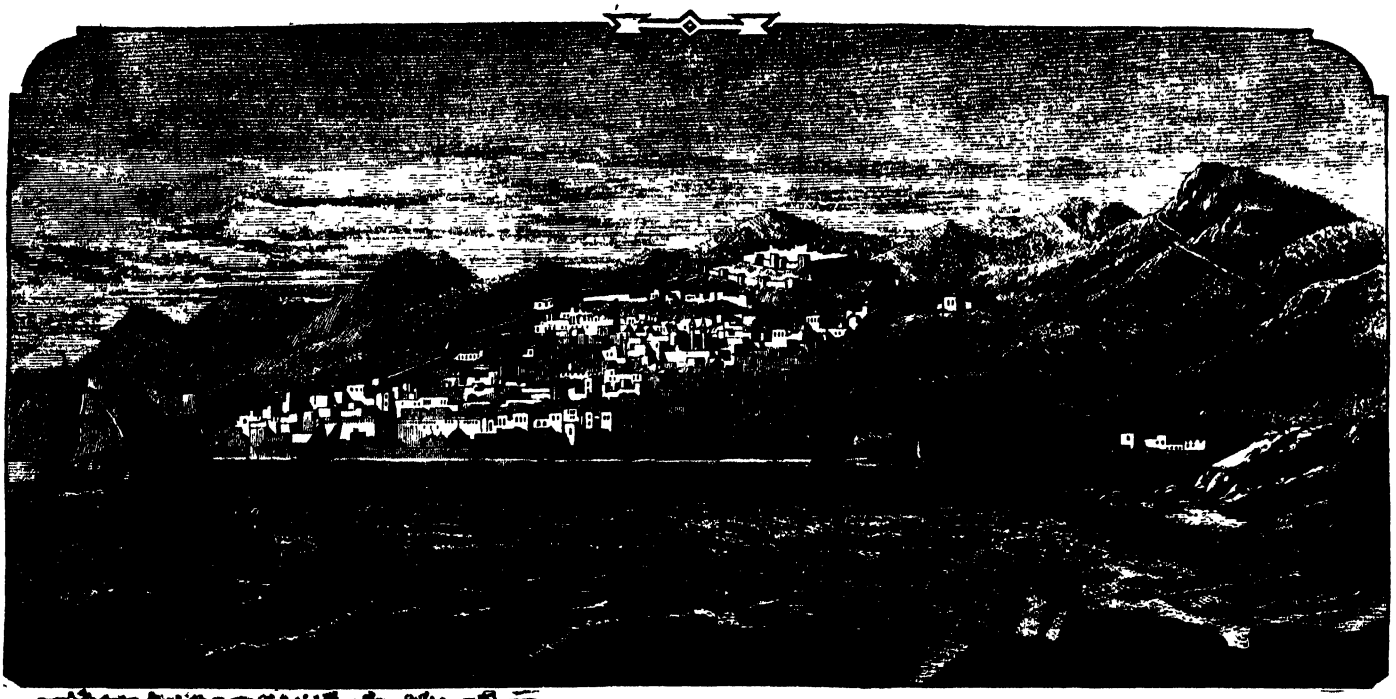
16. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly:"—here the first clause of the verse should end, and what follows should read thus:—"In all wisdom teaching and admonishing one another; in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts."

18—iv. 1. "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands:"—on the relative social duties here enjoined, see Eph. vi. 1—8. The first verse of the fourth chapter clearly belongs to the preceding chapter.

CHAPTER IV.

2. "Watch in the same:"—prayer, to be effectual, must ever be accompanied with wakefulness and watchfulness. There must be neither languor nor torpor, neither sloth nor supineness. If the soul be filled with a sense of God's rich mercy, prayer will rise into thanksgiving, and oft be swallowed up in praise.

3. "A door of utterance:"—an opening and an opportunity for the wider diffusion of the Gospel. The Apostle anticipates his release, and with his release renewed labour in the service of Christ.



5. "Walk in wisdom;"—in the exercise of that prudence and discretion which become the children of God.

6. "With grace;"—characterised by all that is chaste and pure, kind and winning. "Seasoned with salt;"—having in it that which is salutary.

9, 10. There can be little doubt that Onesimus, here named, is the same with that mentioned in the Epistle to Philemon; and Aristarchus, as we learn from Acts xx. 4, was a Thessalonian, who accompanied Paul in his travels in Asia. Marcus is the same with the Evangelist Mark.

12—14. Demas was now associated with the Apostle in his holy work, but afterwards deserted him from love to the world.—See 2 Tim. iv. 10. Nymphas appears to have been some active member of the Colossian Church.

16. "The Epistle from Laodicea:"—this clause has given birth to a great deal of controversy; but the letter referred to is generally supposed to be that addressed to the Ephesians, which was what is termed a circular letter, and was therefore sent round to be read to the members of various Churches, and, among others, to the Church at Laodicea, with instructions to be forwarded by them to Colossæ; so that, with the greatest correctness, it might be said to be from Laodicea.

THE FIRST

EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE

TO THE THESSALONIANS

CHAPTER I.

ANNO DOMINI 51.

1 The Thessalonians are given to understand both how mindful of them Saint Paul was at all times in thanksgiving, and prayer 5 and also how well he was persuaded of the truth and sincerity of their faith, and conversion to God.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians which is in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ: Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.[a]

2 We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers ;[b]

3 Remembering without ceasing your work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God and our Father ;[c]

4 Knowing, brethren [1]beloved, your election of God.[d]

5 For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance ; as ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sake.[e] a 2 Cor. i 19; Eph i 2; 2 Thess. i. 1, 1 Peter v. 12.

b Rom. i. 8; Eph. i. 16; Phil. 4.

c ch. ii 13; iii. 6; John vi 29, Rom xvi 6; Gal. v. 6; 2 Thess. i 3, 11, Heb. vi. 10, James ii 17

1 Or, beloved of God, your election

d Col iii 12; 2 Thess. ii 13

e ch. ii 1, 5, 10, 11; Mark xvi 20; 1 Cor. ii. 4; iv. 20; 2 Cor. vi. 6; Col. ii. 2; 2 Thess. iii. 7; Heb. ii. 3.

6 And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghost :[a]

7 So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia.

8 For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad ; so that we need not to speak any thing.[b]

9 For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God ;[c]

10 And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.[d]

CHAPTER II.

1 In what manner the gospel was brought and preached to the Thessalonians, and in what sort also they received it. 18 A reason is rendered both why Saint Paul was so long absent from them, and also why he was so desirous to see them.

FOR yourselves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not in vain :[e]

2 But even after that we had suffered before, and were shamefully entreated, as ye know, at Philippi, we were bold in our God to speak unto you the gospel of God with much contention.[f]

3 For our exhortation was not of deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in guile :[g]

4 But as we were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak ; not as pleasing men, but God, which trieth our hearts.[h]

5 For neither at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloke of covetousness ; God is witness :[i]

6 Nor of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when we might have [1]been burdensome, as the apostles of Christ.[j]

8 So being affectionately desirous of you, we were willing to have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us.[l]

9 For ye remember, brethren, our labour and travail : for labouring night and day, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the gospel of God.[m]

10 Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe :[n]

11 As ye know how we exhorted and comforted and charged every one of you, as a father doth his children,

12 That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.[o]

13 For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe.[p]

14 For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judæa are in Christ Jesus : for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews :[q]

15 Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have [2]persecuted us ; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men :[r]

16 Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway : for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.[s]

17 But we, brethren, being taken from you for a short time in presence, not in heart, endeavoured the more abundantly to see your face with great desire.[t]

18 Wherefore we would have come unto you, even I Paul, once and again ; but Satan hindered us.[u]

19 For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of [3]rejoicing ? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming ?[v]

20 For ye are our glory and joy.

CHAPTER I.

Thessalonica was a city of Macedonia, and, as the seat of a Roman prætor, was the capital of the second division of the province of Macedonia. It is said to have been built on the site of the ancient Therma, and was situated at the north-east extremity of the Sinus Thermaicus. It became a city of no little importance under Cassander, son of Antipater, who gave to it the name of Thessalonica, in honour of his wife Thessalonica, the daughter of Philip and sister of Alexander the Great. Hither Cassander brought the inhabitants of several adjacent towns ; and under the Romans it became rich and populous.

The modern name of the place is Salonica, or Saloniki, a view of which is given in the illustration at the head of this Epistle. "The walls give the town a very remarkable appearance, and cause it to be seen at a great distance, as they are whitewashed and painted." But the internal wretchedness of the place is in strange contrast with its picturesque aspect from the sea. The place is still one of importance, and has a large commercial population of probably 60,000 souls, very many of whom are Jews, who, even in the Apostle's times, were numerous enough to have a synagogue here The actual government is Turkish ; but there are ten or twelve thousand Greek Christians resident in the city. Thessalonica was visited by Paul about the year 51, and the effect of his ministry, as we learn from Acts xvii. 1—9, was that some of the Jews believed and consorted with Paul and Silas ; also of the devout Greeks a great multitude ; and of the chief women not a few. Having, in company with Paul and Silas, laid the foundation of a Church there, he left Thessalonica on account of a tumult raised by the unbelieving Jews, and made his escape by night to Berœa, and from thence he went by sea to Athens. Filled with holy solicitude about his converts, he sent Timotheus back to Thessalonica to learn their state. On his return, Timotheus reported well of them, and of their steadfastness in the faith.

To strengthen their faith and animate their hearts, the Apostle, who had gone from Athens to Corinth, wrote this First Letter to them, probably in the year 52, which early date will place this Epistle first in chronological order of all St. Paul's writings which are known to us. In the margin of our English Bibles the date given is A.D. 54.

1 "Paul and Silvanus."—see Acts xvii. 1—9 ; Rom. i. 1, 2 ; 1 Cor. i. 1, 2 ; Eph. i. 1, 2 ; Col. i. 1—3.

3 "Your work of faith ;"—all those practical doings which spring from faith and love, while "the patience of hope" bespeaks their power of endurance under the inspiring influence of hope.

4. "Your election of God :"—this rendering violates a law of Greek construction ; and, therefore, the preferable reading is, "Knowing, brethren beloved of God, your election"—under what circumstances ye were converted to the Christian faith.

5. "In much assurance" refers not to the confidence reposed in the Gospel by the Thessalonians, but to the unwavering firmness with which Paul and his associates had proclaimed it.

6, 7. "And ye became followers of us ;"—avowed their adherence to the Christian faith, and their preparedness to suffer for it.—See Acts xvii. 5—10.

10. "To wait for his Son from heaven :"—the second coming of Christ was a favourite theme with our Apostle, as involving the consummation of Christian hope, and a manifestation of the Redeemer's glory.

CHAPTER II.

1, 2. "Our entrance in unto you :"—he appeals to their own knowledge of his course of life and action while in Thessalonica, and of the painful circumstances under which he had introduced the Gospel among them, to confirm their faith in the truth which they had embraced.

CHAPTER III.

1 Saint Paul testifieth his great love to the Thessalonians, partly by sending Timothy unto them to strengthen and comfort them: partly by rejoicing in their well doing: 10 and partly by praying for them, and desiring a safe coming unto them.

THEREFORE when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone ;[a]

2 And sent Timotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellow-labourer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith :[b]

3 That no man should be moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto.[c]

4 For verily, when we were with you, we told you before that we should suffer tribulation; even as it came to pass, and ye know.[d]

5 For this cause, when I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, lest by some means the tempter have tempted you, and our labour be in vain.[e]

6 But now when Timotheus came from you unto us and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us, as we also to see you :[f]

7 Therefore, brethren, we were comforted over you in all our affliction and distress by your faith :[g]

8 For now we live, if ye stand fast in the Lord.[h]

9 For what thanks can we render to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we joy for your sakes before our God ;[i]

10 Night and day praying exceedingly that we might see your face, and might perfect that which is lacking in your faith ?[j]

11 Now God himself and our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, [1]direct our way unto you.[k]

12 And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you :[l]

FURTHERMORE then we [2]beseech you, brethren, and [3]exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and to please God, so ye would abound more and more.[n]

2 For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 For this is the will of God, even your sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication :[o]

4 That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honour ;[p]

5 Not in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles which know not God :[q]

6 That no man go beyond and [4]defraud his brother [5]in any matter: because that the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified.[r]

7 For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness.[s]

8 He therefore that [6]despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us his holy Spirit.[t]

9 But as touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you: for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another.[u]

10 And indeed ye do it toward all the brethren which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more and more ;[v]

11 And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your

3. "Not of deceit:"—in his ministry there was nothing of imposture, of personal indulgence, of false dealing. He commended himself to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

6. "Might have been burdensome"—the Apostle might have claimed the means of subsistence from them, on the principle that the labourer is worthy of his hire, and that, having reaped spiritual good from him, it was their bounden duty to communicate to him of their temporal substance; but this right he waived.

14. "Followers of the churches . . . in Judæa;"—in enduring, like them, for Christ and the Gospel.

15. "Contrary to all men;"—that is, the Jews, as a people, were opposed to the extension of spiritual privilege and blessing to the Gentile nations, since they conceived of them as given up to the wrath of God.

18. "Satan hindered us;"—that is, through human agency and influence.

CHAPTER III.

1, 2. "No longer forbear:"—such was his deep-seated affection for them, and his solicitude for their well-being, that he could no longer endure his absence from them; and therefore he was willing to be left alone at Athens, and dispense with the society and presence of Timothy for a time for their sake.

3. "Moved by these afflictions:"—the sufferings to which both he and they were subject as the followers of Christ might have disquieted the minds of some, and might have shaken the faith of others. Hence his desire to visit them, and hence his forwardness to send Timothy to encourage and strengthen them.

5. "I sent to know your faith;"—or, their persistence in the faith, or their fortitude in maintaining their Christian character in its integrity and purity. Had they proved unfaithful to their profession, or had they been seduced from the truth as it is in Jesus, his labour would have been in vain.

7 "Were comforted over you in all our affliction and distress:"—the intelligence brought by Timothy of their stability, perseverance, and devotedness was like a renewal of strength to the Apostle. He arose above his sufferings and his sorrows, and became conscious of invigorated energy.

8. "Now we live:"—just as their apostacy would have weighed his spirit down to death, so their stability in the midst of opposition and suffering was nothing short of life itself. His very life was bound up with their perseverance. Nothing could more strongly or emphatically express the intensity of his affection and love.

10. "Perfect that which is lacking:"—they were far from being matured in their Christian faith and character. Comparatively, they were yet novices, and hence had much to learn from a teacher so advanced in Christian enlightenment and consciousness as our Apostle.

13. "Unblameable in holiness before God"—to reach such a state is the perfection of Christian attainment.

CHAPTER IV.

1. "To please God:"—this they were to do by adorning the doctrine of God their Saviour in all things, by their life being the embodiment and expression of holy and transforming principles. The Gospel is according to godliness, and in such practical godliness he beseeches them, in the name of Christ, to abound yet more and more.

own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you;[a]

12 That ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack [1]of nothing.[b]

13 But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope.[c]

14 For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.[d]

15 For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep.[e]

16 For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first:[f]

17 Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.[g]

18 Wherefore [2]comfort one another with these words.[h]

CHAPTER V.

1 He proceedeth in the former description of Christ's coming to judgment, 16 and giveth divers precepts, 23 and so concludeth the epistle.

BUT of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you.[i]

2 For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.[j]

3 For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.[k]

4 But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.[l]

5 Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.[m]

6 Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.[n]

7 For they that sleep sleep in the night; and they that be drunken are drunken in the night.[o]

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation.[p]

9 For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ,[q]

10 Who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.[r]

11 Wherefore [3]comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do.[s]

12 And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;[t]

13 And to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake. And be at peace among yourselves.[u]

14 Now we [4]exhort you, brethren, warn them that are [5]unruly, comfort the feebleminded, support the weak, be patient toward all men.[v]

15 See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men.[w]

16 Rejoice evermore.[x]

17 Pray without ceasing.[y]

18 In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.[z]

19 Quench not the Spirit.[a]

20 Despise not prophesyings.[b]

21 Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.[c]

22 Abstain from all appearance of evil.[d]

23 And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.[e]

24 Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it.[f]

25 Brethren, pray for us.[g]

26 Greet all the brethren with an holy kiss.[h]

27 I [6]charge you by the Lord that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren.[i]

28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.[j]

¶ The first epistle unto the Thessalonians was written from Athens.

2. "What commandments we gave you:"—the reference, no doubt, is to those instructions which he had addressed to them in the name and on the authority of the Lord Jesus, while he was among them.

4. "Possess his vessel in sanctification and honour."—in the preceding verse he had exhorted them to preserve purity in all their actions, and the Apostle proceeds to show that this personal purity is one of the marks that distinguish the followers of Christ from the Gentiles.

6. "That no man go beyond and defraud his brother:"—the Christian law limits the husband to his own wife, and thus he is not to covet his neighbour's wife, and so transgress the law, and injure his brother.

11. "Study to be quiet"—it appears from this verse that there were those in the Church of Thessalonica who were given to strife, and others to sloth; both of which were in direct opposition to the genius and requirements of the Christian faith.

13. "Them which are asleep:"—this is only another and more Christian mode of expressing the death of the body, there is no reference to the sleep or unconsciousness of the soul in the intermediate state. As the Christian is taught to look forward to "the morn of the resurrection," so he is permitted to regard death under the figure of sleep, and he is enjoined not to be sorry, as men without hope, for them that "sleep in Jesus."

15. "We which are alive and remain:"—we learn from the Apostle's words to the Corinthians that we shall not all sleep. Thousands of believers will be alive on the earth at Christ's coming. But these are not to prevent or precede those who are asleep. That is, in reference to the change which is to take place in the living, this will not take place till the dead are raised.

16. "The dead in Christ shall rise first;"—that is, before the change is effected upon those who are alive.

CHAPTER V.

1. "No need that I write unto you."—it had, no doubt, formed part of the Apostle's teaching while among them.

2. "The day of the Lord:"—this can legitimately be referred only to the second or final advent of our Lord at the consummation of all things.

4. "Are not in darkness:"—having expressed the suddenness of Christ's coming, and the unexpectedness with which it would overtake those who were in spiritual ignorance and indifference, like men sunk in deeper sleep, he reminds the Thessalonians that, sudden as the event might be, it was one for which they, if really enlightened and awakened, were looking and waiting, and therefore could not come upon them unexpectedly.

5—7. "Ye are all the children of light:"—in these verses light is opposed to darkness, day to night, watchfulness to sleep. In the one case the mind was enlightened, wakeful, and in possession of all active power: while in the other, the man was in ignorance, insensibility, stupor, and inaction.

8. "Putting on the breastplate:"—not only were they to be awake and sober, but to be armed as sentinels on guard, prepared for any sudden attack, and therefore in readiness for Christ's advent, come when or how it might.

CHAPTER I.

1 Saint Paul certifieth them of the good opinion which he had of their faith, love, and patience 11 and therewithal useth divers reasons for the comforting of them in persecution, whereof the chiefest is taken from the righteous judgment of God.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians in God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:[a]

2 Grace unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.[b]

3 We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth;[c]

4 So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure:[d]

CHAPTER I.

Mistaking some expressions of the Apostle in his preceding letter on the doctrine of Christ's second advent, the Thessalonians had become unsettled in their minds and views. This affected the consistency of their Christian character and conversation. Their mode of life became subject to impeachment and blame; and this it was which supplied the occasion, the necessity for this Second Epistle, in which the Apostle seeks to rectify their mistaken notions about our Lord's coming; intimates to them a long series of intervening events, whose development would require ages of time; pours into their hearts the richest consolation under their present sufferings; and exhorts them to a walk and conversation becoming the Gospel.

This Second Epistle is, with few exceptions, admitted to be the production of St. Paul, as is evident from the matter and from the style, and its date may be fixed early in A.D. 53, or about a year later than the first, and when the Apostle was in possession of more intelligence respecting the actual state of the Church. Like the first letter, it was written from Athens

1: "Paul, and Silvanus, and Timotheus:"—we find the same association in the First Epistle; and this circumstance, says Alford, "would at once direct us to Corinth, where Silas and Timotheus rejoined St. Paul (Acts xviii. 5), and we do not read that they accompanied him in his departure for Asia" (Acts xviii. 18).

3. "Your faith groweth exceedingly:"—faith here must be understood in the sense of Christian principle and character—principle being the foundation of character, and character the outward and visible embodiment of the inward principle.

4. "Glory in you in the churches:"—such were the height and force of their Christian attainment, that he could hold them up as examples to the Churches in Corinth and Achaia. Their constancy in confession of the truth in the midst of suffering was such as to stimulate other believers, and inspire them with the same moral heroism.

5. "Which is a manifest token"—what is the token or proof? Their power and patience of endurance for Christ's sake was a certain proof of that righteous retribution which would come upon their adversaries when the Lord appeared as Judge of all; and at the same time, the precursor of their own future exaltation and glory in the kingdom of God

6. "It is a righteous thing:"—such procedure is founded on the immutable principles of eternal justice, in the exercise of which every man will receive according to his deeds.

7 "To you who are troubled:"—they were afflicted, tried, persecuted by those without; but in the power to endure which they exhibited and exemplified, they enjoyed a deeper rest of spirit, while that holy, inward quiet was a certain pledge to them of perfect rest and sinless joy in the kingdom of Christ at his coming.

"With his mighty angels,"—according to some authorities (Dean Alford and others), this rendering "obscures the sense" They would prefer the marginal reading, "the angels of his power," on the ground that "the might of the angels is no element here, but HIS might, of which they are the angels, serving HIS power, and proclaiming HIS might." But this is carrying criticism into weakness. If angels be HIS servants or messengers, then their might, or strength, or power, are gifts from HIM, to be employed in HIS service. And there is nothing which they do in which his glory is not their aim and end our God would [1]count you worthy of this calling, and fulfil all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power:[a]

12 That the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.[b]

CHAPTER II.

1 He willeth them to continue stedfast in the truth received, 3 sheweth that there shall be a departure from the faith, 9 and a discovery of antichrist, before the day of the Lord come. 15 And thereupon repeateth his former exhortation, and prayeth for them.

NOW we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him,[c]

2 That ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand.[d]

3 Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition;[e]

4 Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God.[f]

5 Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things?

6 And now ye know what [2]withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time.

7 For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way.[g]

8 And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming:[h]

9 Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders,[i]

10 And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.[j]

11 And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie:[k]

12 That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.[l]

13 But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth:[m]

14 Whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.[n]

15 Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle.[o]

16 Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace,[p]

17 Comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work.[q]

8. "In flaming fire:"—the flame is nothing less than the burning radiance of his own inherent and eternal glory.

9. "From the presence of the Lord:"—separation from God as the source of holiness and of happiness will form a part of the punishment of the finally impenitent—that part which is defined to be "the punishment of privation," as distinguished from bodily suffering.

11. "Count you worthy of this calling:"—what calling? Does it refer to their being originally called by God's grace into the kingdom of his Son, or to that grand consummation of their faith and hope in future, everlasting glory? To the latter, beyond all question. They, as partakers of the grace of God, were called to glory; and his prayer was that God would count them worthy of this glory, by producing in them stability and perseverance in the Christian life, and to this end, that he would work in them, so as to fulfil, complete, or perfect that inward goodness or moral excellence which is in harmony with his own infinite mind and will—the work of faith with power—so strengthening and maturing the inward principle, as effectually and mightily to reveal itself in all that is pure and holy, lovely, and of good report.

CHAPTER II.

1. "We beseech you."—the Thessalonians having misapprehended and even misinterpreted the Apostle's teaching on the doctrine of the Saviour's advent, he still keeps the subject before them, and beseeches them with an affectionate solicitude not to allow themselves to be drawn away, by any seductive influences whatever, from the ground which the whole Christian Church was justified in assuming and preserving on this interesting and important subject. This he presses upon them by the very fact of Christ's coming, and the no less cheering assurance that all believers were to be gathered into one in him, and with him were to rise and live for ever.

2. "Neither by spirit, nor by word;"—by no one affecting to have the spirit of prophetic revelation, on the one hand, nor, on the other, by any species of argumentation or show of reasoning. They were in great danger of being misled, and therefore he proceeds to instruct them as to that long series of events which is to precede the appearing of our Lord.

3 "That man of sin be revealed."—there is first to be an apostacy, or falling away from the truth; then the development of some great system of error and evil; and this concentration of error in creed and evil in conduct should be found in some personal existence, who, as a child of perdition, should be finally overcome and destroyed.

But who or what is this man of sin? The early Fathers regarded the passage as a prophecy still future from the time in which they lived and wrote, but yet looked upon the man of sin as an individual personal existence. The power which this existence was supposed to represent was, in their estimation, the Roman Empire. This view "remained for ages the prevalent one in the Church. Modifications were introduced into it as her relation to the State gradually altered, and the Church, at last, instead of being exposed to further hostilities from the secular power, rose to the head of that power, and penetrating larger and larger portions of the world, became a representation of the kingdom of God on earth, with an imposing hierarchy at her head." Out of this fact sprang up the idea in the eleventh century, that "the Antichrist foretold by St. Paul is the establishment and growing power of the Popedom." In the Papacy the earlier Reformers found the man of sin; and towards the period of the great restoration of the doctrines of the Gospel effected by Luther, the reference of Antichrist to the Papal hierarchy was very general. After that great event "it assumed almost the position of an established opinion in the Protestant Churches," both in England and in other countries.

In more recent times this interpretation and application of the Apostle's words has been called in question, and it has been asserted that we are not justified by the terms of the prophecy in applying it to any one existing system of error, or to any individual personal existence as the embodiment and expression of that system, since there can be found no one system and no one person in which all the terms of the prophecy are fulfilled. Still, these objectors are compelled to admit that the most remarkable type of the evils here predicted is the Papacy; and therefore, though the type may include other and lesser forms of evil, and hold them in connection with it, we believe the Papacy is essentially meant by the man of sin, in whose overthrow shall perish every false and anti-Christian power as linked with it and supported by it.

6—8. "Ye knew what withholdeth:"—the mystery of iniquity had begun to work even in the Apostolic ages, but it was held in check both by temporal power and moral influence, till the time came for its fuller development, and when the purposes of God might be carried into effect. But whatever may now hold the evil in check will be removed, and then the Wicked one who lifts himself above God and his ordinances will be revealed; the mystery of iniquity will reach its final development; but only to be swept away by the advancing truth of the Gospel and the glory of the Saviour's reign.

10. "All deceivableness of unrighteousness:"—just as all the power, and signs, and wonders affected by this lawless one are founded in falsehood, so they all deceive and lead to unrighteousness—to that which is bad in principle and godless in action. Hence the doom and the perdition of those who embrace such a system, to the rejection of the simple truth.

CHAPTER III.

1 He craveth their prayers for himself, 3 testifieth what confidence he hath in them, 5 maketh request to God in their behalf, 6 giveth them divers precepts, especially to shun idleness, and ill company, 16 and last of all concludeth with prayer and salutation.

FINALLY, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord [1]may have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you :[a]

2 And that we may be delivered from [2]unreasonable and wicked men : for all men have not faith.[b]

3 But the Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you, and keep you from evil.[c]

4 And we have confidence in the Lord touching you, that ye both do and will do the things which we command you.[d]

5 And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into [3]the patient waiting for Christ.[e]

6 Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us.[f]

7 For yourselves know how ye ought to follow us: for we behaved not ourselves disorderly among you;[g]

8 Neither did we eat any man's bread for nought; but wrought with labour and travail night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you :[h]

9 Not because we have not power, but to make ourselves an ensample unto you to follow us.[i]

10 For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat.[j]

11 For we hear that there are some which walk among you disorderly, working not at all, but are busybodies.[k]

12 Now them that are such we command and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread.[l]

13 But ye, brethren, [4]be not weary in well doing.[m]

14 And if any man obey not our word [5]by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed.[n]

15 Yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother.[o]

16 Now the Lord of peace himself give you peace always by all means. The Lord be with you all.[p]

17 The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every epistle: so I write.[q]

18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.[r]

CHAPTER III.

1. "The word of the Lord;"—another phrase for that glorious Gospel which had been committed to him, for whose universal propagation he had consecrated his life to the Saviour, and which is glorified in becoming the power of God unto salvation in them that believe

2. "Unreasonable and wicked men"—it is not unlikely that the Apostle here refers to those Jews at Corinth who set themselves in opposition to him and his ministry. (See Acts xviii.)

"All men have not faith,"—that is, have not embraced the faith, or the Gospel, and hence their opposition to it.

6 "Withdraw yourselves"—he does not insist on the excommunication of the disorderly and disobedient, which proves that the Church was still sound at the core; but only recommends that others should withdraw from their intercourse and fellowship with them.

"The tradition," as in the preceding chapter, must be referred to his oral and written instructions.

7—12. "Behaved not ourselves disorderly"—many of the Thessalonians, believing in the immediate advent of Christ, had abandoned their daily avocations, and given themselves up to idleness and its concomitants. Not so with the Apostle. In addition to his ministerial labours, he worked with his own hands for his support, and was thus an example for them to follow

14 "Our word by this epistle:"—the Epistle is replete with instructions, and if any one refused to conform his life and conduct to these instructions, he was to be noted and avoided, not excommunicated, but admonished; not treated as an outcast, or an enemy, but as a brother to be restored, and for whom Christ died.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

CHAPTER I.

CHAPTER 1

The three Pauline Epistles addressed to Timothy and Titus are almost universally received as the genuine composition of St. Paul They were written in the later years of the Apostle's life, when his labours were nearly completed, and his days were worn out with toil and suffering—the First Epistle to Timothy and the Epistle to Titus somewhere about A.D 64, and the Second Epistle to Timothy in A.D. 64—65, during his second imprisonment at Rome, and only a few months before he suffered martyrdom

The object of this Epistle was to repress certain heresies which were springing up in the Ephesian Church prejudicial to its life and action; and at the same time to supply Timothy with those directions which he needed for the government of the Church, which had been left in his charge by the Apostle during his own absence from Ephesus It was the intention of Paul to re-visit that city; but circumstances having arisen to detain him longer than he expected, he wrote his letter of counsel and instruction, to guide and encourage him in his evangelistic work and pastoral superintendence.

1. "By the commandment;"—that is, the appointment or ordination of God. "Our hope;"—inasmuch as hope terminates in HIM as its final object, and in HIM alone the hope of the Christian can be realised.

profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers,[a]

10 For whoremongers, for them that defile themselves with mankind, for menstealers, for liars, for perjured persons, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine;[b]

11 According to the glorious gospel of the blessed God, which was committed to my trust.[c]

12 And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry;[d]

13 Who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious: but I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief.[e]

14 And the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.[f]

15 This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.[g]

16 Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might shew forth all longsuffering, for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting.[h]

17 Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.[i]

18 This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare;[j]

19 Holding faith, and a good conscience; which some having put away concerning faith have made shipwreck:[k]

20 Of whom is Hymenæus and Alexander; whom I have delivered unto Satan, that they may learn not to blaspheme.[l]

CHAPTER II.

1 That it is meet to pray and give thanks for all men, and the reason why. 9 How women should be attired. 12 They are not permitted to teach. 15 They shall be saved, notwithstanding the testimonies of God's wrath, in childbirth, if they continue in faith.

[1]EXHORT therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men;

2 For kings, and for all that are in [2]authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty.[m]

3 For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour;[n]

4 Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.[o]

5 For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus;[p]

6 Who gave himself a ransom for all, [3]to be testified in due time.[q]

7 Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle, (I speak the truth in Christ, and lie not;) a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity.[r]

8 I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting.[s]

9 In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with [4]broided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array;[t]

10 But (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works.[u]

11 Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection.

12 But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence.[v]

13 For Adam was first formed, then Eve.[w]

14 And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression.[x]

15 Notwithstanding she shall be saved in childbearing, if they continue in faith and charity and holiness with sobriety.

CHAPTER III.

2 How bishops, and deacons, and their wives should be qualified, 14 and to what end Saint Paul wrote to Timothy of these things. 15 Of the church, and the blessed truth therein taught and professed.

THIS is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work.[y]

2 A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, [5]of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach;[z]

3 [6]Not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous;[a]

4 One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity;[b]

5 (For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?)

6 Not [7]a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil.[c]

7 Moreover he must have a good report of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil.[d]

8 Likewise must the deacons be grave, not doubletongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre;[e]

9 Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.[f]

3. "No other doctrine;"—no doctrine different from that which the Apostle himself had taught, and therefore inconsistent with the glorious Gospel.

4. "Which is in faith:"—faith in Christian doctrine tends to godly edification.

CHAPTER II.

1. "First of all:"—he does not mean that prayer for all men is to take the precedence or the priority in our intercessions; but this is the first exhortation which he addresses in his charge to Timothy.

4. "Who will have all men to be saved;"—or, as it may be rendered, "Who is willing that all men should be saved." Eternal life is offered equally to all by Scripture under the conditions of faith and obedience. (John iii. 15—17.) As God is thus merciful to men, our prayers and our exhortations for the salvation of others ought to correspond with this benevolent announcement.

6. "To be testified in due time:"—the saving grace of God in Christ was to be made known in this new era—this final dispensation.

CHAPTER III.

1. "The office of a bishop:"—the words "bishop," and "presbyter," and "elder" are used, says an able divine, in the New Testament to denote the same officer in the Church (Acts xx. 17); and therefore it is uncertain whether the Apostle, by this term, intends to designate ministers in general, or any who hold a higher position.

2. "The husband of one wife:"—does the Apostle here prohibit all second marriages in the case of those who were overseers in the Church? Or does

10 And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless.

11 Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.[a]

12 Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well.

13 For they that have [1]used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.[b]

14 These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly:

15 But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and [2]ground of the truth.[c]

16 And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was [3]manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory.[d]

CHAPTER IV.

1 He foretelleth that in the latter times there shall be a departure from the faith. 6 And to the end that Timothy might not fail in doing his duty, he furnisheth him with divers precepts belonging thereto.

NOW the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils;[e]

2 Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron;[f]

2 Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth.[g]

4 For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving:[h]

5 For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

6 If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained.[i]

8 For bodily exercise profiteth [4]little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.[k]

9 This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation.[l]

10 For therefore we both labour and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe.[m]

11 These things command and teach.[n]

14 Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery.[p]

15 Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear [5]to all.

16 Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee.[q]

CHAPTER V.

1 Rules to be observed in reproving. 3 Of widows. 17 Of elders. 23 A precept for Timothy's health. 24 Some men's sins go before unto judgment, and some men's do follow after.

REBUKE not an elder, but intreat him as a father; and the younger men as brethren;[r]

2 The elder women as mothers; the younger as sisters, with all

3 Honour widows that are widows indeed.[s]

4 But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn first to shew [6]piety at home, and to requite their parents: for that is good and acceptable before God.[t]

5 Now she that is a widow indeed, and desolate, trusteth in God, and continueth in supplications and prayers night and day.[u]

he mean, since divorce was common at the time, that no one was to be chosen to the office of an overseer who had divorced one wife and married another? The latter, we think, is the true interpretation of the words.

6. "Into the condemnation of the devil"—the devil fell through pride, and was lost; so also through pride and its attendant sins man forfeited Paradise; and, in any instance, pride leads to corresponding results.

7. "Into reproach and the snare of the devil:"—there are not a few who regard these words as one single clause, and render them, "into the reproach and the snare of the devil" But the reproach seems to be placed in opposition to "the good report of them which are without," and is to be taken as something coming from man, while the devil takes occasion from such reproach in ministerial character to damage the servant of Christ.

10. "First be proved."—let it first be ascertained and settled that they have the character and qualifications for the office, and that they hold the truth of Christ in its integrity.

13. "A good degree:"—various interpretations have been put upon these words; but the simplest idea is, that such as filled the office of a deacon efficiently acquired for themselves a good standing in the Church, and corresponding boldness in urging the claims and requirements of the Gospel on those for whom they acted.

16. "The mystery of godliness" refers to the whole system of revealed doctrine and truth, of which Christ was the perfect and living embodiment.

CHAPTER IV.

1 "The spirit speaketh expressly;"—in the language of prophecy, and in the teaching of our Lord and his Apostles.

"Seducing spirits" were false teachers who seduced the simple and unstable from the truth (1 John iv. 1, 6); while the "doctrines of devils" refer to such teachings as betrayed their evil origin and fatal development. Some commentators regard this passage as denoting "doctrines concerning demons; that is, concerning the power of angels and saints, and the worship of them as intercessors"

2. "Speaking lies in hypocrisy;"—teachers inculcating erroneous doctrines under a feigned appearance of great piety and of superior sanctity.

"Having their conscience seared;"—just as a criminal was branded with a hot iron, which rendered that part of the body insensible to feeling, in like manner, those who are false and heretical have their consciences so branded as to be callous to all good impressions.

6. "Nourished up;"—that is, brought up and instructed in that sound doctrine which enabled him to impart sound instruction to others.

7 "Exercise thyself:"—not only was he to keep himself free from the fictitious and the profane, the superstitious and the fabulous, but he was to qualify himself by an eminent piety for his great work. Bodily exercise profiteth only a portion of man's nature, but godliness is profitable to the whole of his nature, and during the entire period of his existence: thus its benefits extend to both worlds.

10. "Specially of those that believe:"—by a believing appropriation of the salvation, their relation to Christ is more intimate and more blessed.

12. "Let no man despise thy youth:"—he was so to conduct himself in the Church, and so to teach, as to command the respect and the esteem of those amongst whom he ministered.

14. "Laying on of the hands of the presbytery;"—the hands of St. Paul

6 But she that liveth [1]in pleasure is dead while she liveth.[a]

7 And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless.[b]

8 But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own [2]house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.[c]

9 Let not a widow be [3]taken into the number under threescore years old, having been the wife of one man,[d]

10 Well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.[e]

11 But the younger widows refuse: for when they have begun to wax wanton against Christ, they will marry;

12 Having damnation, because they have cast off their first faith.

13 And withal they learn to be idle, wandering about from house to house; and not only idle, but tattlers also and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not.[f]

14 I will therefore that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, give none occasion to the adversary [4]to speak reproachfully.[g]

15 For some are already turned aside after Satan.

16 If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.[h]

17 Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine.[i]

18 For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, The labourer is worthy of his reward.[j]

19 Against an elder receive not an accusation, but [5]before two or three witnesses.[k]

20 Them that sin rebuke before all, that others also may fear.[l]

21 I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things [6]without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality.[m]

22 Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other men's sins: keep thyself pure.[n]

23 Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities.[o]

24 Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after.[p]

25 Likewise also the good works of some are manifest beforehand; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Of the duty of servants. 3 Not to have fellowship with newfangled teachers. 6 Godliness is great gain, 10 and love of money the root of all evil 11 What Timothy is to fly, and what to follow, 17 and whereof to admonish the rich. 20 To keep the purity of true doctrine, and to avoid profane janglings.

LET as many servants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed.[q]

2 And they that have believing masters, let them not despise them, because they are brethren; but rather do them service, because they are [7]faithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit. These things teach and exhort.[r]

3 If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness;[s]

4 He is [8]proud, knowing nothing, but [9]doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings,[t]

5 [10]Perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself.[u]

6 But godliness with contentment is great gain.[v]

7 For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.[w]

8 And having food and raiment let us be therewith content.[x]

9 But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition.[y]

10 For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have [11]erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.[z]

11 But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness.[a]

12 Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses.[b]

13 I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good [12]confession;[c]

14 That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ:[d]

(2 Tim. i. 6), and of the elders of the Church at Ephesus, which took place at the time of his appointment to his holy office.

CHAPTER V.

1. "An elder;"—any elderly person, especially any presbyter who might fall into sin. Such a one Timothy was to treat as on a perfect equality with himself, and not to lord it over him.

2 "The elder women:"—these may have been the deaconesses, who, like the elders, had fallen into error.

3. "Honour widows:"—who have neither children nor relations on whom they can depend for help, by placing their names on the roll of the Church for relief (Acts vi.).

6. "Liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth:"—that is, she is destitute of inward spiritual life.

TIMOTHY INSTRUCTED IN THE HOLY SCRIPTURES.—2 TIM. I. 5, AND III. 15.

16 Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen.[a]

17 Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in [1]uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy;[b]

18 That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, [2]willing to communicate;[c]

20 O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called:[e]

21 Which some professing have erred concerning the faith. Grace be with thee. Amen.[f]

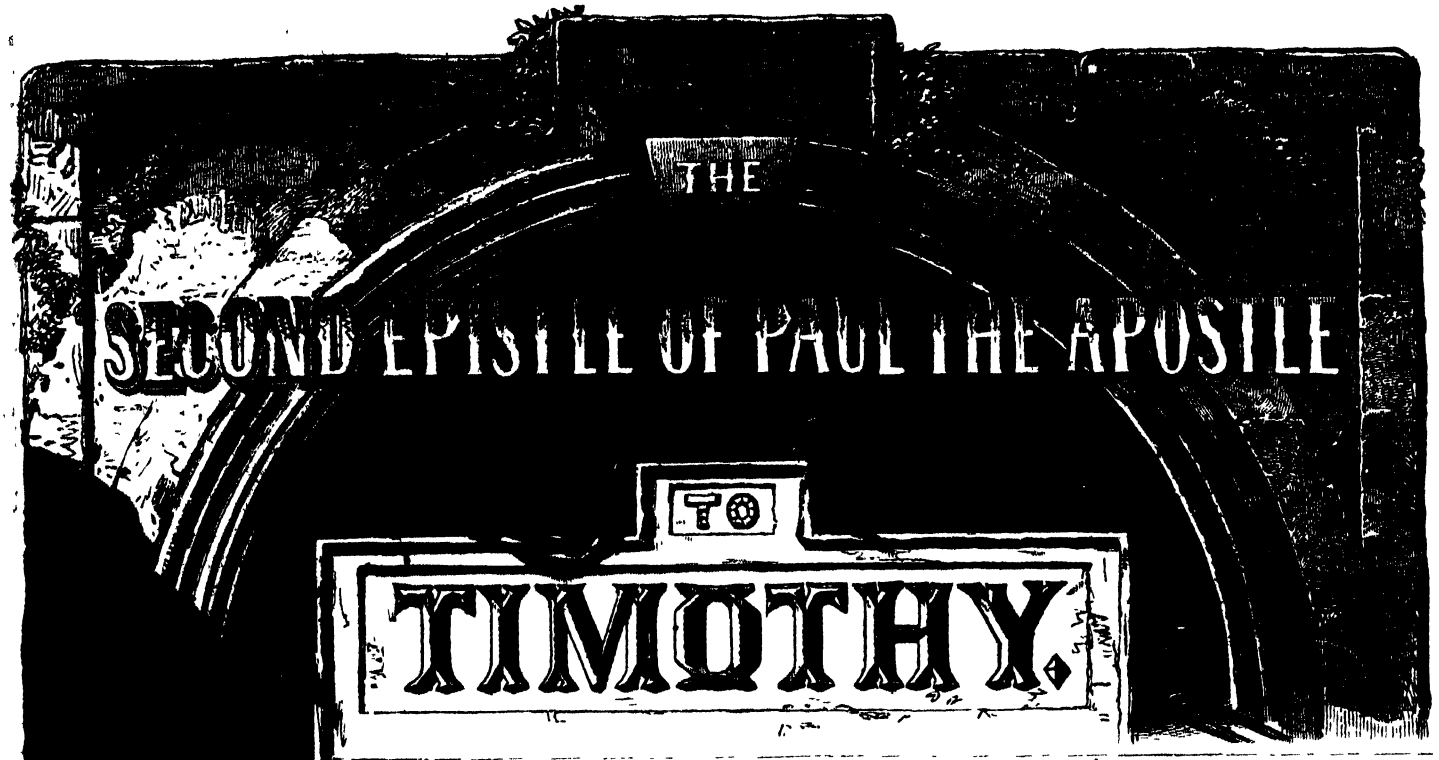
¶ The first to Timothy was written from Laodicea, which is the chiefest city of Phrygia Pacatiana.

9. "Let not a widow:"—there were widows, in all probability, employed in ecclesiastical duties, and supported by the Church.

17. "Double honour;"—not only respect, but compensation, which is confirmed by the following verse.

25. "Cannot be hid:"—if they are not manifest now, they will be made manifest in the brighter light of the last day.

CHAPTER VI.



1. "Let as many servants:"—these were slaves or bondmen under the yoke of others; still, as Christians, they were to honour and obey their masters, though those masters were unbelievers.

2. "Let them not despise them:"—the servants or slaves were not to plead their religious equality with their masters as a ground for disobedience or opposition to authority.

"Gain is godliness:"—did these men teach others to use religion as a means of obtaining worldly prosperity? or did they not rather teach that gain is itself a proof of God's favour, and therefore an evidence of piety? The Apostle rectifies all false notions on this subject by teaching that gain is not godliness, but that godliness is gain.

14. "Keep this commandment;"—that is, the Christian truth in its integrity.

15. "Which in his times he shall shew;"—that is, the appearing of Christ the second time shall take place in God's own appointed time, and in which all the hopes of the Church shall be consummated.

CHAPTER I.

1 Paul's love to Timothy, and the unfeigned faith which was in Timothy himself, his mother, and grandmother. 6 He is exhorted to stir up the gift of God which was in him, 8 to be stedfast, and patient in persecution, 13 and to persist in the form and truth of that doctrine which he had learned of him. 15 Phygellus and Hermogenes, and such like, are noted, and Onesiphorus is highly commended.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,[a]

2 To Timothy, my dearly beloved son: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.[b]

3 I thank God, whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience, that without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day;[c]

CHAPTER I.

That this Second Epistle was written to Timothy is placed beyond all question by the Apostle's own inscription. But where was Timothy? To this the answer has been, at Ephesus. Against this have been adduced Paul's own words in chap. iv. 12, 20—"Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus;" "Trophimus have I left at Miletum sick." The first of these statements is deemed inconsistent with the fact that the person to whom he was writing was himself in Ephesus. But in what lies the inconsistency? In writing to a correspondent residing in the capital, I might say that I have sent a friend to the metropolis; but surely the use of the word "metropolis," in reference to my friend, does not prove that my friend did not live in that city. Again: the Apostle is relating to Timothy the conduct of certain professed friends who had forsaken him in his hour of trial; and to prevent Timothy thinking that Tychicus was amongst the number, he tells him that he had sent that brother on to Ephesus, and therefore his appearance was no indication of inconstancy or unfaithfulness to the Apostle; while, in the case of Trophimus, who was an Ephesian, he wishes to account for his absence where the Apostle was imprisoned, by the fact that he had left him sick at Miletus; and though Miletus was only a few miles distant from Ephesus, it might be a fact of which Timothy was ignorant.

The occasion of writing the Epistle was one wholly personal to the Apostle himself. He was now enduring a second imprisonment; and during the first part of his trial he had been doomed to stand alone. Even Luke, his beloved and devoted friend, seems to have withdrawn from view; others, as we have seen, were absent from Rome; while those within the city appear to have shrunk from this severer ordeal. In the interval which took place between the first and second stages of his trial, he wrote this letter to his son Timothy, to whom he lays open his inmost soul, and entreats him to come to him without delay. Abandoned by his professed and most familiar friends, his was a state of isolation and sorrow; and hence the urgency and the earnestness with which he writes. His own impression seems to have been that he might not be called upon to make his second defence before the following winter (chap. iv. 9, 21); and had Timothy set out at once, he would have reached Rome at the beginning of the summer, A.D. 68: that he did so arrive, there is no proof; and scarcely had June arrived, when the Apostle's trial was resumed and concluded in a sentence of condemnation.

nevertheless I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have [1]believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day.[a]

13 Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.[b]

14 That good thing which was committed unto thee keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us.[c]

15 This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me; of whom are Phygellus and Hermogenes.[d]

16 The Lord give mercy unto the house of Onesiphorus; for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain:[e]

17 But, when he was in Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and found me.

18 The Lord grant unto him that he may find mercy of the Lord in that day: and in how many things he ministered unto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well.[f]

CHAPTER II.

1 He is exhorted again to constancy and perseverance, and to do the duty of a faithful servant of the Lord in dividing the word aright, and staying profane and vain babblings 17 Of Hymenæus and Philetus 19 The foundation of the Lord is sure. 22 He is taught whereof to beware, and what to follow after, and in what sort the servant of the Lord ought to behave himself.

THOU therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus.[g]

2 And the things that thou hast heard of me [2]among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also.[h]

3 Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.[i]

4 No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier.[j]

5 And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully.[k]

6 [3]The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits.[l]

7 Consider what I say; and the Lord give thee understanding in all things.

8 Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel:[m]

9 Wherein I suffer trouble, as an evil doer, even unto bonds; but the word of God is not bound.[n]

10 Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sakes, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory.[o]

11 It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him:[p]

12 If we suffer, we shall also reign with him: if we deny him, he also will deny us:[q]

13 If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful: he cannot deny himself.[r]

14 Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers.[s]

15 Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

16 But shun profane and vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness.[t]

17 And their word will eat as doth a [4]canker: of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus;[u]

18 Who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some.[v]

19 Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth [5]sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity.[w]

20 But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some to honour, and some to dishonour.[x]

1. "According to the promise of life:"—the idea is, that his apostleship was designed for and connected with the further development of the plan and promise of eternal life by the proclamation of the Gospel.

3. "Whom I serve from my forefathers:"—the Apostle does not here place the Jewish and Christian service of God on the same ground; but he means to assert that the service which he formerly rendered as a Jew, and that which he now performed as a Christian, were equally conscientious.

5. Thy grandmother . . . thy mother:"—both may have become converts to the Christian faith during the Apostle's ministry at Lystra (Acts xiv. 6—8).

6. "Stir up the gift of God:"—see Acts viii. 15, 17; xix. 6; 1 Tim. iv. 14.

7. "The spirit of fear,"—of timidity or cowardice. Perhaps the faith of Timothy was somewhat shaken, and his moral courage suffered in proportion. The "sound mind" is to be taken in the sense of sober-mindedness.

8. "The afflictions of the gospel;"—that is, suffering in connection with the propagation and defence of the Gospel, conscious of the sustaining power of God.

10. "Life and immortality to light:"—life and immortality is a Hebraism for immortal life. Christ was the first that rose again from the dead to immortal life, and through him the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead is clearly revealed.

12. "That which I have committed unto him:"—what had he committed? That which all Christians are bound to commit to the Divine keeping—the entire man—body, soul, and spirit.

13. "Hold fast the form of sound words:"—see Rom. vi. 17. The truth which he had been thus taught he was to regard as a precious deposit committed to his keeping, to be maintained with the love and charity which is befitting the disciples of Christ.

15. "All they which are in Asia;"—that is, all in proconsular Asia; whose attachment to him had been put to the test.

16. "The house of Onesiphorus:"—it has been inferred from these words that Onesiphorus was not now living.

CHAPTER II.

1. "The grace that is in Christ Jesus:"—the word grace here must be taken in the sense of all holy influence, as the element essential to perseverance in the Christian life, and to the faithful fulfilment of all required duty.

4. "That warreth:"—while the warrior is engaged in active service, the duties of the battle-field demand his attention, and will not permit his strength, his time, and his energies to be expended upon minor matters.

5. "Strive for masteries:"—in the Olympic games there were certain prescribed laws, any violation of which deprived the transgressor of the award. If in wrestling he gained the mastery, it must be lawfully.

6. "Must be first partaker:"—the more correct rendering of this verse would be—"The husbandman must first labour before he can partake of the fruit;" and this is required by the whole of the context. Just as the soldier must take the field, and mingle in the conflict, before he can gain the victory, and just as the wrestler must strive, and strive lawfully, or in conformity with fixed and definite rules, before he can gain the mastery, so the husbandman must labour before he can reap the fruit. Timothy was not to look for results in his ministry without corresponding effort.

8. "Remember that Jesus Christ:"—"remember, for your encouragement, that Jesus Christ, who took our nature, was raised from the dead. Call him to mind as your great Exemplar, who suffered unto death, but who rose again, and is now in a state of supreme exaltation. Knowing this, that we shall all

21 If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honour, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work.[a]

22 Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart.[b]

23 But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes.[c]

24 And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, [1]patient,[d]

25 In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth;[e]

26 And that they may [2]recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are [3]taken captive by him at his will.[f]

CHAPTER III.

1 He advertiseth him of the times to come, 6 describeth the enemies of the truth, 10 propoundeth unto him his own example, 16 and commendeth the holy scriptures.

THIS know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come.[g]

2 For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,[h]

4 Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God;[j]

die; but if we be Christ's disciples, we shall hereafter live and reign with him in the enjoyment of his presence, and in a participation of his glory."

13. "He cannot deny himself:"—his word is fixed and immutable, and we shall find it for ever true, that while he rewards the obedient, he disowns the impenitent, the unholy, and the unfaithful.

14. "Put them in remembrance;"—that is, those among whom he was then labouring as a teacher of the truth.

16. "For they will increase unto more ungodliness;"—namely, the false teachers, who indulge in those profane and vain babblings, will be emboldened to proceed still further in their ungodly course.

19. "The foundation of God standeth sure:"—but what is this foundation? In the preceding verse he speaks of the faith as being overthrown by the false teachers. In other words, they were being withdrawn from that faith on which alone the believer individually and the Church collectively can rest. But their removal does not endanger the Church of God. That remains the same: and just as it was customary to put inscriptions on monuments and foundation-stones, so it is written in indelible characters, as an admonition to the rejecters of the faith—"The Lord knoweth them that are his."

CHAPTER III.

1. "In the last days;"—that is, with the progress of the present dispensation, in which there will not only be a development of higher good, but a fuller revelation of evil. There will come times full of peril to the Church.

2. "Lovers of their own selves:"—the Apostle puts this first, because selfishness is at the root of every evil passion and all unholy practice.

6. "Silly women laden with sins:"—if they were living in sensual indulgence, as the Apostle intimates, then this would account for their uneasy consciences, and also for the fact of their being so easily captivated and led away by those designing teachers who professed to restore them to inward quietude, by "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

7. "Ever learning;"—having no fixed principles or ideas, and so ever learning and ever unlearning—now embracing, and then rejecting the truth—and so never coming to any deeper or more certain knowledge.

8. "Jannes and Jambres."—these are supposed to be the names of two of the Egyptian magicians of whom we read in Exod. vii.

9. "They shall proceed no further:"—just as there was a limit to the power of the Egyptian magicians, beyond which they were forced to acknowledge the hand of God, so there is a limit beyond which it will be found impossible for the enemies of Christianity to proceed—a point at which the weakness and the wickedness of their designs will be made manifest to all.

14. "Knowing of whom thou hast learned them;"—referring to the early instruction and training which he had enjoyed under the parental roof, and to his later education in Divine knowledge under the Apostle himself.

16. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God:"—all Scripture is divinely inspired, and as such is profitable. There are commentators who render these words thus—"Every scripture given by inspiration of God;" but the words are not to be taken as an independent clause. They naturally flow out of the preceding verse. The Apostle had just reminded Timothy that from a child he had known the Holy Scriptures—that is, of the Old Testament; and that he might not allow any influence to disturb his repose

6 For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand.[a]

7 I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith:[b]

8 Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing.[c]

9 Do thy diligence to come shortly unto me:

10 For Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica; Crescens to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia.[d]

11 Only Luke is with me. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministry.[e]

12 And Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus.[f]

¶ The second epistle unto Timotheus, ordained the first bishop of the church of the Ephesians, was written from Rome, when Paul was brought before [2]Nero the second time.

in the divinity of those sacred writings, he assures him that "all Scripture"—all the writings of the Old Testament—"is given by inspiration of God," and is profitable both for doctrine and for practice, that the man of God may be fitted for the wise and faithful exercise of his ministry.

CHAPTER IV.

1, 2. "I charge thee . . . be instant in season"—this is the Apostle's farewell charge to his son Timothy, and a solemn charge it is. It has in it the earnestness of a man standing on the confine of the eternal world. He adjures Timothy, in fulfilling his ministry, to set forth the truth in its integrity, to embrace every opportunity—whether in season or out of season—to carry on his great work of striving for the salvation of souls.

"With all longsuffering and doctrine"—the reference is to those who were included in the membership of the Church. Instead of seeking and loving the pure truth of Christ, they would be found running after every novelty. Having itching ears, they would be ever craving for something new, and yet more unscriptural, according to their own unsanctified fancy and desire.

6. "The time of my departure is at hand"—he may have had some supernatural premonition that his trial would issue in his condemnation and death.

10. "Demas hath forsaken me."—he is named in Col. iv. 14, in connection with Luke, as saluting the Church at Colossæ. (See also Phil. 24.) Of Crescens we know nothing, though tradition has it that he preached the Gospel in Galatia.

13 "The cloke"—the word may mean a case or covering for books, by which they were conveniently and safely carried; the "books," papyrus rolls and parchments; the "parchments" were writings on prepared skins. They may have contained some valuable writing which the Apostle desired to preserve.

14, 15 "Alexander the coppersmith."—whether this is the same Alexander of whom we read in the Ephesian tumult (Acts xix. 33, 34), or of whom mention is made in 1 Tim. i. 20, we have no means of determining. He was a man to be shunned.

16 "At my first answer;"—that is, during his first defence before the Roman Emperor Nero, who is said to have set fire to the city of Rome, and, that he might avert the anger of the people from himself as the author of the calamity, accused the Christians of the direful offence.

17 "I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion."—had he been found guilty, he would have been delivered up to wild beasts.

19—21 "Salute Prisca and Aquila"—see Acts xviii. 2; Rom. xvi. 3.

22 "The Lord Jesus:"—this benediction exhausts all holy desire on behalf of both Timothy and his fellow-labourers.

CHAPTER I.

Titus was the companion of St. Paul in many of his missionary travels and enterprises. From the manner in which the Apostle addresses him in this Epistle—as his own son after the common faith—we may infer that he was converted to Christianity under the teaching of St. Paul, and was afterwards treated by him as one of his most valued and trustworthy friends. He was of Gentile origin, and the first notice which we have of him, in respect of time, is in Gal. ii. 1—3, in connection with Paul and Barnabas, by whom he was taken to the great council which was held in Jerusalem regarding the obligation of the Mosaic ritual (Acts xv.). He is next introduced to our notice in 2 Cor. xii. 18, from which we learn that he was sent by Paul from Ephesus to Corinth, to set on foot the collection for the poor suffering believers in Jerusalem; and on his return from Corinth he met St. Paul at Troas, whither the Apostle had gone, and there related to him the effect of his first letter to the Corinthian Church (2 Cor. ii. 12, 13; vii 6—15; viii. 6, 16, 17, 23; xii. 18). For two years after this we hear nothing more of Titus. In A.D. 67, which was the last year of St. Paul's life, we find Titus left by him at Crete, to regulate and set in order the internal affairs of the Christian community. It would appear from 2 Tim. iv. 10 that he was with Paul at Rome during his second imprisonment, but left him, perhaps at the Apostle's own desire, to visit Dalmatia in the fulfilment of some more important commission.

Crete is an island in the Mediterranean, 170 miles long and 50 broad, and was both rich and powerful. Some have supposed that the island was settled by Philistines from Egypt, part of whom afterwards passed over to Palestine, and became known by the name of Caphtorim and Cherethites; but this is a very doubtful opinion. The inhabitants were notorious for their vicious habits; they were avaricious and fraudulent, mendacious, voluptuous,

5 For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are [1]wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee;[a]

6 If any be blameless, the husband of one wife, having faithful children not accused of riot or unruly.[b]

7 For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not selfwilled, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre;[c]

8 But a lover of hospitality, a lover of [2]good men, sober, just, holy, temperate;[d]

9 Holding fast the faithful word [3]as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers.[e]

10 For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision:[f]

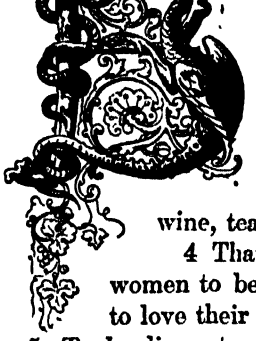
11 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.[g]

12 One of themselves, even a prophet of their own, said, The Cretians are alway liars, evil beasts, slow bellies.[h]

13 This witness is true. Wherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith;[i]

14 Not giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn from the truth.[j]

15 Unto the pure all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled.[k]



16 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work [4]reprobate.[l]

CHAPTER II.

1 Directions given unto Titus both for his doctrine and life. 9 Of the duty of servants, and in general of all Christians.

UT speak thou the things which become sound doctrine:[m]

2 That the aged men be [5]sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience.[n]

3 The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh [6]holiness, not [7]false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things;[o]

4 That they may teach the young women to be [8]sober, to love their husbands, to love their children,[p]

5 To be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed.[q]

6 Young men likewise exhort to be [9]sober minded.

7 In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity,[r]

8 Sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you.[s]

9 Exhort servants to be obedient unto their own masters, and to please them well in all things; not [10]answering again;[t]

10 Not purloining, but shewing all good fidelity; that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things.[u]

11 For the grace of God [11]that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men,[v] and ferocious The island is now called Candia, and four-fifths of the inhabitants are Greeks. At the head of this Epistle appears a view of Canea, an important city in the island.

Yet the Cretians were among the number of those to whom the Apostle Peter preached the simple and sublime doctrines of Christianity on the day of Pentecost. If we admit that some few of them became converts to the new faith, and carried back with them the seeds of holy truth, this will account for the existence of a Church in Crete without the personal presence and labours of the Apostle, or any of the first teachers of Christianity. That there was so much of the Jewish element in the Church there may be accounted for from the fact that Crete abounded with Jews of wealth and influence; and the false teachers would labour all the more earnestly to graft Judaism on Christianity. Hence the design of the Epistle is to furnish Titus with practical instructions as to his management of the Church.

The Epistle, which is truly Pauline in its character, was sent either from Macedonia or from Ephesus to Titus, A.D. 67; and therefore not long before the Apostle was honoured with the martyr's crown for his adherence to the truth. He was slain at Rome.

1. "According to the faith of God's elect."—his apostleship was a trust committed to him for the propagation of the faith of God's elect, and in order to make known those truths which tend to godliness.

5. "The things that are wanting."—whatever was still lacking in the government of the Church, not excluding even the appointment of teachers and pastors.

9. "The faithful word;"—that is, the word of truth—the great and unchangeable verities of the Christian faith

10. "Specially they of the circumcision"—the allusion here is to the Judaising teachers, whose conduct was inconsistent with the meekness and gentleness of Christ, and whose only aim was to mislead and deceive.

12. "A prophet of their own:"—among the Romans, and even among the Greeks, the designations "prophet" and "poet" were often used as synonymous. The words are taken from Epimenides, who was a native of Phæstus, in Crete, and lived about 600 years before the Christian era.

"Slow bellies" is a phrase applied to those who indulge their appetites to excess.

"Wherefore rebuke them sharply;"—not so much the false teachers as the Christian converts who suffered themselves to be influenced by these teachers.

CHAPTER II.

1. "Speak thou"—Titus had to fulfil the office of a teacher, and on the character of his teaching depended the mightiest issues. Hence the Apostle gives him his fatherly counsel, and presses upon him an unyielding attachment to truth in its sublime integrity. He was not to speak as did the Judaising teachers, but to give the people that sound and wholesome instruction which would affect and benefit all classes.

2. "The aged men;"—not those in old age only, but who were elders or presbyters of the Church.

3. "The aged women:"—among these may have been included the wives and the widows of the presbyters or elders.

4, 5 "That they may teach the young women:"—the principles of Christianity are all influential, practical principles, and are seen in the every-day life and character of Christ's disciples. Hence the force of these exhortations.

6. "Sober minded;"—that is, so to regulate the operations of the mind as to have the power of self-control.

7, 8. "Of the contrary part:"—the reference is to both the Judaising teachers, whose doctrine was neither incorrupt nor grave, and to the unbelieving heathen, that neither might have even the shadow of a charge to prefer against the Evangelist either in the discharge of his official duties or in the transactions of his private life.

13. "That blessed hope:"—hope is put for the object of hope, and means here the second coming of our Lord to perfect the redemption of his Church. Bishop Middleton, in his work on the "Greek Article," renders the verse thus:—"Looking for that blessed hope, even the glorious appearing of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ."

CHAPTER III.

1, 2. "Subject to principalities and powers;"—that is, to the various forms of government which existed in Crete, so long as those civil authorities did not intrude into matters pertaining to the conscience, and demand of the believer that which he could yield only to God. Christianity is eminently favourable to good government; and wherever such a government exists, it inculcates the most loyal and devoted obedience; its language is, "Fear God, love the brethren, honour all men."

3. "We ourselves:"—we professed believers in Christ were formerly void of understanding as to the line of duty, and hence our life was full of contradictions and evils; but now Christianity has taught us better, and therefore

12 Teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world;[a]

13 Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ;[b]

14 Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.[c]

15 These things speak, and exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Let no man despise thee.[d]

CHAPTER III.

1 Titus is yet further directed by Paul, both concerning the things he should teach, and not teach. 10 He is willed also to reject obstinate heretics: 12 which done, he appointeth him both time and place, wherein he should come unto him, and so concludeth.

PUT them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work,[e]

2 To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, shewing all meekness unto all men.[f]

3 For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.[g]

4 But after that the kindness and [1]love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,[h]

5 Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost;[i]

6 Which he shed on us [2]abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour;[j]

7 That being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.[k]

8 This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men.[l]

9 But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain.[m]

10 A man that is an heretick after the first and second admonition reject;[n]

11 Knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned of himself.[o]

12 When I shall send Artemas unto thee, or Tychicus, be diligent to come unto me to Nicopolis: for I have determined there to winter.[p]

13 Bring Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their journey diligently, that nothing be wanting unto them.[q]

14 And let our's also learn to [3]maintain good works for necessary uses, that they be not unfruitful.[r]

15 All that are with me salute thee. Greet them that love us in the faith. Grace be with you all. Amen.

¶ It was written to Titus, ordained the first bishop of the church of the Cretians, from Nicopolis of Macedonia.

it becomes us to live and act in conformity with those pure and peaceful principles which we profess.

10. "A man that is an heretick:"—heresy may be defined as that form of religious opinion or practice which is the offspring of individual self-will, and in its turn begets strife and division. It is to be kept in mind, also, that the early heretics "united moral depravity with erroneous teaching: their works bear witness against their doctrine." Errors in conduct are often the result of errors in creed.

11. "Is subverted;"—or rather, is wholly perverted, lives in open sin, and stands self-rebuked and self-condemned.

"That nothing be wanting:"—Titus was to furnish them with whatever was necessary for their journey; and to do this he was to incite the believers in Crete to good works in the form of liberality.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO PHILEMON

4 He rejoiceth to hear of the faith and love of Philemon, 9 whom he desireth to forgive his servant Onesimus, and lovingly to receive him again

PAUL, a prisoner of Jesus Christ, and Timothy our brother, unto Philemon our dearly beloved, and fellowlabourer,[a]

2 And to our beloved Apphia, and Archippus our fellowsoldier, and to the church in thy house:[b]

3 Grace to you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.[c]

4 I thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers,[d]

5 Hearing of thy love and faith, which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all saints;[e]

6 That the communication of thy faith may become effectual by the acknowledging of every good thing which is in you in Christ Jesus.[f]

7 For we have great joy and consolation in thy love, because the bowels of the saints are refreshed by thee, brother.[g]

8 Wherefore, though I might be much bold in Christ to enjoin thee that which is convenient,[h]

9 Yet for love's sake I rather beseech thee, being such an one as Paul the aged, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ.[i]

10 I beseech thee for my son Onesimus, whom I have begotten in my bonds:[j]

11 Which in time past was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me:

12 Whom I have sent again: thou therefore receive him, that is, mine own bowels:

13 Whom I would have retained with me, that in thy stead he might have ministered unto me in the bonds of the gospel:[k]

14 But without thy mind would I do nothing; that thy benefit should not be as it were of necessity, but willingly.[l]

15 For perhaps he therefore departed for a season, that thou shouldest receive him for ever;[m]

16 Not now as a servant, but above a servant, a brother beloved, specially to me, but how much more unto thee, both in the flesh, and in the Lord?[n]

17 If thou count me therefore a partner, receive him as myself.[o]

18 If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account;

19 I Paul have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it: albeit I do not say to thee how thou owest unto me even thine own self besides.

20 Yea, brother, let me have joy of thee in the Lord: refresh my bowels in the Lord.[p]

21 Having confidence in thy obedience I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say.[q]

22 But withal prepare me also a lodging: for I trust that through your prayers I shall be given unto you.[r]

23 There salute thee Epaphras, my fellowprisoner in Christ Jesus;[s]

24 Marcus, Aristarchus, Demas, Lucas, my fellowlabourers.[t]

25 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.[u]

TAKING for granted the Pauline authorship of this Epistle, it was written during Paul's first imprisonment at Rome, A.D. 61—62, while its design lies upon the surface of the letter itself. Onesimus, a native of Colossæ, having defrauded his master Philemon, had absconded and found his way to Rome, where he was converted under the ministry of St. Paul, who probably persuaded him to return to his master, or encouraged his own desire to return, and gave him this Epistle to ensure his reception on the part of Philemon.

The letter is a noble expression of Christian love, as well as a fine example of that forgetfulness of self which is evinced by promoting the interests of others; and this self-denial springs from Christian love. Throughout it must be confessed that "dignity, generosity, prudence, friendship, affection, politeness, skilful address, purity, are apparent." Hence it has been termed, with great propriety, the polite Epistle. The delicacy, fine address, consummate courtesy, and nice strokes of rhetoric, render the letter a unique specimen of the epistolary style.

1, 2. "Philemon our dearly beloved"—he was, perhaps, one of the Apostle's converts. Apphia is supposed to be his wife; and Archippus their son, who was devoted to the work of the ministry, and dispensed the word to the saints who were in the habit of assembling together in his father's house.

9. "I rather beseech thee"—he had addressed Philemon as a brother, to prepare the way for the request which he was about to make. He might have made a demand, but for the sake of that love of which Philemon was so bright an example, he prefers a request that Onesimus might be received as a renewed man.

6 [1]And again, when he bringeth in the first-begotten into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him.[f]

7 And [2]of the angels he saith, Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire.[g]

8 But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of [3]righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom.[h]

9 Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity: therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.[i]

CHAPTER I.

From the second century down to the present day, opinion has been strongly divided as to the origin of this Epistle. So divided is the testimony, that, according to Alford, "antiquity cannot claim to close up the inquiry; nor can either side allege its voice as decisive. In the very earliest times we find the Epistle received by some as St. Paul's; in the same times we find it ascribed to various authors." The majority of those who reject the Pauline origin of this Epistle are inclined to look to Apollos as its author; and their hypothesis is, that he wrote it in Greek, from Ephesus, to the converted Hebrews resident in Rome, subsequent to the Neronian

10 And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands:[a]

11 They shall perish; but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment;[b]

12 And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail.

13 But to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool?[c]

14 Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?[d]

CHAPTER II.

1 We ought to be obedient to Christ Jesus, 5 and that because he vouchsafed to take our nature upon him, 14 as it was necessary.

THEREFORE we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should [1]let them slip.

2 For if the word spoken by angels was stedfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward;[e]

3 How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;[f]

4 God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and [2]gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?[g]

5 For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak.[h]

6 But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?[i]

7 Thou madest him [3]a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honour, and didst set him over the works of thy hands:

8 Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet.[k] For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him.[l]

9 But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels [4]for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man.[k]

10 For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings.[l]

11 For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren,[m]

12 Saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee.[n]

13 And again, I will put my trust in him. And again, Behold I and the children which God hath given me.[o]

14 Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil;[p]

15 And deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.[q]

16 For verily [5]he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham.

17 Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.[r]

18 For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted.[s]

CHAPTER III.

1 Christ is more worthy than Moses, 7 therefore if we believe not in him, we shall be more worthy punishment than hardhearted Israel.

WHEREFORE, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus;[t]

2 Who was faithful to him that [6]appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house.[u]

persecution, which broke out in A.D. 64, and lasted four years, or till the death of Nero, in A.D. 68. To state the objections to this hypothesis would exceed our limits; all that we can say is, that we still believe in the Pauline origin of the Epistle, and know of no other man within the whole circle of the Apostolic Church who could have written it. Assuming Paul to be the author of the document, its canonicity follows; and even those who are unwilling to recognise Paul as the writer, yet readily receive it as "a portion of the New Testament canon, and regard it as possessing the same authority as the rest of the Holy Scriptures."

The main object of this invaluable Epistle is to set forth the unspeakable superiority of the new Evangelical Economy, with all its rich display of mercy, to the old Dispensation of Law, with its types and shadows, its endless rites and ceremonies. Starting with the unrivalled excellence and character of Jesus Christ, as the one only High Priest of the New Economy, he proceeds to point out at each successive step the unspeakable superiority of his mysterious work of mediation, with all its present and everlasting results, in the redemption of a countless multitude of otherwise lost and ruined souls. This is followed by a series of solemn exhortations to faith and patience, and also to perseverance, as one of the conditions of final blessedness and glory.

1. "At sundry times;"—or rather, in separate and numerous portions. The opposition is between a revelation given in portions or in fragments, through diversified means and by various persons, and that perfect disclosure which has been vouchsafed in and by the Son of God.

4 "Better than the angels"—not only in virtue of his unique and unparalleled nature as the Son of God, but in virtue of his work of propitiation and atonement, he is placed far above every principality and power, and in his name every knee shall bow of things in heaven as well as of things on earth

7. "His angels spirits."—angels are but his ministers to fulfil his will in this lower world in connection with material elements—winds (rendered "spirits" in the text) and fire; but Christ is the Lord of angels, and all the elements are under his control—they are his servants, to do his bidding.

CHAPTER II.

1. "Therefore we ought to give:"—since the Son of God is so superior in nature, rank, position, and empire to the angels, and since it is through his Son that God hath spoken to us, it becomes us to listen to the message of reconciling mercy with all reverence and earnestness.

2. "Spoken by angels:"—delivered or made known through the ministry of those pure and lofty spirits. The primary reference is to the giving of the Law of the Ten Commandments on Mount Sinai, every principle of which is as unchangeable as God himself.

5. "The world to come:"—the reference is not to the future and eternal world, but to the Gospel dispensation. It is thought that our Lord, in a peculiar manner, presides over this dispensation.

6—9. "What is man?"—by his fall, man lost his dignity and his dominion; but these he is to regain. How, and by whom? By one of his own race, the MAN Christ Jesus. Whatever high or glorious things can be said

3 For this man was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as he who hath builded the house hath more honour than the house.[a]

4 For every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God.[b]

5 And Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after;[c]

6 But Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.[d]

7 Wherefore (as the Holy Ghost saith, To day if ye will hear his voice,[e]

8 Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness:

9 When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years.

10 Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They do alway err in their heart; and they have not known my ways.

11 So I sware in my wrath, [1]They shall not enter into my rest.)

12 Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.

13 But exhort one another daily, while it is called To day; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end;[f]

15 While it is said, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.[g]

16 For some, when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.[h]

17 But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcases fell in the wilderness?[i]

18 And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not?[j]

19 So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.[k]

CHAPTER IV.

1 The rest of Christians is attained by faith. 12 The power of God's word. 14 By our high priest Jesus the Son of God, subject to infirmities, but not sin, 16 we must and may go boldly to the throne of grace.

LET us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.[l]

2 For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but [2]the word preached did not profit them, [3]not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.

3 For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world.[m]

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And God did rest the seventh day from all his works.[n]

5 And in this place again, if they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom [4]it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief:[o]

7 Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To day, after so long a time; as it is said, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.[p]

8 For if [5]Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day.

9 There remaineth therefore a [6]rest to the people of God.

10 For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his.

11 Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of [7]unbelief.[q]

12 For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of

of man, belong of right to him only, but derivatively to us his brethren and members.

"That he by the grace of God should taste death for every man:"—he was exalted and glorified, that in the riches of God's grace his death should open the gates of heaven to all believers.

11. "Are all of one;"—that is to say, Christ has provided in his own mysterious work for the sanctification of all his followers; and all who are thus sanctified, and separated unto God through him, are of that one Father who is leading his many sons unto glory. Hence it is that all believers are recognised by Christ as his brethren.

17. "A merciful and faithful high priest:"—his humanity gave him a perfect sympathy with man, and this sympathy ensured his faithfulness in fulfilling the duties of his office.

CHAPTER III.

1. "Consider the Apostle and High Priest;"—let him be the object of a deeper contemplation, that faith may repose in him as the Apostle or the Sent of God, and the great High Priest of the Church.

2—6. "Who was faithful:"—the immediate object of the writer in this chapter is to set forth the superiority of Christ to Moses. As a servant of God's house or Church, Moses was faithful in bearing testimony to the things which were to be more clearly revealed in future time; but Christ, as the Son of God, is the Head and Lord of the Church.

"If we hold fast the confidence;"—if we keep unyielding hold of that truth on which our confidence and hope repose—a hope and a confidence which give birth to a joy which is unspeakable and full of the prospect of future glory.

7—11. "To day if ye will hear his voice:"—the writer had just reminded the Hebrews that the fact of their being included in the house or Church of God depended on their adherence to the truth of the Gospel; and here he exhorts them—his exhortation being founded on a previous utterance of God's Spirit to that very people among whom Moses was a servant—to strive against all unbelief and disobedience, lest, as Israel was shut out from the earthly Canaan, they should be shut out from the heavenly Canaan.

14. "Are made partakers of Christ;"—we have come to participate in all the benefits of Christ's mediation. Our Christian confidence is continued by our Christian perseverance, and we must remember it is in God's strength alone we stand.

CHAPTER IV.

1. "Into his rest:"—the penalty of disobedience on the part of the Israelites was, that they should not enter into God's rest. Of this rest, the Apostle tells us, we have the promise, and therefore exhorts us to see to it that we do not even seem to come short of it.

2. "Unto us was the gospel preached:"—the glad tidings of a future rest have been proclaimed to us as well as to them. They lacked faith, and lost the rest. Let us fear.

3. "If they shall enter;"—that is, they shall not enter into my rest. Although the works of creation were finished from the foundation of the world, and God had entered into his rest, yet enter they could not because of their unbelief; but we who have believed do enter into rest.

8. "If Jesus;"—that is, if Joshua—which is another word for Jesus—had, by giving them the earthly Canaan, given them the rest included in the promise of God, then he could not have pointed them to anything future.

10. "For he that is entered into his rest:"—to whom does the Apostle here refer? To the believer entering into the rest of God after he has the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.[a]

13 Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.[b]

14 Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession.[c]

15 For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.[d]

16 Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.[e]

CHAPTER V.

1 The authority and honour of our Saviour's priesthood. 11 Negligence in the knowledge thereof is reproved.

FOR every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins:[f]

2 Who [1]can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity.[g]

3 And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.[h]

4 And no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.[i]

5 So also Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee.[j]

6 As he saith also in another place, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.[k]

7 Who in the days of his flesh, when he had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard [2]in that he feared;[l]

8 Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered;[m]

9 And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him;[n]

10 Called of God an high priest after the order of Melchisedec.[o]

11 Of whom we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing.[p]

12 For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat.[q]

13 For every one that useth milk [3]is unskilful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe.[r]

14 But strong meat belongeth to them that are [4]of full age, even those who by reason [5]of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil.[s]

CHAPTER VI.

1 He exhorteth not to fall back from the faith, 11 but to be stedfast, 12 diligent, and patient to wait upon God, 13 because God is most sure in his promise.

THEREFORE leaving [6]the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God,[t]

2 Of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.[u]

3 And this will we do, if God permit.[v]

4 For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,[w]

5 And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come,[x]

6 If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.[y] finished his course on earth? Or is the reference not rather to Christ? "For he that is entered into his rest"—that is, Christ—he also hath ceased from his work of suffering and mediation, as God ceased from his work of creation. Thus a striking contrast is drawn between the Jesus or Joshua who did not give the Israelites rest, and that Jesus who has entered heaven as our Forerunner, and who has there prepared a place for us, that where he is there the believing, humble, holy, contrite, and obedient followers of Christ, of every tongue and of every clime, may also be.

CHAPTER V.

1—4. "Ordained for men"—the Apostle here resumes the subject of the Saviour's priesthood, on which he had entered in the second chapter, but which he dropped to bring into view the superiority of Christ as a Son to Moses as a servant. Now he contrasts the Saviour's priesthood with the Aaronic; and in Christ's priesthood, as in Aaron's, there were two necessary qualifications: he must be taken from among men, to have a true sympathy with those on whose behalf he is to act, and he must have received his call and appointment to the office by God himself

6. "After the order of Melchisedec"—corresponding in its character with the special rank and work of Melchisedec, who united the pontifical and regal functions in himself, and whose priesthood was complete in itself.

7. "To save him from death:"—during his agony in the garden, his soul was "exceeding sorrowful even unto death" from his death, with his holy work unfinished, he shrunk with apprehension; and hence he prayed three times—"O my father, if it be possible let this cup pass from me;" and he was delivered from the terrors which he endured on the ground of his entire acquiescence in the will of his Father. An angel from heaven appeared to strengthen him, and his agony ceased; the cup which he was then drinking passed away from him; and he was preserved to finish the work which his Father gave him to do.

8. "Yet learned he obedience:"—this does not imply that HIS will was ever otherwise than in submission and obedience to his Father; but only that the perfection of this obedience and submission was exhibited in his life and suffering on earth.

9. "Made perfect:"—his official character, as our Redeemer and Mediator, was made perfect by his life of service and suffering, and by his expiatory death; and hence his power to give eternal life to them that believe.

11. "Of whom:"—notwithstanding the formidable array of authorities who refer this to Melchisedec, we feel no hesitation in referring it to Christ; for it is of Christ, and not of Melchisedec—who only resembled Christ in some of the more prominent features of his office—that the Apostle is here treating; as if he had said, "I could demonstrate to you in many ways the superiority of Christ to Melchisedec, but the present state of your minds will not allow you to receive these deep truths."

14. "Their senses exercised;"—the faculties of their mind, now renewed and sanctified, exercised in discriminating between what is true and false in doctrine and teaching. This power is to be found in the advanced and matured Christian, not in the young and inexperienced.

CHAPTER VI.

1—3. "Leaving the principles;"—that is, the more rudimental principles or truths of the Gospel. "Go on unto perfection;"—advance to the appreciation of higher forms of truth. He had stated the fundamental principles once for all, and therefore it was not needful to repeat them. These he

8 But that which beareth thorns and briers is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned.[b]

9 But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation, though we thus speak.

10 For God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister.[c]

11 And we desire that every one of you do shew the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end:[d]

12 That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises.[e]

13 For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he sware by himself,[f]

14 Saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee.

15 And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise.

16 For men verily swear by the greater: and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife.[g]

CHAPTER VII.

1 Christ Jesus is a priest after the order of Melchisedec, 11 and so, far more excellent than the priests of Aaron's order.

FOR this Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him;[l]

2 To whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all; first being by interpretation King of righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is, King of peace;

3 Without father, without mother, [3]without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually.

4 Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils.[m]

5 And verily they that are of the sons of Levi, who receive the office of the priesthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they come out of the loins of Abraham:[n]

6 But he whose [4]descent is not counted from them received tithes of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.[o]

7 And without all contradiction the less is blessed of the better.

8 And here men that die receive tithes; but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that he liveth.[p]

9 And as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father, when Melchisedec met him.

11 If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) specifies—in repentance, in faith, and in baptism; also in laying on of hands, as one of the rites of the Old Dispensation, and introduced into the New Economy; the resurrection of the dead, as involved in the resurrection of Christ, and therefore involved in the fundamental teachings of Christian doctrine; and of eternal judgment, as arising out of human responsibility.

4—6. "It is impossible;"—a confessedly difficult passage, and of which we have manifold interpretations. It is clear that the impossibility arises out of the nature of the case. We must therefore look at the position of those whose repentance and restoration are here declared to involve an impossibility.

The Apostle speaks of those who have been once enlightened—that is, once for all, not again to be repeated—who have tasted of the heavenly gift—the goodness of God in the disposition of mind that leads to the hope of eternal life, who have shared in the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, who have tasted the good word of God—in other words, have experienced the comfort of the Divine promises contained in the Gospel, and have felt the power and efficacy of the Christian doctrine relating to the blissfulness of the redeemed in their future state. The Apostle assumes a case, and says that if such individuals apostatise, it is impossible to renew them again to repentance, because by their apostacy from the faith they would reject the only means by which salvation can be obtained. The awful guilt and danger of apostacy from the Christian faith arises from the fact that it is an insult to each of the Persons in the Godhead. It is an impious disregard of the love of God, an irreligious rejection of the Saviour's atoning blood, and a daring contempt for the Holy Spirit's saving grace. These are the combined acts of impiety which constitute the condemning sin, not only of the apostate, but also of the finally impenitent. The sick man perishes, not because of the disease, but on account of the rejection of the remedy. The impossibility of which the Apostle speaks is to be sought, not in the fact of spiritual declension—for thousands and tens of thousands of believers have fallen away and have been restored—but in the means to be employed in effecting that restoration. If the great truths of the Gospel will not restore them, there are no other means in existence: hence their salvation would become an impossibility.

This view of this confessedly difficult passage is confirmed by the Apostle's own illustration in the following verses. The ground which is fruitful partakes of the Divine blessing, but the ground which yieldeth nothing but thorns and briars falls under a curse, by reason of the loss of that irrigation upon which fruitfulness depends. No other means are provided or can be employed than those which already exist to make the barren fruitful, and to mature the fruitful into perfection; and the plan devised is styled—whatever the rejecter may think of it—"the manifold wisdom of God."

CHAPTER VII.

The train of thought in this chapter is thus arranged. First, it is shown in verses 1—10 that Melchisedec's priesthood was of a higher order than the Levitical; then in verses 11—19 the inference is drawn from this, that the Levitical priesthood—and also the Mosaical law upon which it was grafted—was imperfect; and finally, in verses 20—28, that the Messiah, who was a High Priest after the order of Melchisedec, was greatly superior to the Levitical priesthood, as well as to the Mosaic law.

1. "This Melchisedec:"—we are not to think of Melchisedec as a temporary incarnation of the Son of God. The type and the antitype can never be the same—the substance can never be the shadow; but we are to regard Melchisedec as an anointed prince of a Gentile tribe among whom the ancient and original worship of the one God was still happily preserved, and who, according to the patriarchal custom, still offered sacrifices as the priest of his tribe to the invisible God of heaven.

what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron?[a] 12 For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law.

13 For he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar.

14 For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Juda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood.[b]

15 And it is yet far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest,

16 Who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.

17 For he testifieth, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.[c]

18 For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof.[d]

19 For the law made nothing perfect, [1]but the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which we draw nigh unto God.[e]

20 And inasmuch as not without an oath he was made priest:

21 (For those priests were made [2]without an oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec:)[f]

22 By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament.[g]

23 And they truly were many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death:

24 But this man, because he continueth ever, hath [3]an unchangeable priesthood.

25 Wherefore he is able also to save them [4]to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.[h]

26 For such an high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens;[i]

27 Who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, when he offered up himself.[j]

28 For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is [5]consecrated for evermore.[k]

CHAPTER VIII.

1 By the eternal priesthood of Christ the Levitical priesthood of Aaron is abolished. 7 And the temporal covenant with the fathers, by the eternal covenant of the gospel.

NOW of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens:[l]

2 A minister [6]of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man.[m]

3 For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to offer.[n]

4 For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that [7]there are priests that offer gifts according to the law:

5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.[o]

6 But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better [8]covenant, which was established upon better promises.[p]

7 For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.[q]

8 For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah:[r]

9 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the

2. "Gave a tenth:"—this custom was not confined to the Jews, but obtained also among the heathen.

"King of righteousness. . . . King of peace:"—the name, and that of the city in which Melchisedec reigned, were typical of Christ and of his kingdom. Righteousness and peace were to be the grand characteristics of the reign of Messiah.

3. "Without father, without mother;"—without pedigree. The Levitical priest, to qualify himself for his sacred office, must prove his descent from Levi and Aaron; whereas Melchisedec's priesthood, as a marked distinction, had nothing to do with his race and his descent; therefore nothing has been recorded. Melchisedec stands altogether outside of the great line of descent which runs from Abraham downwards to Levi and Aaron. He comes forth from the darkness, like a streak of light, only to disappear immediately in the darkness again. And yet, although he cannot have been a priest by descent, the Holy Scripture presents him to our notice as a priest of God, and acknowledges him as such. If now the Messiah is to be a priest after the order of Melchisedec, then to him also is ascribed, not the Levitical hereditary order, but that of an independent priesthood.

"Without descent;"—that is, we have no recorded genealogy by which his descent can be traced or fixed. Could such a record be found, the discovery might then be made, that neither his father nor his mother, nor any of his relatives, had any connection with the priesthood; but that Melchisedec stood alone in his pontifical character, as Christ does in his priestly office.

4. "How great this man was;"—apparently the head of the Gentiles and of the whole family of Israel; therefore, as the type is always less than that which is typified, Christ was greater than Melchisedec; and we have seen that Melchisedec, the king and priest, was greater than Abraham and all the Levitical priesthood.

5. "Come out of the loins of Abraham;"—that is, the brethren of the Levites, and it was only by a Divine appointment that the sons of Levi could impose tithes upon their brethren; but Melchisedec, without any such ordination, received tithes of Abraham, and in him, as their great ancestor, of the whole Levitical priesthood.

8. "Men that die:"—from the very fact that every man is mortal, the Levitical priesthood passed from one to another in a regular succession; but in the case of Melchisedec, his priesthood began and terminated in himself. As a priest, he had no successor; as a priest, his priesthood never passed away from himself.

CHAPTER VIII.

1. "This is the sum:"—having established ——— priesthood of Christ, the Apostle now proceeds to contrast the Mosaic tabernacle with the heavenly sanctuary; and he begins by showing, in the present chapter, how the two tabernacles correspond with the two covenants or dispensations. When he speaks, therefore, of the sum of what he had said or written, he means the chief or principal points.

2. "A minister of the sanctuary:"—just as the high priest under the law entered into the holiest of all, so Christ is here represented as having gone into the inner sanctuary—into the holy of holies—in the true tabernacle—the place of God's immediate presence. The permanence of this true sanc-hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord.

10 For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will [1]put my laws into their mind, and write them [2]in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people:[a]

11 And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest.[b]

12 For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more.[c]

12 Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.[p]

13 For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the tuary, in which all is abiding reality, is in beautiful contrast with the temporary and movable tent, in which all was but type and shadow.

4. "He should not be a priest:"—because he did not belong by natural descent to the tribe to which the Levitical priesthood was confined. Only the Aaronic priests were permitted to offer sacrifice in the Mosaic tabernacle.

5. "Who serve unto the example:"—the Levitical priesthood served in a tabernacle which was but a shadow of heavenly things. The Mosaic tabernacle was not the original from which the copy was taken, but was itself a copy from the heavenly.

CHAPTER IX.

The object of the Apostle in this chapter is to prove in more minute detail that the Old Testament tabernacle was in fact a copy of the heavenly things; and that as a mere copy it corresponded with the nature and provisions of the old dispensation, as distinguished from the new covenant.

ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh :[a]

14 How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without [1]spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God ?[b]

15 And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.[c]

16 For where a testament is, there must also of necessity [2]be the death of the testator.

17 For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth.[d]

18 Whereupon neither the first testament was [3]dedicated without blood.[e]

19 For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and [4]scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people,[f]

20 Saying, This is the blood of the testament which God hath enjoined unto you.[g]

21 Moreover he sprinkled with blood both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry.[h]

22 And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission.[i]

23 It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.[j]

24 For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us :[k]

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others;[l]

26 For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.[m]

27 And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment :[n]

28 So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.[o]

CHAPTER X.

1 The weakness of the law sacrifices. 10 The sacrifice of Christ's body once offered, 14 for ever hath taken away sins. 19 An exhortation to hold fast the faith, with patience and thanksgiving.

FOR the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect.[p]

2 For then [5]would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins.

3 But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year.[q]

4 For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.[r]

5 Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body [6]hast thou prepared me :[s]

6 In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure.

7 Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me,) to do thy will, O God.

8 Above when he said, Sacrifice and offering and burnt offerings and offering for sin thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law;

9 Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.[t]

11 And every priest standeth daily ministering and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins :[u]

1. "A worldly sanctuary:"—it is clear, we think, that the Apostle here meant to express not merely the locality, but also the quality of the sanctuary—its imperfection as well as its materiality.

2—7 "There was a tabernacle made:"—on these verses touching the structure of the Mosaic tabernacle, consult Exod. xxv. and Lev. xvi.

9. "A figure for the time then present:"—the holy place was, so long as the Mosaic tabernacle stood, a figurative representation of the holiest of all in heaven. Nor this only, the sacrifices which were offered in the ancient tabernacle, being in themselves inherently imperfect, could never make the worshippers perfect, of which they were themselves painfully conscious.

10 "Until the time of reformation."—the Levitical priesthood and service were to remain, notwithstanding their inherent imperfection, till the introduction of a new and brighter era—namely, that of the Gospel dispensation.

11. "By a greater and more perfect tabernacle;"—a much disputed phrase; but if we keep up the contrast between the Mosaic holy place and that into which Christ has entered, it is obvious that just as the high priest under the law appeared before God in the very nature for which he was offering the blood of atonement, so Christ passed into the heavens in possession of a true and perfect humanity; and it is to his glorified humanity the Apostle refers in the phrase, "by a greater and more perfect sacrifice."

16, 17. "The death of the testator."—the word "testament," in the preceding clause, and also in the preceding verse, should be rendered "covenant;" and as the Mosaic covenant was ratified by blood, so is the new or evangelical covenant; and therefore the words before us ought to be rendered, "there must also of necessity be the death of the testifying victim," whose blood is used to ratify the covenant. "For a covenant is of force after men are dead:"—any bonâ fide compact between man and man is certainly not annulled by the death of either party; otherwise it is not worthy of the name of compact while they live; and so the covenant which Christ entered into and sealed with his own blood has, notwithstanding his death—nay, in virtue of his death—all the elements of a covenant still, or else it was of no avail while he lived here. This he proves from the Mosaic covenant, in verses 16—22.

26. "In the end of the world;"—or at the close of the ages included in the former dispensation. When Christ came, a new era opened in the history of the world and in the cause of humanity.

CHAPTER X.

1, 2. "For the law having a shadow:"—the perfection and perpetuity of the Saviour's one sacrifice are now set forth in contrast with the imperfection and temporary character of the Mosaic institutions. Could those institutions have insured moral purity and spiritual perfection, then the Apostle asks the question, "Would they not have ceased when they had attained their object?" If the worshippers had had no consciousness of sin, they would assuredly have ceased to offer sacrifice.

20. "His flesh."—his death in our nature, as a propitiation for sin,

12 But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God;[a]

13 From henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool.[b]

14 For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.[c]

15 Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us: for after that he had said before,

16 This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;[d]

17 [1]And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.

18 Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

19 Having therefore, brethren, [2]boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus,[e]

20 By a new and living way, which he hath [3]consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh;[f]

21 And having an high priest over the house of God;[g]

22 Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.[h]

23 Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised;)[i]

24 And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works:

25 Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching.[j]

26 For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins,[k]

27 But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries.[l]

28 He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses:[m]

29 Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?[n]

30 For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people.[o]

31 It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.[p]

32 But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions;[q]

33 Partly, whilst ye were made a gazingstock both by reproaches and afflictions; and partly, whilst ye became companions of them that were so used.[r]

34 For ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing [4]in yourselves that ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance.[s]

35 Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward.[t]

36 For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.[u]

37 For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.[v]

38 Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.[w]

39 But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul.[x]

CHAPTER XI.

1 What faith is. 6 Without faith we cannot please God 7 The worthy fruits thereof in the fathers of old time.

NOW faith is the [5]substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.[y]

2 For by it the elders obtained a good report.[z]

3 Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.[a]

4 By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead [6]yet speaketh.[b] removed every intervening obstacle which lay in the way of our access to God; and now through him, or through the offering of himself once for all, we have permission granted for a free and uninterrupted access to God the Father, in and through the intercession of Christ the Son.

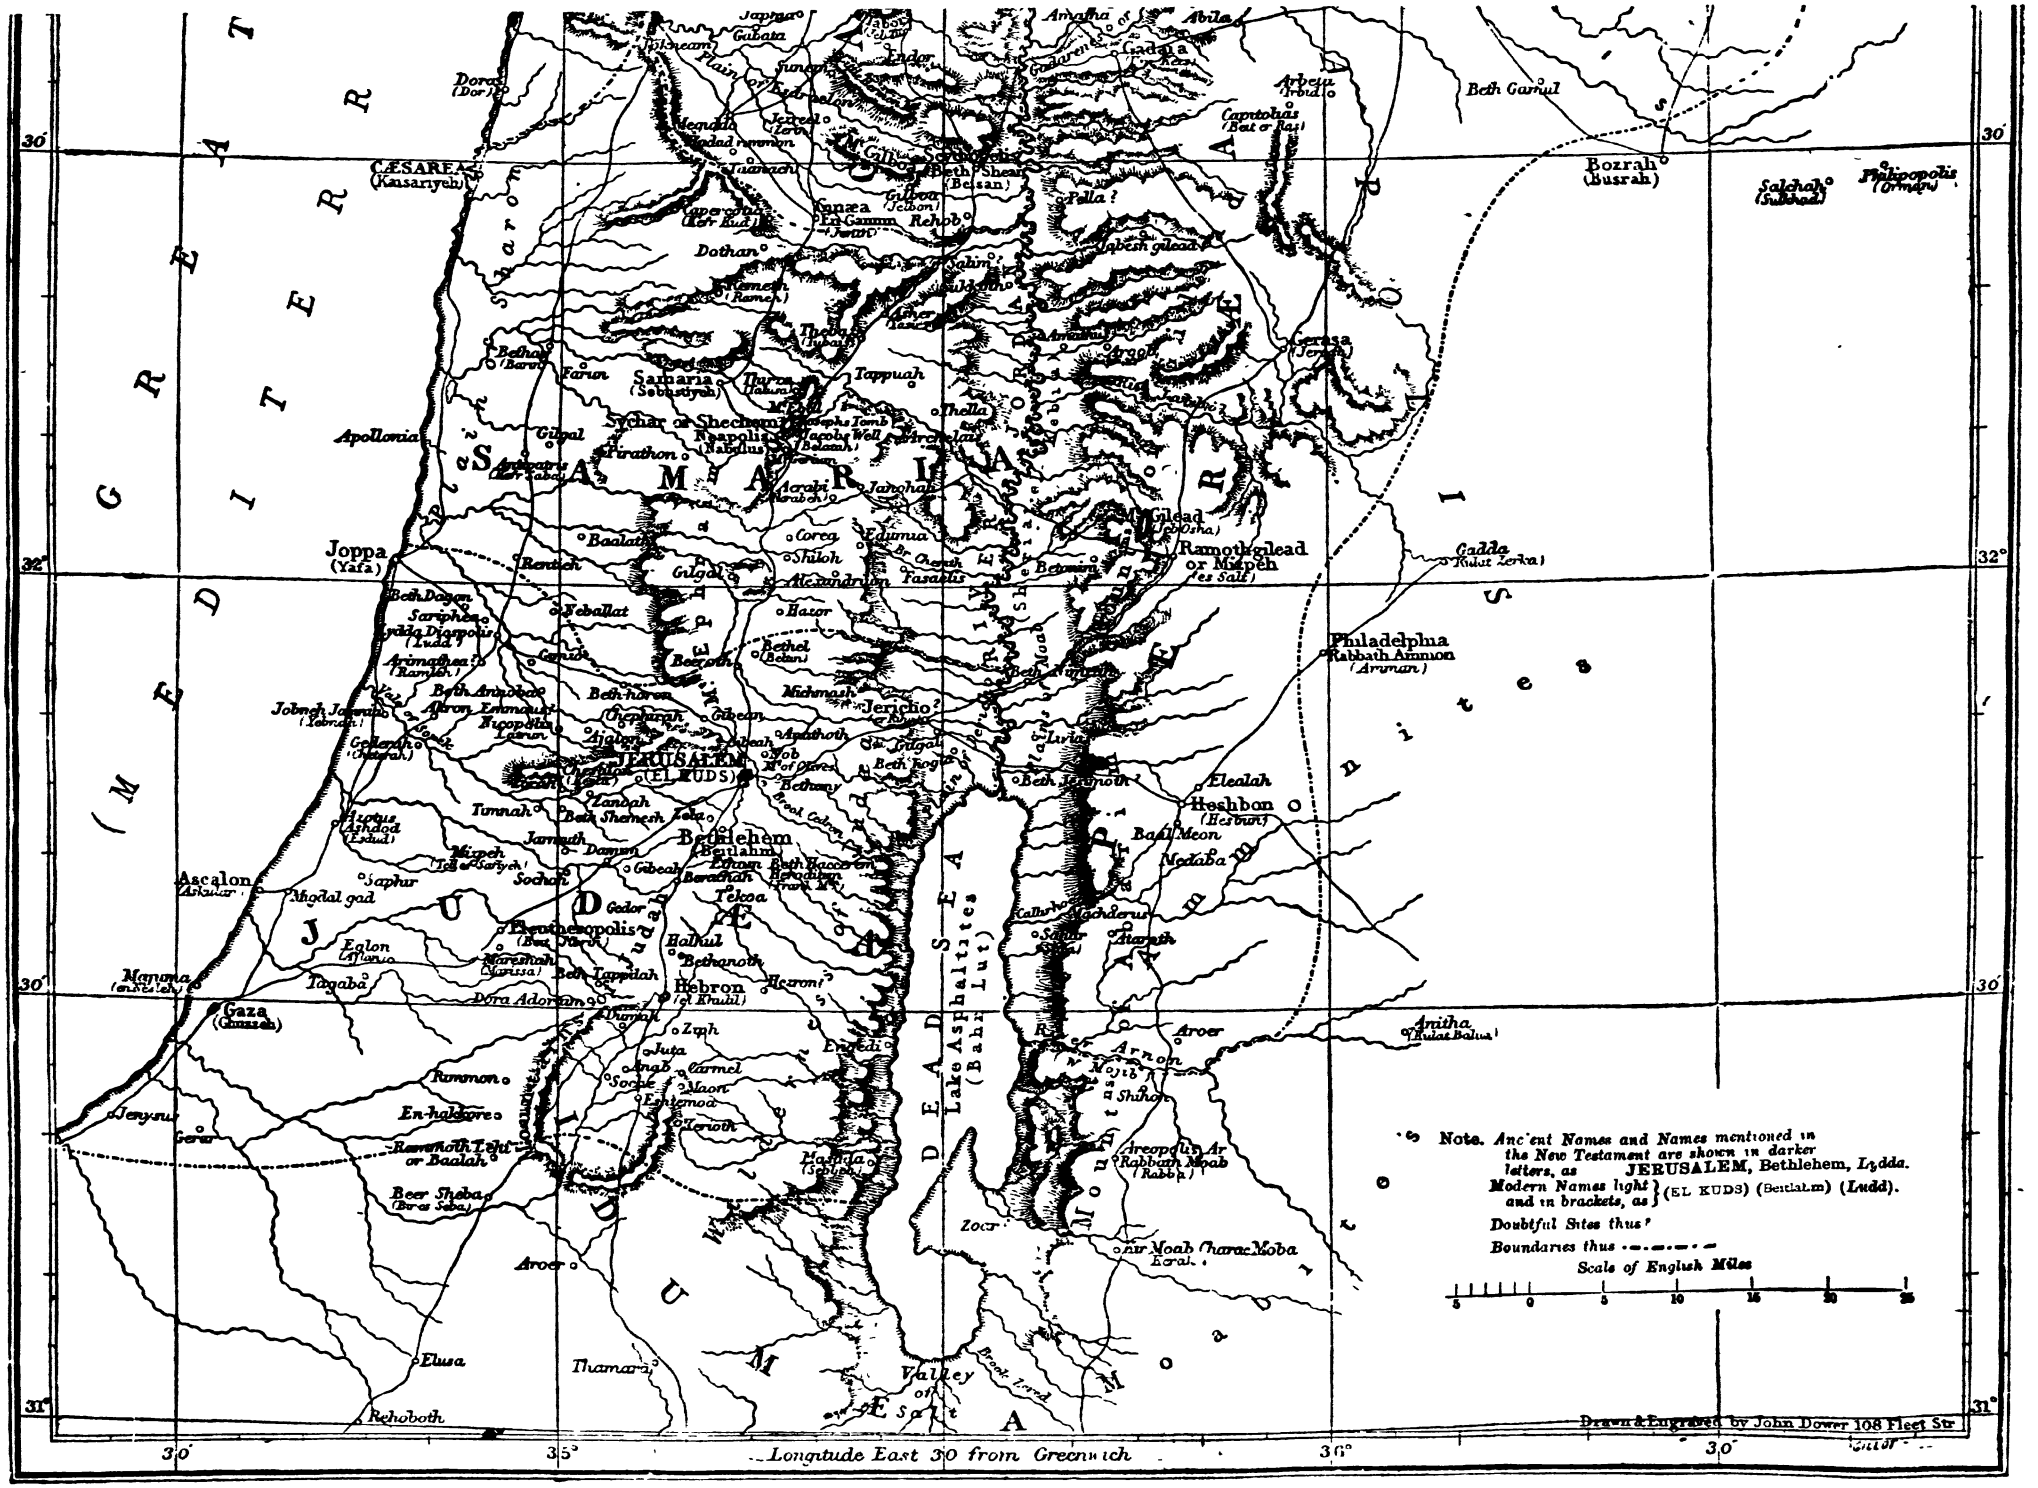
24. "Let us consider one another;"—keep in lively remembrance our relations to each other, and the duties arising out of those relations, and so provoke to, or emulate each other in love.

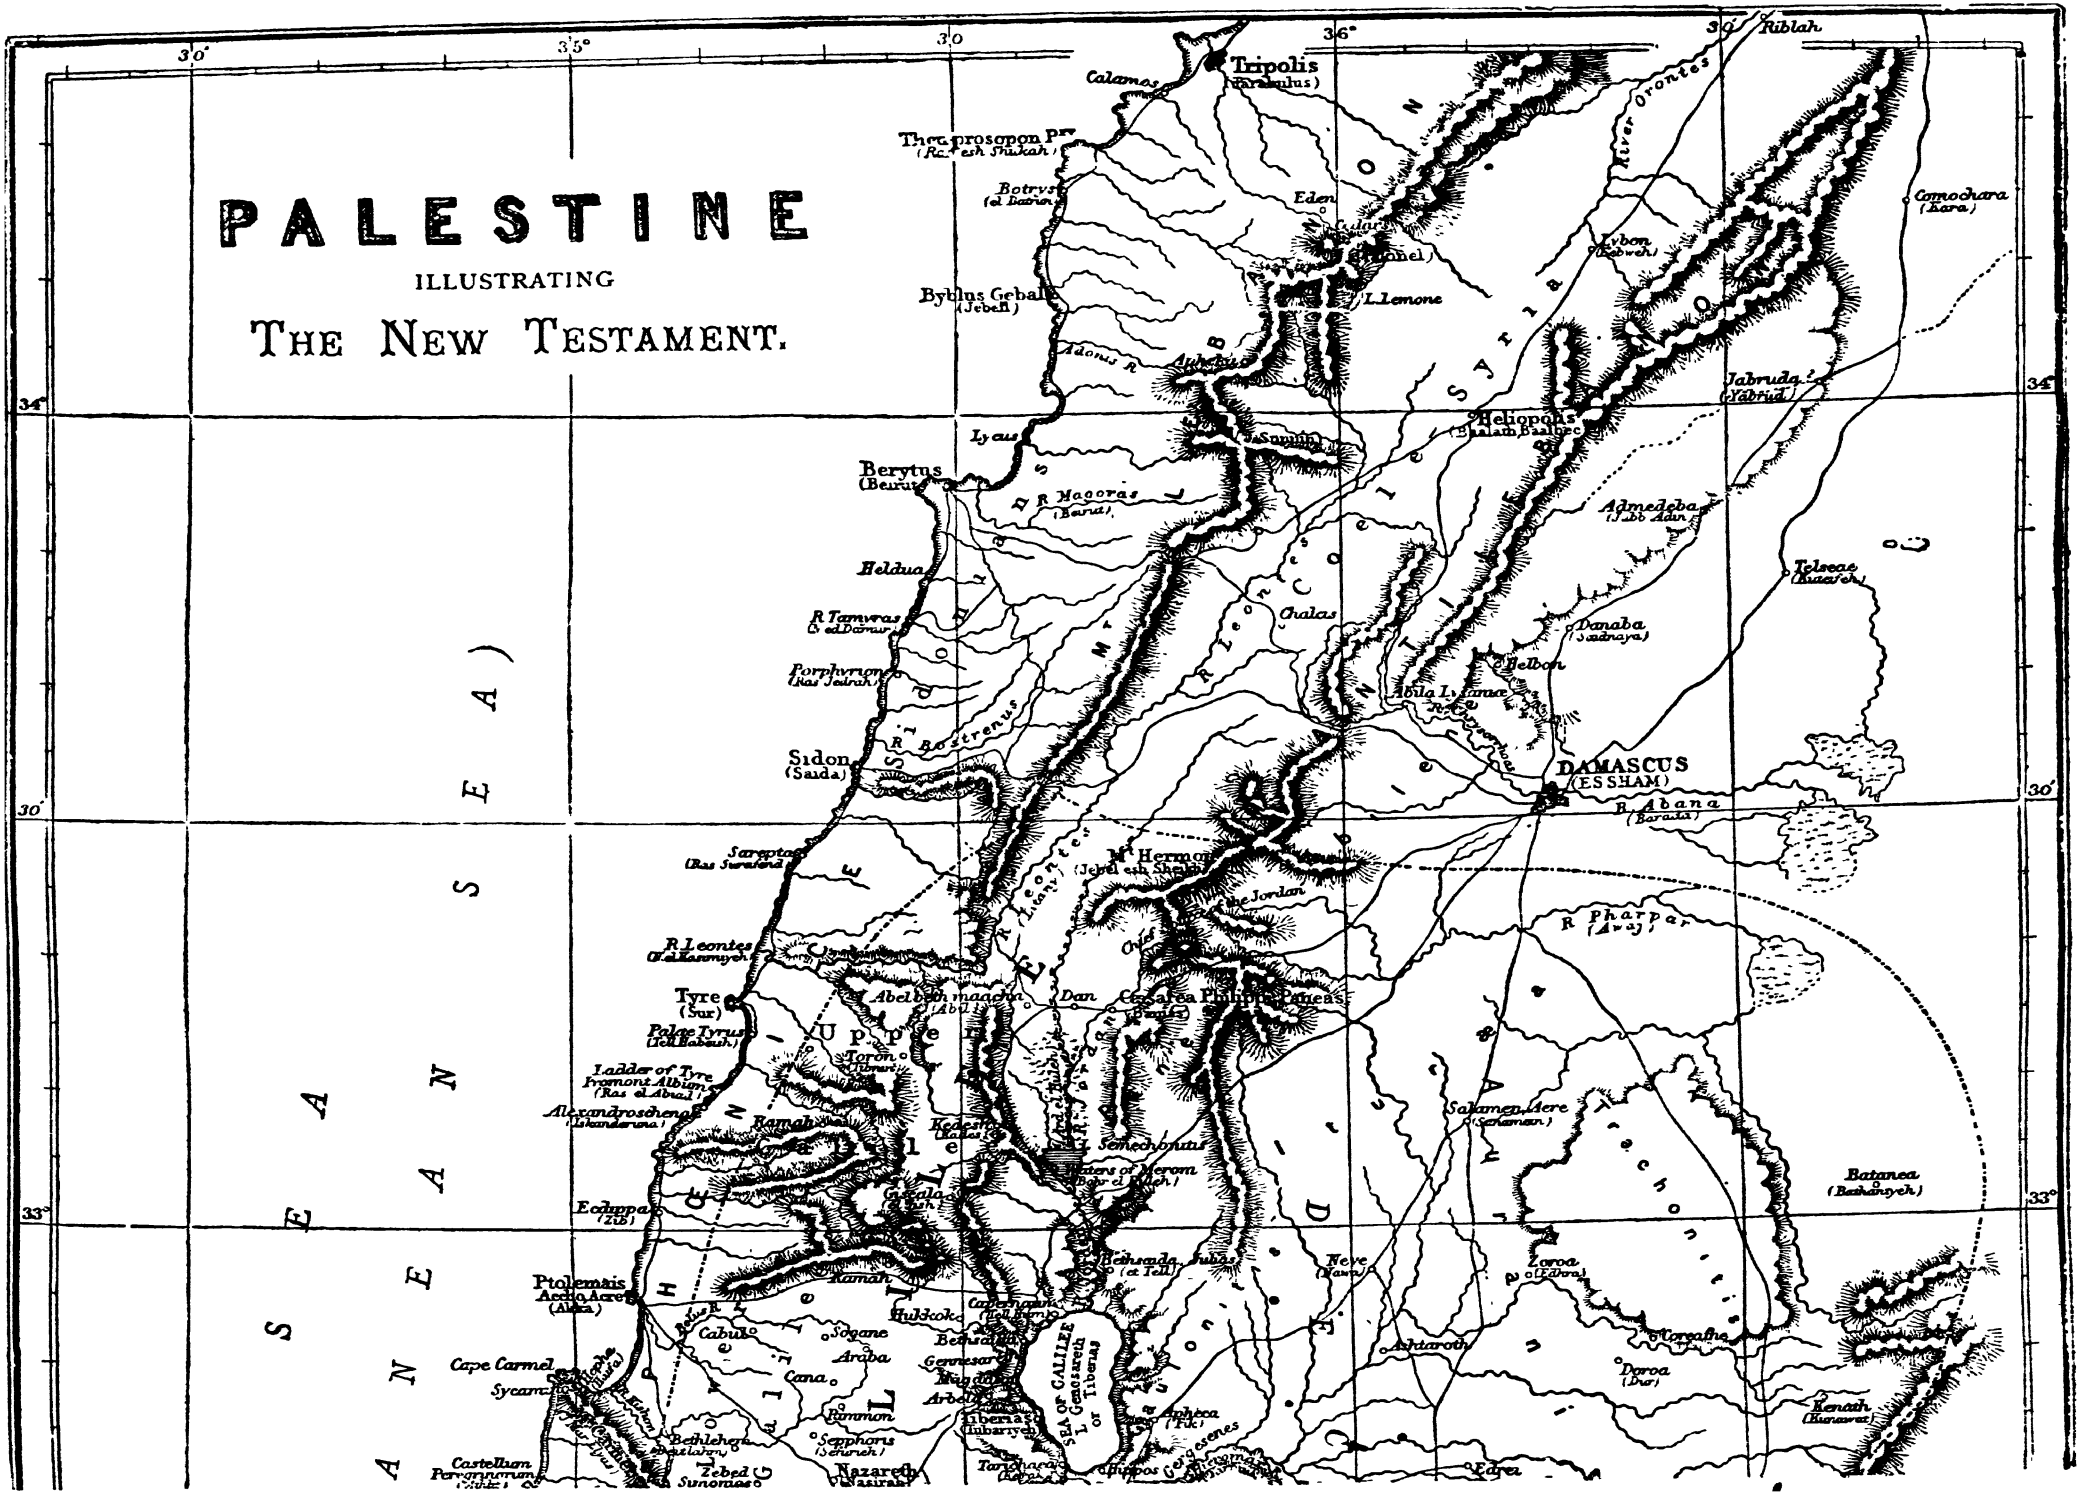
31. "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God;"—that is, in a state of apostacy or impenitence. Into no other hands does the believer desire to fall.

34. "Took joyfully the spoiling of your goods:"—when a Jew embraced Christianity, he was disinherited by his relations, his share in the property was denied him, his credit and every source of gain was lost, and he was reduced to a condition of comparative poverty.

CHAPTER XI.



1. "Now faith is the substance:"—the Apostle had just exhorted the Hebrews to hold fast the profession of their faith, as from their faith in Christ must spring their patience and power of endurance; as their patience would still be put to the test, for the day of calamity was impending; and only those who were strong in faith could persevere unto the end and here he shows that faith in Christ is a firm and well-grounded confidence of things hoped for, the conviction or demonstration of things not seen.



4. "A more excellent sacrifice;"—more appropriate as an offering for sin than the fruits of the earth, in which there being no shedding of blood—and without the shedding of blood there is no remission—it was impossible to shadow forth the future sacrifice which was divinely appointed to take place in the fulness of time, and also as being in obedience to the will of God as made known to Adam after his fall.

21 "Leaning upon the top of his staff;"—or, upon the head of his couch. It may be "that Jacob turned himself in his bed so as to lay his face to the pillow;" or if we retain the word "staff," then the act or gesture may have had a meaning correspondent to the thought in Gen. xxxii. 10—the recognition of the God who had supported him through life, and the declaration of his having done with all human supports

23. "A proper child;"—or rather, that the child was comely and beautiful. Its very loveliness endeared it to the parental heart, and the royal edict did not deter them from saving his life.

26 "The reproach of Christ"—just as Paul elsewhere calls the sufferings of Christians the sufferings of Christ, because borne for his sake, so here the

5 By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.[a]

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

7 By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, [1]moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.[b]

8 By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.[c]

9 By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise:[d]

10 For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.[e]

11 Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised.[f]

12 Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable.[g]

13 These all died [2]in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.[h]

14 For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country.[i]

15 And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned.

16 But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city.[j]

17 By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son,[k]

18 [3]Of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called;[l]

19 Accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure.[m]

20 By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.[n]

21 By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph; and worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff.[o]

22 By faith Joseph, when he died, [4]made mention of the departing of the children of Israel; and gave commandment concerning his bones.[p]

23 By faith Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's commandment.[q]

24 By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter;[r]

25 Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season;[s]

26 Esteeming the reproach [5]of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward.[t]

27 By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible.[u]

28 Through faith he kept the passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the firstborn should touch them.[v]

29 By faith they passed through the Red sea as by dry land: which the Egyptians assaying to do were drowned.[w]

30 By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.[x]

31 By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with them [6]that believed not, when she had received the spies with peace.[y]

32 And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets:[z]

33 Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions,[a]

34 Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens.[b]

35 Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection:[c]

36 And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment:[d]

37 They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented:[e]

reproach of Moses is called the reproach of Christ, in whom the faith of Moses reposed, whose servant he was, and for whom he patiently endured reproach

35 "A better resurrection:"—they accepted not that deliverance which they might have bought at the price of denying their faith, but parted with life, retaining their faith, in joyful hope of the martyr's crown, and of the glories that await those who have a part in the first resurrection.

40 "That they without us should not be made perfect:"—it enters not into the plans of God to perfect anything by itself. Hence, just as those who have gone before are waiting for us, so we, if we are found among the children of God and the disciples of his Son, shall have to wait for those who come after us, till the whole company of the faithful can be presented entire before God.

CHAPTER XII.

1. "Wherefore:"—from the great and illustrious examples supplied in the preceding chapter of that faith which is the confidence of things hoped for, and the conviction of things not seen, the Apostle draws his materials for holy and earnest exhortation.

"Lay aside every weight."—the Apostle borrows his illustration from the practice in the Olympic games of the wrestlers, who so trained and disciplined themselves as to get free of all superfluous flesh, to qualify them for more successfully running the race; so we are to lay aside everything which would impede us in our Christian course.

2. "The author and finisher of our faith;"—or, as the passage may be rendered, "the Leader and the Perfecter of the faith." A long series of 38 (Of whom the world was not worthy:) they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth.[a]

39 And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise:[b]

40 God having [1]provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect.[c]

CHAPTER XII.

1 An exhortation to constant faith, patience, and godliness. 22 A commendation of the new testament above the old.

WHEREFORE seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us,[d]

2 Looking unto Jesus the [2]author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.[e]

3 For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.[f]

4 Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin.[g]

5 And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him:[h]

6 For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.[i]

7 If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?[j]

8 But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.[k]

9 Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?[l]

10 For they verily for a few days chastened us [3]after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.[m]

11 Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.[n]

12 Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees;[o]

13 And make [4]straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed.[p]

14 Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord:[q]

15 Looking diligently lest any man [5]fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled;[r]

16 Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright.[s]

17 For ye know how that afterward, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no [6]place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.[t]

18 For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,[u]

19 And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard intreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more:[v]

20 (For they could not endure that which was commanded, And if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:[w]

21 And so terrible was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake:)[x]

22 But ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels,[y]

23 To the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are [7]written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect,[z]

24 And to Jesus the mediator of the new [8]covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.[a]

25 See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven:[b]

26 Whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven.[c] witnesses had been adduced in the eleventh chapter. The author and his readers look back into the past, and see at the extremity Abel with his faith fixed on the simple promise, "The seed of the woman"—that is, the forthcoming Messiah—"shall bruise the serpent's head;" but faith as yet was undeveloped. This faith becomes clearer and more definite in Abraham, Moses, and the subsequent individuals in the series, but the foremost in the line is Jesus the LEADER, who stands at the head as perfect in his own faith, and as the perfecter by his grace of the faith which marks all the children of God. This glorious Leader laid aside for a season the glory which he had with the Father before the world was, and gave himself up unreservedly to the Father's will, he lived and acted in the spirit of obedience, and submitted to death itself, in the calm assurance that the Father would raise him again, and through his death destroy the power of death; he displayed the faith which is perfect; and now leads, onwards and upwards, in royal majesty, the goodly company of the faithful here on earth to their celestial habitations.

5—10. "Ye have forgotten the exhortation."—in these verses the Apostle shows that persecution, and reproach, and suffering, are not unmixed evils, but salutary in their operation and effects on the true believer. Affliction and persecution have a twofold character. on the one hand, they may be regarded as trials of faith—as trials showing how much of the new nature there is in the Christian, and how strong that renewed nature is, on the other hand, however, they are also chastisements and means of purification, which serve to subdue the old nature.

17. "Found no place of repentance,"—that is, he found no possible means of inducing a change in his father's mind. His father had conferred the blessing on another son, and he could not, he would not revoke it

18—24 "Ye are not come unto the mount"—the Apostle derives another motive to fidelity and perseverance in the Christian life from the superiority of the new and everlasting economy over the old and now abrogated dispensation He presents the distinction between the law and the Gospel Both are divine; but the law is terrible—its office is to convict of sin the guilty and slumbering conscience. The new covenant, with its redemption, is lively and attractive. The Apostle shows, however, not merely how attractive and glorious the new covenant is, but also how much more terrible it is to despise the grace of this new covenant, and how much more terrible Christ will be when he shall come again as Judge to those who have preferred the terms of the law to the offers of grace, and have, by this wilful rejection of God's mercy through Christ, brought down a just judgment upon themselves.

27 And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that [1]are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain.[a]

28 Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, [2]let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear:

29 For our God is a consuming fire.[b]

3 Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body.[e]

4 Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled: but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.[f]

5 Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.[g]

6 So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.[h]

25 Grace be with you all. Amen.[a]

¶ Written to the Hebrews from Italy by Timothy.

"Speaketh better things than that of Abel."—the interpretation commonly put upon these words is "Abel's blood cries for vengeance; Christ's blood cries for grace" But the Apostle is here contrasting the old and new dispensations, and the blood of Abel shed by his brother Cain is not to be taken as an element in the Jewish economy. The key to these words is to be found in chap xi 4, where the Apostle says, "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain . . . . and he being dead yet speaketh" His faith was embodied in his sacrifice, and that sacrifice was the type of all the sacrifices which followed under the law, but while these were a shadow of good things, Christ's blood speaketh better things 27 "That those things which cannot be shaken may remain"—in this final agitation and change of all things, the only thing which does not suffer in the universal change is THE KINGDOM OF GOD, based on the mediation and exaltation of his own Son.

29. "A consuming fire"—this is a quotation from the Pentateuch, and plainly intimates to us that God's anger continues to burn now, as of old, against those who reject his grace, and refuse to yield obedience to the Son of God But, as Alford says, "in the background lie all those gracious dealings by which the fire of God's presence and purity becomes to his people (while it consumes their vanity, and sin, and earthly state) the fire of purity, and light, and love for their enduring citizenship in heaven."

CHAPTER XIII.

1. "Let brotherly love continue"—this love is not to be taken in the sense of the Christian's love to his fellow-man in the common relations of life, but "that love of the Christian to the Christian as a member with him of the body of Christ. . . . Such exercise of brotherly love the Hebrews required in order most firmly to settle them in Christianity."

2. "Entertained angels."—this is founded on Gen. xviii, xix and certainly one of the many manifestations of brotherly love is hospitality; for if the Christian is to exercise love towards brethren who are strangers, how much more towards suffering brethren, known and acknowledged as such?

5. "Your conversation,"—that is, the manner of life "be without covetousness;" for he whose heart cleaves to earthly possessions will be faint-hearted in the day of persecution. Avarice paralyses the strength of faith. Covetousness was the besetting sin of the Jews, as it is of our own age.

10 "We have an altar"—the altar is here put for that which is on the altar—the sacrifice; and of this sacrifice no one can partake who still cleaves to the outward and ceremonial.

13 "Let us go forth;"—be willing to be deemed unclean and unworthy, and to suffer as our Lord. Let us follow him whithersoever he went.

23. "Know ye that our brother Timothy is set at liberty:"—we may gather from these words that Timothy had been called to suffer bonds for Christ, but had been providentially delivered. It is believed that St. Paul was liberated for a time, and he may have been free when this Epistle was written. In the end he was subjected to close confinement, and it is said that he was taken from his prison and beheaded on the Ostian way, towards the close of Nero's reign. Although we have no certain proof that it was so, we place on a preceding page a sketch of the dungeon at Rome in which a tradition says St Paul and also St. Peter were imprisoned At the present time this dungeon forms part of what is called the Church of "St. Peter in Prison," over which is erected the Church of St. Joseph Here it is believed once existed the dreadful Tullian or Mamertine Prison spoken of by ancient authors. There are now two cells, one above the other; the entrance to the first is by steps, but it was anciently only accessible through a hole in the vault, by which the unhappy victims were lowered. The upper compartment is about 27 feet long, 20 wide, and 16 high. The lower cell is reached by steps, but was once only entered by a hole in the vault. It is 21 feet long, 9 wide, and 7 in height. The origin of this gloomy prison is referred to the times of Ancus Martius, one of the early kings of Rome. Here it is believed Jugurtha was permitted to die of hunger, and here the accomplices of Catiline were strangled. Without attaching importance to the mere tradition that St. Paul and St. Peter were confined in this prison for nine months, it is certain that the dungeon is of great antiquity.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JAMES

CHAPTER I.

1 We are to rejoice under the cross, 5 to ask patience of God, 13 and in our trials not to impute our weakness, or sins, unto him, 19 but rather to hearken to the word, to meditate in it, and to do thereafter. 26 Otherwise men may seem, but never be truly religious.

JAMES, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad, greeting.[a]

2 My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations;[b]

4 But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing.[c]

5 If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that

CHAPTER I.

Whether the author of this Epistle was James the son of Zebedee, and brother of St. John, or the James mentioned in the Acts as the president of the Council held at Jerusalem, and designated by St. Paul the brother of our Lord, is a question which has divided the critics and commentators, both ancient and modern. It is generally supposed, however, that it could not be the former; and if the latter, then the question has been raised—Was this James identical with James the son of Alphæus, who was one of the Twelve? Here again opinion is divided, and we fear that the question must still be left in this state of uncertainty.

The Epistle was written for the instruction of Hebrew converts to the Christian faith, scattered abroad in various lands and countries, as the result of bitter persecution. Their moral and spiritual state was not such as to yield any satisfaction to the writer of the Epistle. A great deal existed among these Hebrew converts wholly inconsistent with the higher and the clearer teachings of Christianity, and which had its root in their carnal Judaism. They were mixed communities, needing the Apostle's fidelity to effect a thorough purification. If the author was at the head of the Council at Jerusalem, then it is but natural to suppose that the Letter was written from the Holy City; but whether before or after the Council mentioned in Acts xv., is matter of doubt. The design of the Epistle is to inculcate morality upon Christian principles. It exhibits the practical side of Christianity, and "is full of earnestness, plain speaking, and holy severity;" while its style is "not only fresh and vivid, the immediate outflowing of a deep and earnest spirit, but at the same time it is sententious and rich in figurative language."

1. "To the twelve tribes which are scattered:"—this dispersion was the effect of fiery persecution; and James, who claims not the rank or dignity of giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.[a]

6 But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed.[b]

7 For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.

8 A double minded man is unstable in all his ways.[c]

9 Let the brother of low degree [1]rejoice in that he is exalted:

10 But the rich, in that he is made low: because as the flower of the grass he shall pass away.[d]

11 For the sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it withereth the grass, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the fashion of it perisheth: so also shall the rich man fade away in his ways.

12 Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.[e]

13 Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with [2]evil, neither tempteth he any man:

14 But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed.

15 Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death.[f]

16 Do not err, my beloved brethren.

17 Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.[g]

18 Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures.[h]

19 Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath:[i]

20 For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God.

21 Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls.[j]

22 But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves.[k]

23 For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass:[l]

24 For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.

25 But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his [3]deed.[m]

26 If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain.[n]

27 Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.[o]

CHAPTER II.

1 It is not agreeable to Christian profession to regard the rich, and to despise the poor brethren 13 rather we are to be loving, and merciful: 14 and not to boast of faith where no deeds are, 17 which is but a dead faith, 19 the faith of devils, 21 not of Abraham, 25 and Rahab.

MY brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons.[p]

2 For if there come unto your [4]assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment;

3 And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here [5]in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool:

4 Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

5 Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of [6]the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?[q]

6 But ye have despised the poor. Do not rich men oppress you, and draw you before the judgment seats?[r]

7 Do not they blaspheme that worthy name by the which ye are called?

8 If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well:[s]

9 But if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors.[t]

10 For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all.[u]

11 For [7]he that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law.[v]

12 So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty.[w]

13 For he shall have judgment without mercy, that hath shewed no mercy; and mercy [8]rejoiceth against judgment.[x]

14 What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him?[y]

15 If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food,[z]

an apostle, but who was the kinsman of our Lord, and his servant in the Gospel, writes to animate and encourage—to counsel and instruct them.

3 "Worketh patience,"—or the power to endure, and patience is perfect when it can rejoice in tribulation as a means to some higher end.

9–11 "Let the brother of low degree"—next to stability of character is humility of spirit. The poor brother is exalted by his position in the Church and family of God, but his exaltation is based on poverty of spirit; and the rich man is made low by being taught that he owes his position, not to his wealth, which is perishable as the grass, but to the grace of God, for which he is an everlasting debtor, and thus his indebtedness is calculated to beget in him the deepest and the truest humility. As a sinner, he stands before God on the same ground as the poorest man, and as a sinner saved, he is a debtor to the same mercy.

25. "Perfect law of liberty,"—that is, the Gospel which binds us to obedience, and renders the law a rule of life, but frees us from the sins wherewith we were tied and bound, and enables us to declare that the Gospel is the law fulfilled—that the Gospel is the secret of liberty, and that Christ's service is perfect freedom.

CHAPTER II.

9. "Convinced of the law;"—or rather, convicted by the law, which commands that thou shalt love thy neighbour, poor as well as rich.

16 And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?[a]

17 Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being [1]alone.

18 Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith [2]without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works.[b]

19 Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble.[c]

20 But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?

21 Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?[d]

22 [3]Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?[e]

23 And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called the Friend of God.[f]

24 Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only.

25 Likewise also was not Rahab the harlot justified by works, when she had received the messengers, and had sent them out another way?[g]

26 For as the body without the [4]spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.

CHAPTER III.

1 We are not rashly or arrogantly to reprove others 5 but rather to bridle the tongue, a little member, but a powerful instrument of much good, and great harm. 13 They who be truly wise be mild, and peaceable, without envying, and strife.

MY brethren, be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater [5]condemnation.[h]

2 For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body.[i]

3 Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body.[j]

4 Behold also the ships, which though they be so great and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth.

5 Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold, how great [6]a matter a little fire kindleth![k]

6 And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the [7]course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell.[l]

7 For every [8]kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of [9]mankind:

8 But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison.[m]

9 Therewith bless we God, even the Father; and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God.[n]

10 Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be.

11 Doth a fountain send forth at the same [10]place sweet water and bitter?

12 Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine, figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh.

13 Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom.[o]

14 But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth.[p]

15 This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, [11]sensual, devilish.[q]

16 For where envying and strife is, there is [12]confusion and every evil work.[r]

17 But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, [13]without partiality, and without hypocrisy.[s]

18 And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace.[t]

CHAPTER IV.

1 We are to strive against covetousness, 4 intemperance, 5 pride, 11 detraction, and rash judgment of others 13 and not to be confident in the good success of worldly business, but mindful ever of the uncertainty of this life, to commit ourselves and all our affairs to God's providence.

FROM whence come wars and [14]fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your [15]lusts that war in your members?[u]

2 Ye lust, and have not: ye [16]kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not.

3 Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your [17]lusts.[v]

4 Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity

13. "Mercy rejoiceth against judgment;"—that is to say, in the case of those who have shown mercy, the judgment which would condemn every man alike will give place to the triumph of mercy.

14—16. "What doth it profit?"—a much disputed passage. The question sometimes asked is, Does not James's teaching stand in opposition to Paul's doctrine of justification by faith? We reply that there is no discrepancy between the two writers. Paul is writing to those who supposed that they could be pardoned and accepted by God on the ground of their works alone; this error he successfully combats, and establishes his own higher position, that justification is by faith. James, on the other hand, is writing to those who, having "a name to live," were yet dead;—nominal Christians, who dreamed that nothing more than a barren profession was necessary to insure their acceptance, and against this error his argument is directed. "What doth it profit, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works?" Can such faith save him? Both Paul and James maintain that justification is by faith, but true faith worketh by love. If a man love God, he will love his brother also, and if he love his brother, he will seek, as far as he may have means and opportunity, to promote his welfare.

CHAPTER III.

1. "Be not many masters;"—or rather, teachers; for the office of teacher involves greater responsibility, and, if not faithfully fulfilled, greater condemnation.

2. "We offend all:"—the more correct rendering would be, "We all with God? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God.[a]

5 Do ye think that the scripture saith in vain, The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth [1]to envy?[b]

6 But he giveth more grace. Wherefore he saith, God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.[c]

7 Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.[d]

8 Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded.[e]

9 Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness.[f]

10 Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up.[g]

11 Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.[h]

12 There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another?[i]

13 Go to now, ye that say, To day or to morrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain:[j]

14 Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? [2]It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.[k]

15 For that ye ought to say, If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that.[l]

16 But now ye rejoice in your boastings: all such rejoicing is evil.[m]

17 Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.[n]

CHAPTER V.

1 Wicked rich men are to fear God's vengeance. 7 We ought to be patient in afflictions, after the example of the prophets, and Job. 12 to forbear swearing, 13 to pray in adversity, to sing in prosperity 16 to acknowledge mutually our several faults, to pray one for another, 19 and to reduce a straying brother to the truth

GO to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.[o]

2 Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are motheaten.[p]

3 Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days.[q]

4 Behold, the hire of the labourers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of sabaoth.[r]

5 Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts, as in a day of slaughter.[s]

6 Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you.[t]

7 [3]Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain.[u]

8 Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.[v]

9 [4]Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: behold, the judge standeth before the door.[w]

10 Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience.[x]

11 Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.[y]

12 But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath: but let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation.[z]

13 Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing psalms.[a]

14 Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord:[b]

15 And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.[c]

16 Confess your faults one to another, and pray [5]one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.[d]

17 Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed [5]earnestly that it might not rain: and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months.[e]

18 And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.[f]

19 Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him;[g]

20 Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins.[h] offend;" that is, with the tongue or in our speech. Whoever has power over his tongue, has power over the whole man.

CHAPTER IV.

1. "From whence come wars?"—James here descends into the very depth of the heart, and reveals its secret workings. He represents unholy desires like an army encamped within, and which exert their power in and through the members of the body.

5—7. "The spirit that dwelleth in us" is not to be taken as the Spirit of God, but the evil principle in our fallen nature which is lusting to envy—a principle whose root is pride; but whoever will renounce the love of the world for the love of God, to him more grace will be given. Submit, therefore, to the will of God, and in the strength of God seek to avoid the very beginnings of evil.

11. "The end of the Lord;"—that is, the design which the Lord had in view in the sufferings of his servants—the richer display of his mercy and grace.

14. "Anointing him with oil"—anointing the sick with oil was probably designed to be a token of the miracle of healing which gifted men were enabled to perform in the first age of Christianity. There is no evidence that it had in it a sacramental character, and it was wholly removed from the extreme unction of the Church of Rome, which is never administered but when all hope of life is given up, whereas this anointing was connected with restoration to health. The doctrine of extreme unction can find no sanction from this portion of Scripture.

First Epistle General OF PETER

CHAPTER I.

1 He blesseth God for his manifold spiritual graces 10 shewing that the salvation in Christ is no news, but a thing prophesied of old 13 and exhorteth them accordingly to a godly conversation, forasmuch as they are now born anew by the word of God.

CHAPTER I.

Peter was one of the two disciples of John who at an early period in our Lord's ministry became his followers. Peter was constitutionally bold, impetuous, daring; but was proportionately wanting in reflection and judgment. Still, as a whole, his character was noble, nor is there any one save John and Paul, in the history of the infant Church, which makes so deep an impression on the heart and affections of the pious reader.

Peter dedicates this Epistle to "the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia." The language of the original is remarkable, and conveys the idea of "sojourners who are dispersed;" literally, "to the elect sojourners of the dispersion." But it is evident from the following verse that he speaks only to the scattered members of Christ in the regions he enumerates. These regions were all provinces in Asia Minor. Pontus was bordered by Armenia on the east, and by the Black Sea on the north. Galatia lay to the west of Pontus, and was a large inland province. Cappadocia was to the south of Pontus, and to the south-east of Galatia, like which it was an inland province. Asia was a name often applied to the western parts of Asia Minor, with Ephesus as a capital. Bithynia was a district north-east of Asia, and north-west of Galatia. A glance at the map will show that St. Peter addresses the Christians of the greater part of Asia Minor. There were many cities of importance, and many grand and romantic scenes in the provinces in question. In our illustration at the head of this Epistle, we introduce a view of the fortified gate entrance to Nicæa in Bithynia, and a view of Mount Argæus, in Cappadocia. Nicæa was an important place for many centuries, and a Christian Church was early formed there. The first General Council was held there by Constantine the Great in A.D. 325. At that council the doctrines of Arius were condemned, and the Nicene Creed was drawn up. In A.D. 787, another General Council was held at Nicæa, when a degenerate and superstitious age formally admitted image-worship into the Church of God. The ruins of Nicæa are extensive,

4 To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven [1]for you,[a]

5 Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.[b]

6 Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations:[c]

7 That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ:[d]

8 Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory:[e]

9 Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.[f]

10 Of which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you:[g]

11 Searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow.[h]

12 Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; which things the angels desire to look into.[i]

13 Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope [2]to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ;[j]

14 As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance:[k]

15 But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation;[l]

16 Because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy.[m]

17 And if ye call on the Father, who without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work, pass the time of your sojourning here in fear:[n]

18 Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers;[o]

19 But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot:[p]

23 Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever.[t]

24 [3]For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away:[u]

25 But the word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you.[v]

CHAPTER II.

1 He dehorteth them from the breach of charity: 4 shewing that Christ is the foundation whereupon they are built. 11 He beseecheth them also to abstain from fleshly lusts, 13 to be obedient to magistrates, 18 and teacheth servants how to obey their masters, 20 patiently suffering for well doing, after the example of Christ.

WHEREFORE laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings,[w]

2 As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby:[x]

3 If so be ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious.[y]

4 To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious,[z]

5 Ye also, as lively stones, [4]are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.[a]

6 Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded.[b]

7 Unto you therefore which believe he is [5]precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner,[c]

8 And a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: whereunto also they were appointed.[d]

9 But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, [6]a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the [7]praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light:[e]

10 Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.[f]

11 Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul;[g] and its gates and walls have called forth especial admiration from travellers. Within these walls the modern village of Ismik now stands.

Mount Argæus is the highest in Cappadocia, and its summit is said to be always covered with snow. This mountain is a wild and magnificent object, very steep on one side, 13,100 feet above the sea, and requires two days to ascend. The general aspect of the mountain is rugged and barren, and the mountain itself is of a volcanic nature. It stands ten miles E.S.E. of Kaisariyeh.

Those to whom the letter is addressed were suffering from that opposition to the Christian faith which was rapidly passing into an open and bitter persecution; and hence Peter, whose own soul is resting on the living Rock, by the strength of his testimony seeks to animate the minds of his Christian brethren against the hour of trial, by pointing them to Christ, and to the work he accomplished for their deliverance from the power of Satan and from the fear of death. Alford observes that "there is no epistle in the sacred canon the language and spirit of which come more directly home to the personal trials, and wants, and weaknesses of the Christian life."

The Epistle was written from Babylon, the far-famed city of Chaldea, somewhere between the years A.D 63—68

25. "Endureth for ever"—the only thing which is permanent in this world is the Gospel, with its divine and imperishable results.

CHAPTER II.

2. "The sincere milk;"—the pure truth of the Gospel. The nourishment and growth of the Christian will be in proportion to the purity of the truth received.

Gentiles: that, [1]whereas they speak against you as evildoers, they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.[a]

13 Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;[b]

14 Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well.[c]

15 For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:[d]

16 As free, and not [2]using your liberty for a cloke of maliciousness, but as the servants of God.[e]

17 [3]Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king.[f]

18 Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear; not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward.[g]

19 For this is [4]thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully.[h]

20 For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is [5]acceptable with God.[i]

21 For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered [6]for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps:[j]

22 Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:[k]

23 Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but [7]committed himself to him that judgeth righteously:[l]

24 Who his own self bare our sins in his own body [8]on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed.[m]

25 For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls.[n]

CHAPTER III.

1 He teacheth the duty of wives and husbands to each other, 8 exhorting all men to unity and love, 14 and to suffer persecution. 19 He declareth also the benefits of Christ toward the old world.

LIKEWISE, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, they also may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives;[o]

2 While they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear.[p]

3 Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel;[q]

4 But let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.[r]

5 For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands:

6 Even as Sara obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose [9]daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement.[s]

7 Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; that your prayers be not hindered.[t]

8 Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, [10]love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous:[u]

9 Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing.[v]

10 For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile:[w]

11 Let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it.[x]

12 For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is [11]against them that do evil.[y]

13 And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?[z]

14 But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled;[a]

15 But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and [12]fear:[b]

16 Having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.[c]

17 For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

18 For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit:[d]

19 By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison;[e]

20 Which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water.[f]

12. "Among the Gentiles:"—the Apostle is not writing to Jews only, and therefore he points here to the unconverted heathen, who would be sure to seize on the inconsistencies of those who professed the Christian faith, as an excuse for their own rejection of it.

"In the day of visitation:"—a time of great trial was coming upon the whole Church, during which their principles would be put to the severest test; while the part which they acted in such circumstances would lead others to glorify God, or to turn away from Christian truth.

13. "Submit yourselves:"—from this verse on to chap. iv. 6, the Apostle introduces a variety of practical instructions for the conduct of believers in their intercourse with the men of the world, and fortifies his exhortation by the example of the meek and lowly Saviour.

CHAPTER III.

3—6. "Whose adorning:"—a woman's attire will be very much regulated by the principles which govern her heart: if her dress be at variance with her professed principles, the principles will be condemned by the ungodly, rather than the vanity which the unbecoming attire exhibits.

7. "That your prayers be not hindered."—the husband and wife must live in mutual love and confidence, lest their prayers be impeded by a state of mind that is unfriendly to devotion.

19—21. "By which also he went."—one meaning suggested is that Christ, by his Spirit, preached through the ministry of Noah to the antediluvians, whose spirits, in consequence of unbelief and impenitence, are now in the dark hades, as in a prison, reserved for final judgment.

21 The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ:[a]

22 Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him.[b]

CHAPTER IV.

1 He exhorteth them to cease from sin by the example of Christ, and the consideration of the general end that now approacheth: 12 and comforteth them against persecution

FORASMUCH then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin;[c]

2 That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God.[d]

3 For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries:[e]

4 Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you:[f]

5 Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.[g]

6 For for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.[h]

7 But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer.[i]

8 And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity [1]shall cover the multitude of sins.[j]

9 Use hospitality one to another without grudging.[k]

10 As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God.[l]

11 If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.[m]

12 Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you:[n]

13 But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy.[o]

14 If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified.[p]

15 But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, or as a busybody in other men's matters.[q]

16 Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf.[r]

17 For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?[s]

18 And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?[t]

19 Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator.[u]

CHAPTER V.

1 He exhorteth the elders to feed their flocks, 5 the younger to obey, 8 and all to be sober, watchful, and constant in the faith 9 to resist the cruel adversary the devil.

THE elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:[v]

2 Feed the flock of God [2]which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;[w]

3 Neither as [3]being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock.[x]

4 And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.[y]

5 Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.[z]

6 Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time:[a]

7 Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you.[b]

8 Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:[c]

9 Whom resist stedfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world.[d]

10 But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you.[e]

11 To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.[f]

12 By Silvanus, a faithful brother unto you, as I suppose, I have written briefly, exhorting, and testifying that this is the true grace of God wherein ye stand.[g]

13 The church that is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you; and so doth Marcus my son.[h]

14 Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen.[i]

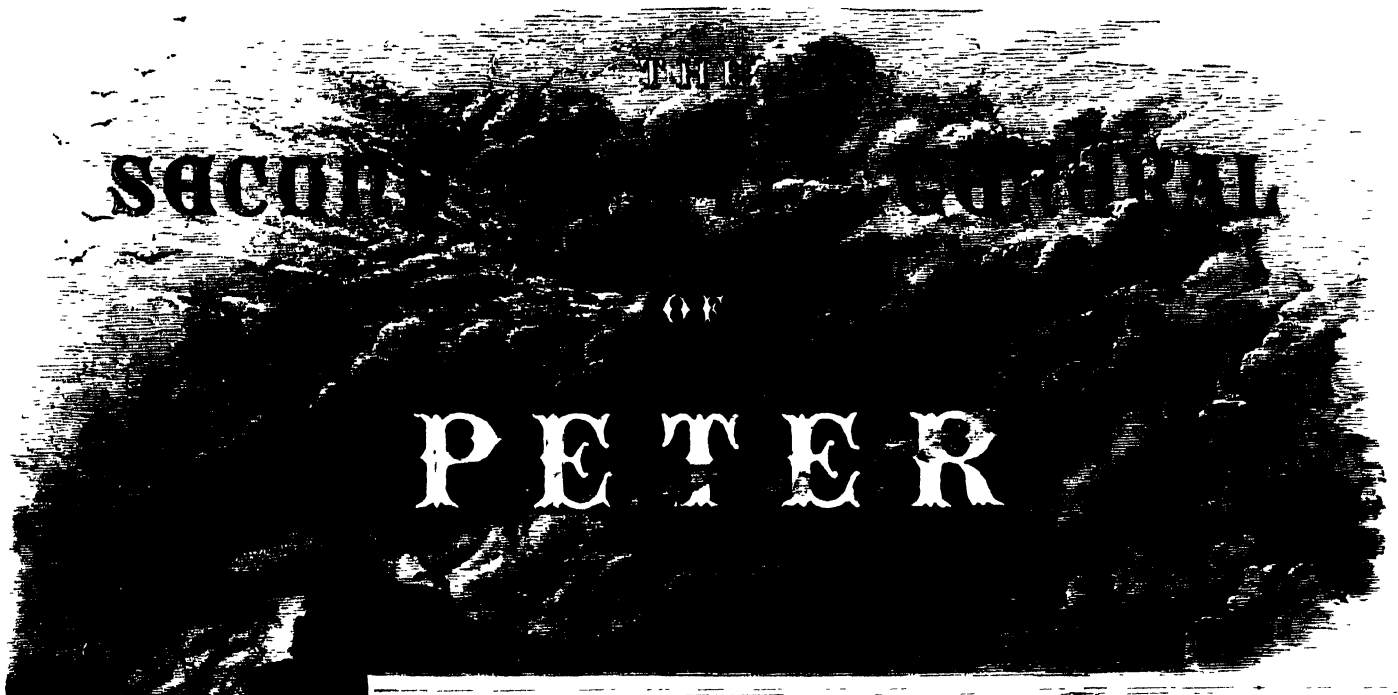
CHAPTER IV.



1, 2. "Arm yourselves;"—prepare yourselves, like Christ, with calm and holy resolution to suffer, rather than yield to the powers of evil; for he that has so suffered in the flesh as to conquer its desires and lusts, is free from the dominion of sin as a reigning power.

CHAPTER I.

1 Confirming them in hope of the increase of God's graces, 5 he exhorteth them, by faith, and good works, to make their calling sure 12 wherefore he is careful to remember them, knowing that his death is at hand 16 and warneth them to be constant in the faith of Christ, who is the true Son of God, by the eyewitness of the apostles beholding his majesty, and by the testimony of the Father, and the prophets

1 SIMON [1]Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness [2]of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ:[a]

2 Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord,[b]

3 According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us [3]to glory and virtue:[c]

4 Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.[d]

6 And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness;

7 And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity.[f]

8 For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be [4]barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.[g]

9 But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.[h]

10 Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall:[i]

11 For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

12 Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth.[j]

13 Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance:[k]

14 Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me.[l]

15 Moreover I will endeavour that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance.

CHAPTER I.

This Epistle is one of the latter fruits of the great outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the Apostles. As to the time when and the place where it was written, we have nothing but conjecture. That it was written not long before the Apostle's decease, may be gathered from the composition itself.

The immediate object of the Epistle is to confirm those who were dispersed abroad in the doctrines of their holy faith, and to guard them against certain forms of error which were then being developed, and which in their practical influence could not but be fatal to all the higher interests of true godliness.

3. "Through the knowledge of him that hath called us:"—from the Divine power proceeds all power to life and godliness. The Holy Spirit imparts life—the same Divine Spirit imparts godliness. The knowledge of God is that knowledge to which God calls us BY his own Spirit. "The natural attributes of God have reference to his glory: those attributes which are called moral have reference to his nature. The two are closely united."

4. "Whereby are given unto us;"—that is, by his glory and his virtue—by his attributes and his energies; for as his glory lends grandeur to the promises, so his virtue gives to them an infinite value.

5—7. "Virtue" is to be taken in the sense of fortitude or vigour of mind; temperance, in the sense of self-control; and charity, in the sense of universal love.

12. "The present truth" is not to be taken in the sense of the truth now and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty.[a]

17 For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.[b]

18 And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.[c]

19 We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts:[d]

20 Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.[e]

21 For the prophecy came not [1]in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.[f]

CHAPTER II.

1 He foretelleth them of false teachers, shewing the impiety and punishment both of them and their followers: 7 from which the godly shall be delivered, as Lot was out of Sodom: 10 and more fully describeth the manners of those profane and blasphemous seducers, whereby they may be the better known, and avoided.

BUT there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.[g]

2 And many shall follow their [2]pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.

3 And through coveteousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.[h]

4 For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment;[i]

5 And spared not the old world, but saved Noah the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly;[j]

6 And turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrha into ashes condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly;[k]

7 And delivered just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked:[l]

8 (For that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds;)[m]

9 The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished:[n]

10 But chiefly them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise [3]government. Presumptuous are they, selfwilled, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities.[o]

11 Whereas angels, which are greater in power and might, bring not railing accusation [4]against them before the Lord.[p]

12 But these, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption;[q]

13 And shall receive the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure to riot in the day time. Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you;[r]

14 Having eyes full of [5]adultery, and that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls: an heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children:[s]

15 Which have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of Balaam the son of Bosor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness;[t]

16 But was rebuked for his iniquity: the dumb ass speaking with man's voice forbad the madness of the prophet.

17 These are wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest; to whom the mist of darkness is reserved for ever.[u]

18 For when they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those that were [6]clean escaped from them who live in error.[v]

19 While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption: for of whom a under consideration, but of the truth as now possessed and enjoyed in the Christian revelation.—See verse 19.

14 "Put off this my tabernacle, as our Lord hath shewed me:"—the reference is to the words of Christ in John xxi. 18, in which the Saviour seems to intimate that our Apostle would be called to part with life suddenly and sharply.

CHAPTER II.

1. "Among the people,"—that is, among the people of Israel there were false prophets, as there are now false teachers among you. It is against such teachers, with their doctrine and practice, that the Apostle here warns his readers. Their doctrine being alien from the truth, the moral tendencies of such doctrines could not fail to be prejudicial and destructive.

3. "Through covetousness;"—rather, in covetousness, as if it were the element in which they lived and moved, men who made a gain of godliness. And hence with their progress in such a course, the judgment of God came to impend more immediately over them, and their final ruin to follow.

4 "Down to hell:"—the word here rendered "hell" is Tartarus, which is found nowhere else in the Christian Testament, nor in the Septuagint, and whose meaning must be taken from profane and heathen authors, who regard it as the lowest place in Nature—a region of unutterable darkness.

10, 11. "Despise government;"—that is, all forms of authority; and in the spirit of a proud, self-willed presumption, dare to hold all authority in the lightest esteem, and in the most open contempt. Whereas angels, who are a superior order of beings, bring no railing accusation—do not assail dignities. "They abstain from judgment, through reverence of the Judge and his presence. Judgment belongs to God, not to angels"

13. "Spots they are and blemishes:"—as spots disfigure the most beautiful objects, so these men mar and blemish, dishonour and disgrace the Church, their association with the faithful did not spring out of love, but out of covetousness, that they might deceive and defraud. They converted their sacred festivities into a means of carnal indulgence and sinful aggrandisement.

17—19. "These are wells without water."—the reference is still to the false teachers, and very awakening is the whole description here given of their character. Not only are they useless as a well without water; but they are like clouds surcharged with the most deadly and destructive elements; for whom is reserved the mist—that is, the blackness—of darkness.

"They allure through the lusts of the flesh:"—themselves living in carnal indulgence, they, through licentiousness, entice back those who had escaped for a little while from the errors so common among the heathen, and thus again ensnare them; and their latter end is worse than the beginning. The reference is to those who are enticed and ensnared, and not to the false teachers who ensnared them.

21. "The holy commandment:"—this designates the Gospel of Christ, all man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage.[a]

20 For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.[b]

21 For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.[c]

22 But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.[d]

CHAPTER III.

1 He assureth them of the certainty of Christ's coming to judgment, against those scorners who dispute against it. 8 warning the godly, for the long patience of God, to hasten their repentance. 10 He describeth also the manner how the world shall be destroyed: 11 exhorting them, from the expectation thereof, to all holiness of life 15 and again, to think the patience of God to tend to their salvation, as Paul wrote to them in his epistles.

THIS second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance:[e]

2 That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour:[f]

3 Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts,[g]

4 And saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.[h]

5 For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth [1]standing out of the water and in the water:[i]

6 Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished:[j]

8 But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.[l]

9 The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.[m]

10 But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.[n]

11 Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness,[o]

12 Looking for and [2]hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?[p]

13 Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.[q]

14 Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless.[r]

15 And account that the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also according to the wisdom given unto him hath written unto you;[s]

16 As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.[t]

17 Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own stedfastness.[u]

18 But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.[v] of whose principles are pure, essentially pure, and produce corresponding pureness of heart and living.

CHAPTER III.

1. "I stir up your pure minds:"—this was the design of his former letter, but emphatically so in this, as he was soon to put off his earthly tabernacle—his decease was not far off. He wished to withdraw their minds—their hearts and affections—from the fleshly and the earthly to the spiritual and the heavenly.

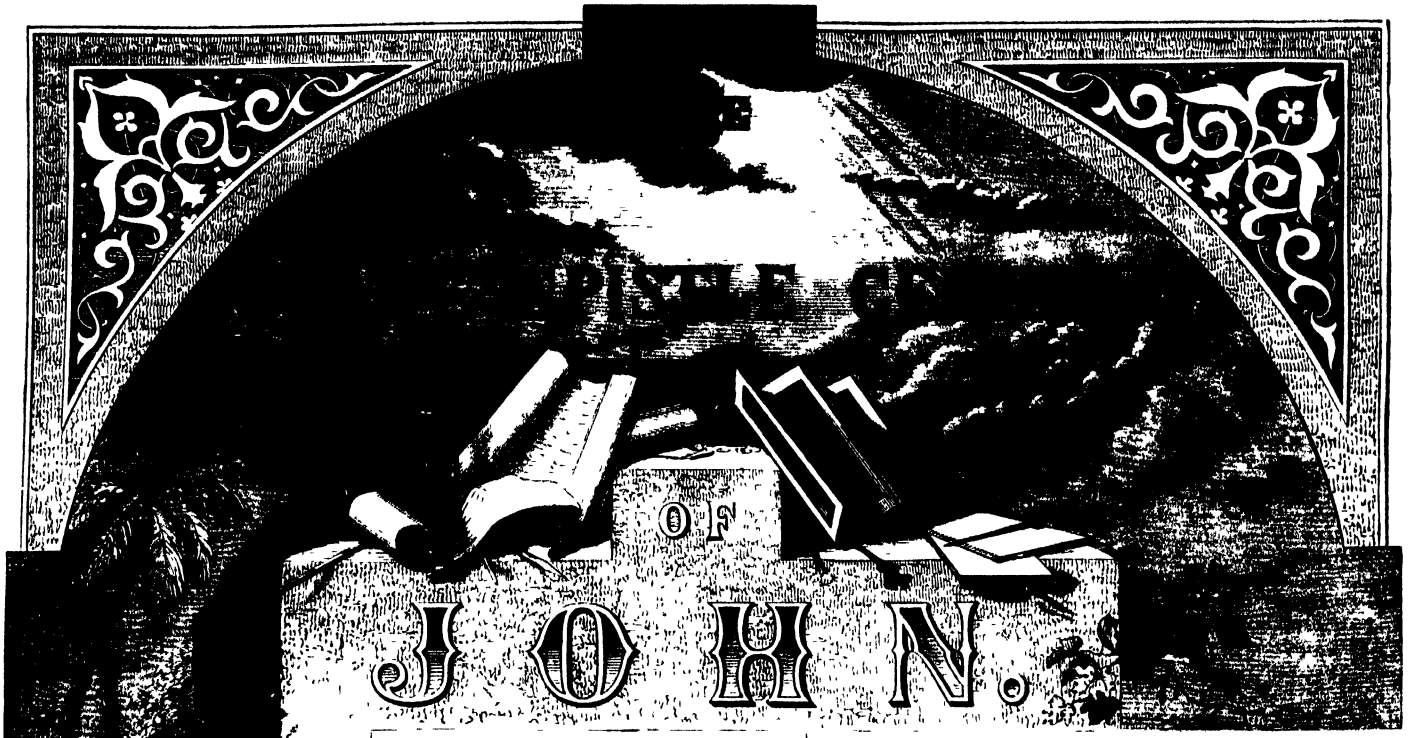
2. "The commandment of us the apostles:"—the commandment did not originate with them, but with their Lord and Saviour. He is the Author of the Gospel, and they, as his apostles, made it known.

3. "Walking after their own lusts:"—lust is the germ of licentiousness, and licentiousness is too often united with contempt of the holy Gospel. The men who live most in sin are the men who will be found to scoff most at religion and its holy requirements.

4. "All things continue as from the beginning:"—from the stability and regularity of the works of Nature, they infer that there is no truth in the doctrine of the Saviour's coming, as the Apostle had taught and as the Christian Church believed.

5. "This they willingly are ignorant of:"—it is a fact which they culpably overlook, that the present constitution of the heavens and the earth is of Divine arrangement; and yet the earth, or dry land, which was made to appear or become visible in consequence of the waters that were under the firmament being gathered together into one place, was afterwards overflowed with the very elements out of which it was originally brought, and destroyed, and in the presence of this undeniable fact, they may rest assured that the promise of God will ultimately be fulfilled, and the present material constitution of things will come to an end. This is reserved unto fire, which will burn up all terrestrial things, on that solemn day when Christ comes to judge the world, and to give to every man according to his work.

9. "Is not slack concerning his promise;"—not slow or unwilling to perform his word, but, laying a restraint upon his omnipotence, he waits to give men time for repentance and reformation.



10. "Shall be burned up;"—not destroyed in the sense of being annihilated. The flame of that final fire will pass over this material creation to purify it.

13. "New heavens and a new earth,"—a new constitution of things in connection with this lower world—a world which shall then be fitted up and furnished as the everlasting dwelling-place of glorified saints.

16. "In which are some things hard to be understood;"—not in which epistles, but in which things are some hard to be understood.

17. "The error of the wicked."—the wicked here may point to the false teachers, or to that Wicked One who is the arch-deceiver of men.

18. "Grow in grace;"—the grace of which Christ is the giver, and which is inseparable from the life of the soul, the "knowledge" is that of which Christ is the object, and in which stands our eternal life.

CHAPTER I.

1 He describeth the person of Christ, in whom we have eternal life, by a communion with God 5 to which we must adjoin holiness of life, to testify the truth of that our communion and profession of faith, as also to assure us of the forgiveness of our sins by Christ's death

THAT which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life ;[a]

2 (For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us ;)[b]

3 That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.[c]

4 And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.[d]

5 This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.[e]

6 If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth :[f]

7 But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.[g]

8 If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.[h]

9 If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.[i]

10 If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

CHAPTER I.

The engraving at the head of this Epistle represents various writing implements, and the form of ancient books. These are from time to time alluded to in Scripture, and we find mention of some of them in 2 John 12 and 3 John 13 We may observe that the materials used for writing were often similar to those now employed. The pen was commonly made of a reed or cane, and resembled that which is still used in the East. For writing upon wax tablets, a pointed instrument, called a style, was adopted. The ink (2 Cor iii. 3) was sometimes contained in an inkhorn (Ezek. ix. 2); it was thicker than ours, and very durable The paper was an Egyptian invention, but used and made elsewhere. It was in sheets, which were rolled up rather than folded. Paper manuscripts as old as St. John's time have been discovered. Parchment also was used, especially for important documents, and is mentioned by St. Paul in 2 Tim iv. 13 Parchment is said to have been first made at Pergamus, whence its name, as paper is called after the papyrus plant. Other writing materials were employed, as tablets covered with wax, &c. See Luke i. 63 and 2 Cor iii. 3, where this custom is alluded to. These writing tablets were often made like a slate-book among ourselves, and were written upon with an iron point like a pencil. Very often they were used even for letters, as well as for other matters requiring not much space. Documents were sealed for the sake of secresy (Rev. v. 1), in which case wax and string were used. The string was sometimes passed round and sometimes through the tablets, &c., sealed.

The external testimony and the internal evidence in favour of the opinion that this Epistle was written by the Evangelist John, are such as to place the fact beyond all dispute. It is probable that it was written by him from Ephesus not long before the close of his life, and was addressed to a cycle of churches principally composed of Gentile converts, located in and near that city. The Epistle assumes, on the part of its readers, an acquaintance with the facts of the Evangelical narrative, and therefore must have been composed subsequently to his Gospel. For it may be taken as a general rule, that "the more concise and abridged expression of the same author, specially of ideas which are peculiarly his own, is the later production; but the more explicit—the one which, as it were, develops and forms the idea—is the earlier." It is not, therefore, to be taken as a dedication or an accompanying letter to the Gospel, but as a genuine Epistle addressed to those to whom the Apostle stood in the relation of a teacher and guide, and to whom he speaks as a father to his children.

The key to the Epistle is to be found in chap. v. 13, in which the Apostle says—"These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life:" and setting out from the twofold position that "God is light," and "God is love," his design throughout the whole Epistle is to show the development and the perfection of the Christian life in these two Divine elements. If the love of God has taken possession of the heart, this love can dwell only in a sphere of light; and both the light and the love will be manifested by that righteous-

CHAPTER II.

1 He comforteth them against the sins of infirmity. 3 Rightly to know God is to keep his commandments, 9 to love our brethren, 15 and not to love the world. 18 We must beware of seducers. 20 from whose deceits the godly are safe, preserved by perseverance in faith, and holiness of life.

MY little children, these things write 1 unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous:[a]

2 And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for our's only, but also for the sins of the whole world.[b]

3 And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments.[c]

4 He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

5 But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.[d]

6 He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.[e]

7 Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment which ye had from the beginning. The old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.[f]

8 Again, a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you: because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth.[g]

9 He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now.[h]

10 He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none [1]occasion of stumbling in him.[i]

11 But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.[j]

12 I write unto you, little children, because your sins are forgiven you for his name's sake.[k]

13 I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I write unto you, young men, because ye have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father.[l]

14 I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one.[m]

15 Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.[n]

16 For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.[o]

17 And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever.[p]

18 Little children, it is the last time: and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time.[q]

19 They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us.[r]

20 But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things.[s]

21 I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.

ness of life and that joy of hope which arise from faith in Christ. As has been beautifully said, "The love which wrote the Epistle is but the echo of that love of God which is manifested to us in Christ, that it may lead us to the Everlasting Fount of joy and of life." How unruffled and heavenly is the repose of spirit which breathes through the whole Epistle! Truly "it appears to be the tone, not so much of a father talking with his beloved children, as of a glorified saint, speaking to mankind from a higher world Never in any writing has the doctrine of heavenly love—of a love ever unwearied, never exhausted—been so thoroughly proved as in this Epistle"

1. "From the beginning;"—not from the beginning of the Gospel dispensation, as some commentators interpret the words. There is the same depth of meaning as if the Apostle had written, "IN THE BEGINNING."

2. "The life was manifested."—he refers to the stupendous fact of the incarnation, in which the Lord of life dwelt for a season among the sons of men

3. "Have fellowship with us,"—that is, with us the Apostles and eye-witnesses of our Lord's life, with us who have communion with the Father and the Son.

5 "This then is the message."—the exhortation of the Apostle in these verses is, that if the communion of Christians with each other, as well as with the Father and the Son, is to be intimate and firm, they must love the light, because God is light, and consequently they must separate themselves from whatever is typified by darkness

"The message" is to be referred to the doctrine which the Apostles received from Christ himself during their intercourse with him on earth.

6. "We lie, and do not the truth,"—for beyond all contradiction, the communion of Christians is a communion of saints (children of God and children of the light); and its bond is brotherly love. Accordingly, to walk in the darkness—to conform to the sinful customs of the world—and yet pretend to be of this communion, is to deny the truth and to deceive ourselves.

8. "We have no sin:"—these concluding verses seem to be directed against those professed believers who have not in themselves that consciousness of man's constant need of a holy and a watchful life, which ought to prevail within them during every moment of their earthly existence, as being essential to their Christian prosperity.

CHAPTER II.

1. "That ye sin not:"—he had said in the close of the preceding chapter that if any professed believer affected to be without sin, he contradicted the plainest and most explicit declaration of God's word, and hence, that the word of God, or the truth of the Gospel, would not have been believed or received by him; but lest any one should run to the other extreme, and think that he might indulge in sin, he here adds, "These things write I unto you, that ye sin not." Whoever has the consciousness of his need of redemption will strive more and more to be delivered from sin; and without this separation from sin, and growing desire after holiness, there can be no communion with Him who is the light, and in whom there dwells no darkness at all

"We have an advocate:"—the word here rendered "advocate" is, in the original, PARACLETE, and literally signifies, one who is called to our aid—a pleader or intercessor. It is a title given to God the Holy Spirit The word is employed by Philo, in reference to the Jewish high priest, as the advocate and intercessor with God for the sins of the people. The application of this sacrificial and sacerdotal symbol, then, would be this, that the Saviour, now that he has entered the holiest of all, carries on his work of intercession. He alone can be an Intercessor with God for us, because he alone is guiltless—sinless

5. "Is the love of God perfected:"—the love of God reached its utmost limit in giving up his Son; and the love of the Son reached its limit when he poured out his soul even unto death; and nothing will perfect our love, either on earth or in heaven, but unlimited obedience to the will of God our Saviour

7. "No new commandment . . . an old commandment"—the new commandment had its root in the old, for the law of brotherly love is as old as the creation; but the old has been so heightened and intensified by the example of Christ, as to have all the freshness and all the force of a new commandment—just as any doctrine which is as old as religion itself, if presented to our view under some new and attractive form, seems to stand out with all the originality and distinctness of a new truth. This new commandment appears as a sublime reality in the life of Christ: and so far as it is embodied in our life, it is a reality; for he came, the true Light, to lighten us; and since the

the Christ? He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son.[a]

23 Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: [but] he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also.[b]

24 Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.[c]

25 And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life.[d]

26 These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you.[e]

27 But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in [1]him.[f]

28 And now, little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.[g]

29 If ye know that he is righteous, [2]ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him.[h]

CHAPTER III.

1 He declareth the singular love of God towards us, in making us his sons. 3 who therefore ought obediently to keep his commandments, 11 as also brotherly to love one another.

BEHOLD, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.[i]

2 Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he

3 And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.[k]

4 Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law.[l]

5 And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins; and in him is no sin.[m]

6 Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him.[n]

7 Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous.[o]

8 He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.[p]

9 Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.[q]

10 In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.[r]

11 For this is the [3]message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another.[s]

12 Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.[t]

13 Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you.[u]

14 We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death.[v]

15 Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him.[w]

16 Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.[x]

17 But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth darkness of our sin and ignorance is past, and we have become light in the Lord, it is in this light that love lives and moves, and acts

12 "Little children,"—a mode of address which bespeaks the affection of the Apostle for his readers, and includes the whole body of those to whom he wrote, whether young or old Among these there are fathers, or men of riper years, in whom we look for deeper contemplation and more matured knowledge, there are also young men, from whom we look for more active service—more heroic deeds

14 "Him that is from the beginning"—a favourite expression of our Apostle to designate our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

17 "The lust thereof,"—that is, whatever can in any way minister to our sensual appetites In directing the attention of his readers to the essentially distinct origin of the love of the world and the love of God, the Apostle points out the transitory nature of all sinful enjoyments.

18 "It is the last time;"—not the close of the apostolic age, but some more marked period subsequent to the apostolic age in the progress of the new economy, distinguished by heresies and errors, of which the Apostle even now saw the germs and the buds Antichrist is not to be restricted to the development of Popery, but to every kind of anti-Christian error, whether in doctrine or in practice, of which Popery, indeed, is an impressive type.

19. "Went out from us,"—left the society of the Church, and thus revealed the fact, by their conduct, that they never stood in living union with the body of Christ, and hence were never in union with Christ himself

20 "Ye have an unction"—he had just intimated the fact that there are many Antichrists; it follows that there is one true Christ and Christ is the Anointed of the Father; and from him, as the Anointed One, ye have received an anointing, even the same Spirit with which Christ was anointed; and this Spirit leads into all truth, so that we know all things essential to a holy and an unworldly life.

21. "No lie is of the truth;"—by which the Apostle seems to resolve every form of Antichrist into a lie. As Christ is "the way, the truth, and the life," it is a practical denial of Christ,

24 "Let that therefore abide in you;"—the doctrine which they had been taught by the Apostle in reference to the unity of the Father and the Son, as well as their official relation in the wondrous plan of man's redemption. Continuance in this truth was, in fact, continuance in God himself.

28. "We may have confidence"—this may refer to the Apostle, who, like Paul, desired to present these his converts, his children, perfect before God; or it may include the converts themselves, whose privilege it was to look for the mercy of the Lord Jesus unto eternal life.

CHAPTER III.

1. "What manner of love."—it is not simply the fact that God has revealed his love to us; but it is the manner—the kind or character of the love. Never did it take such a character before.

"Knew him not;"—that is, the Saviour, in whom this unparalleled love was revealed and embodied, and through whom, and for whose sake, mercy has been extended to fallen man.

6. "Sinneth not:"—a life of sin is absolutely excluded by the higher law of redeeming love. If there be spiritual life, there must be love to God; and love to God forbids the practice of sin. The doctrine is not that of sinless perfection, but of a life of holiness as opposed to a life of sin.

7 "Even as he is righteous"—the essential righteousness of God is the foundation of all moral rectitude in his creatures. And to him we are to be conformed, if we would attain the perfection of holy life.

9. "He cannot sin"—as the Apostle takes the Divine birth and filial relation to God in its fullest sense, it follows that if man is really born of God, the Divine principle must remain in him, and he cannot habitually and wilfully commit sin. If we are light in the Lord, we must have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness.

12. "Wherefore slew he him?"—did the fact of God accepting Abel's offering, to the rejection of that of his brother, first give birth to the feeling of hatred in the heart of Cain? Or did the feeling pre-exist, and the act of God give occasion to its outward and deadly manifestation? The latter we his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?[a]

18 My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.[b]

19 And hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall [1]assure our hearts before him.[c]

20 For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things.[d]

21 Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God.[e]

22 And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.[f]

23 And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment.[g]

24 And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.[h]

CHAPTER IV.

1 He warneth them not to believe all teachers, who boast of the Spirit, but to try them by the rules of the catholick faith. 7 and by many reasons to brotherly love.

BELOVED, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.[i]

2 Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God:[j]

3 And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world.[k]

4 Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.[l]

5 They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them.[m]

6 We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.[n]

7 Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.[o]

8 He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love.[p]

9 In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him.[q]

10 Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.[r]

11 Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.[s]

12 No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us.[t]

13 Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit.[u]

14 And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.[v]

15 Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God.[w]

And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.[x]

17 Herein is [2]our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment: because as he is, so are we in this world.[y]

18 There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love.[z]

19 We love him, because he first loved us.

20 If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?[a]

21 And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also.[b] believe to be the true idea. The conduct of Cain at such a moment, and under such circumstances, revealed the character of the man.

15 "Is a murderer"—murder has its root in the principle of hatred. Let the principle be but cherished, and every man's hand would be against his brother. Love, on the contrary, will lead to the preservation of life. Enmity and hatred are in direct opposition to the spirit of Christ, and partake of the spirit of the Evil One, the Prince of Darkness

16. "The love of God"—the words "of God" in this clause obscure the sense, and are not to be found in the best manuscripts. John says: "Hereby perceive we the love"—that is, the nature of the love of which he is treating. Its perfect manifestation is found only in Christ, who laid down his life for us; and if we are in union with him, our consciousness of his love will lead us, if need be, to lay down our lives for the brethren.

19. "We are of the truth;"—begotten by that word of truth which the Spirit employs in the work of regeneration, and which dwells in every renewed soul as an incorruptible seed, and is ever yielding its riper fruit.

CHAPTER IV.

1—3. "Believe not every spirit"—in the degree in which the love of Christ has taken possession of the heart, and reveals itself in brotherly love, in that degree do we know that we are of the truth; and if we have been born of the Spirit by the instrumentality of that truth, then we ought to be able to distinguish between the incorruptible seed itself and those seeds of error which are so thickly sown by false teachers. It is against such false teachers (here called spirits and prophets) that the Apostle is warning his readers. They are to be tried, or put to the test, by bringing their doctrines to the one infallible standard of truth. It is thus that the Spirit of God, who is the Spirit of truth, is to be distinguished from every other spirit that speaks either in or through man.

One of the earliest developments of Antichrist in the Apostolic age was the denial of Christ's humanity; one of its later manifestations, in our own day, is the giving an undue prominence to that humanity, to the disregard of his divinity. The Christ of Revelation is "God manifested in the flesh"—God and man in one Christ.

4. "Have overcome them;"—or have successfully resisted their seductive influences, and have overcome their errors by the power of God's Spirit.

5. "Speak they of the world;"—that is, by the worldly principle only worldly things are produced—anti-Christian doctrine, and a life that is purely earthly, because the doctrine is purely human. Hence the world's ready ear and cheerful approval.

12 "No man hath seen God at any time:"—this does not contradict those passages of Scripture in which mention is made of seeing God; for these passages refer to Christ, the Word of God, the Second Person of the sacred Trinity, who was the visible representative of Him who is invisible, namely, God the Father; yet, although no man hath seen God the Father, there are the children of God, who visibly represent him, and our love to them bespeaks our love to him (verse 20), and his love to us and our love to him are thus perfected. We know by this love to others for his sake that he dwelleth in us "We know," says the Apostle, "that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."

15. "Confess that Jesus is the Son of God"—this confession arises out of the fact adduced by the Apostle in chap iii. 19, "We know that we are of the truth;" for if the truth be in us, the confession of that truth follows as a consequence.

CHAPTER V.

1 He that loveth God loveth his children, and keepeth his commandments: 3 which to the faithful are light, and not grievous. 9 Jesus is the Son of God, able to save us, 14 and to hear our prayers, which we make for ourselves, and for others.

WHOSOEVER believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him.[a]

2 By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments.

3 For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous.[b]

4 For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.[c]

5 Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?[d]

6 This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth.[e]

7 For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one.[f]

8 And there are three that bear witness in earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one.

9 If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son.[g]

10 He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.[h]

11 And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son.[i]

12 He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.[j]

13 These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.[k]

14 And this is the confidence that we have [1]in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us:[l]

15 And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him.

16 If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it.[m]

17 All unrighteousness is sin: and there is a sin not unto death.[n]

18 We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.[o]

19 And we know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness.[p]

20 And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life.[q]

21 Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.[r]

17, 18. "Our love made perfect;"—that is, the Divine principle as it exists in the heart, and develops itself in ever-advancing degrees, divesting the last judgment of all its terrors, and insuring for us acceptance with Him whom we represent in this world. Hence there is no fear in love. It is free from every slavish and enslaving element—the gentlest yet the mightiest and most triumphant of all principles.

CHAPTER V.

1 "Is born of God."—if there be faith in Christ—that faith which recognises his character and claims as the Saviour of the world—there is in such faith the positive evidence of being born of God. Nor is it possible to be the subject of Divine life without corresponding affection to Him who is the Source of that life, and if we love the Father because of his holy nature, we must also love all who are partakers of that nature.

2. "We know that we love the children of God:"—as in chapter iv. 20, "our love to our brethren was made a sign and necessary condition of our love to God, so, conversely, our love to God, ascertained by our keeping his commandments, is itself the measure of our love to the children of God. Either of the two being found to be present, the presence of the other follows."

3. "This is the love of God."—the evidence of our love to God lies in holy obedience to his ever-blessed will.

4, 5. "Even our faith:"—it is faith which unites to Christ; and reposing on his infinite resources, and working by love, it easily and effectually conquers the world.

6. "He that came by water and blood:"—this clause certainly points to "some purely historical facts in the life of our Lord on earth, and to some still present witnesses for Christ." What are these facts? Our Lord entered on his public life at his baptism, and he closed that life by shedding his blood. In baptism and the Lord's Supper we have an abiding testimony to these facts.

7, 8. "There are three that bear record"—the evidence for and against the genuineness of these verses is very powerful on both sides. We therefore pass it without expressing any opinion, merely observing that the most ancient Greek manuscripts and the early Fathers confirm the doctrine of the Trinity by the words which they admit, namely, "there are three that bear witness, the Spirit, the water, and the blood;" and these three agree in testifying that Jesus is the Son of God.

13. "And that ye may believe:"—the better rendering of this clause would be—"Even to you that believe on the name of the Son of God."

16. "There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it:"—opinion is greatly divided as to the nature of this sin. It is thought by some eminent Christian writers that the Apostle is here speaking of the mutual intercessions of professing Christians, who should pray for the forgiveness of one another's sins, only remembering that such a course of sin as is plainly inconsistent with the existence of spiritual life must place such a person out of the limits of this mutual brotherly intercession.

The Second Epistle of John

1 He exhorteth a certain honourable matron, with her children, to persevere in Christian love and belief, 8 lest they lose the reward of their former profession. 10 and to have nothing to do with those seducers that bring not the true doctrine of Christ Jesus.

THE elder unto the elect lady and her children, whom I love in the truth; and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth;[a]

2 For the truth's sake, which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever.

3 Grace [1]be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, in truth and love.[b]

4 I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.[c]

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another.[d]

6 And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.[e]

7 For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist.[f]

8 Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have [2]wrought, but that we receive a full reward.[g]

9 Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.[h]

10 If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed:[i]

11 For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds.

12 Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink: but I trust to come unto you, and speak [3]face to face, that [4]our joy may be full.[j]

13 The children of thy elect sister greet thee. Amen.[k]

THE Second and Third Epistles of John were, in all probability, written from Ephesus at a very advanced period of the Apostle's life.

But to whom was the Second Epistle addressed? Is the designation "elect lady" to be referred to an individual, or figuratively to a Church? If to a Church, is it to be the one Catholic or Universal Church, or to some one particular body of believers? All these opinions have been entertained, and have had their advocates. We have not space here to examine them, and simply give it as the result of careful examination, that we believe from its entire structure the Epistle was addressed to an individual, and not to a Church. This lady "appears to have been a Christian matron generally known and beloved among the brethren, having children, some of whom the Apostle had found (in a previous visit to her) walking in the truth." Her name was Kyria the Elect, and she "had a sister, also a Christian matron, whose children seem to have been with the Apostle when he wrote this Epistle"

1. "The elder:"—a designation which points both to his age and his office He was a teacher ripe in years.

"Also all they that have known the truth."—what a testimony this to the Christian character of this lady and her family! By the force of their character they had won the esteem and confidence of all their fellow-believers

8. "That we lose not."—they were, in all probability, converts of the Apostle, and hence his solicitude that they should not be seduced by false teachers

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF JOHN

He commendeth Gaius for his piety, 5 and hospitality 7 to true preachers, 9 complaining of the unkind dealing of ambitious Diotrephes on the contrary side, 11 whose evil example is not to be followed: 12 and giveth special testimony to the good report of Demetrius.

THE elder unto the well-beloved Gaius, whom I love [1]in the truth.[a]

2 Beloved, I [2]wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth.

3 For I rejoiced greatly, when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth.[b]

4 I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth.[c]

5 Beloved, thou doest faithfully whatsoever thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers;

6 Which have borne witness of thy charity before the church: whom if thou bring forward on their journey [3]after a godly sort, thou shalt do well:

10 Wherefore, if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doeth, prating against us with malicious words: and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would, and casteth them out of the church.

11 Beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doeth good is of God: but he that doeth evil hath not seen God.[e]

This Epistle is addressed to a certain individual named Gaius; but who this Gaius was we have no means of determining.

1. "The wellbeloved Gaius."—he seems to have been a man distinguished for his large-hearted beneficence, and to have enjoyed the love and confidence not only of the Apostle, but of the whole Church.

2. "As thy soul prospereth."—his spiritual condition is made, in the prayer of the Apostle, the measure of his temporal prosperity. If this rule were universally applied, how small a portion of temporal good would fall to the lot of many!

6. "Which have borne witness of thy charity before the church:"—these were, in all likelihood, evangelists, who, in giving an account of their evangelical labours, would very naturally speak of the hospitality and sympathy which they received from Gaius, who was wont to send these devoted labourers on their journey with light and joyous hearts.

9. "Diotrephes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence"—who he was we know not; only he was an ambitious man, who denied the authority of the Apostle, in order that he might establish his own unholy rule.

12. "Demetrius hath good report of all:"—all who know him testify to his character; he is in reality what the report represents him, and I regard him as a living epistle to be known and read of all men.

He exhorteth them to be constant in the profession of the faith. 4 False teachers are crept in to seduce them: for whose damnable doctrine and manners horrible punishment is prepared godly, by the assistance of the Holy Spirit, and prayers to God, may persevere, and grow in grace, and keep themselves, and recover others out of the snares of those deceivers.

JUDE, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called:[a]

2 Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied.[b]

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.[c]

4 For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.[d]

5 I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not.[e]

6 And the angels which kept not their [1]first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment the great day.[f]

7 Even as Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after [2]strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.[g]

8 Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities.[h]

9 Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee.[i]

10 But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves.[j]

11 Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core.[k]

12 These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots;[l]

JUDE, or Judas, the author of this Epistle, was sometimes called Lebbæus, and sometimes Thaddæus (Matt. x. 3; John xiv. 22); this was to distinguish him from Judas, the betrayer of Christ. This Epistle is quoted as a portion of the Holy Scriptures by Clement of Alexandria, who died A.D. 218; by Tertullian, who died A.D. 245; by Origen, who died A.D. 254; by Dionysius, the Bishop of Alexandria, who flourished in the third century; and it is also quoted by most of the later Fathers.

This Epistle is supposed to have been written about the year 64, to the Jews and Gentiles who had embraced Christianity. It bears a striking resemblance to the second chapter of the second Epistle of Peter; and we think it not improbable that, as both these inspired men were writing on the same subject, and denouncing the same errors, Jude applied to the Christians of Syria and Arabia the line of reasoning employed by Peter when writing to the Christians dwelling in Asia Minor.

17 But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ;[d]

At the time this Epistle was written, the Simonians, the Nicolaitans, and the Gnostics were promulgating their dangerous tenets. The Apostle seeks to guard the Christian converts against these false teachers, by pointing out the danger of their doctrines and the immorality of their lives, and the certain punishment that awaited them. He seems to ask to what could they trust for safety. Had they experienced deliverances?—so had Israel, who perished in the wilderness (verse 5). Had they lived near to God and been made partakers of his favour?—so had the angels who were now outcasts from heaven (verse 6). Would they plead their natural inclinations as an apology for sin—had this protected the men of the guilty cities? (verse 7) the men were destroyed. The Apostle proceeds to show that as chastisement overtook the offenders in the wilderness, the wrong-doers in heaven, and the transgressors of the plain, so would it fall upon these seducers from the faith—upon these advocates for unholiness of life. Prophecy had foretold the offence, and justice had assigned an appointed punishment for these opposers of Christ's holy Gospel, and for these enemies to the welfare of man.

3 "Common salvation,"—offered alike to Jew and to Gentile

"Earnestly contend;"—as combatants contending for their lives.

"Once delivered,"—once for all, so as to admit of no charge; once for all, so as to need no additional evidence beyond that which has been given by Christ, the Son of God, and by the Apostles—men taught by the Holy Ghost.

4. "Before of old ordained,"—described beforehand; and the amount of punishment for such offences long decreed.

6 "Reserved in everlasting chains;"—reserved for everlasting chains. At present evil spirits dwell in the air, and wander over the earth seeking whom they may destroy

7. "Suffering the vengeance of eternal fire;"—a fire which irrevocably and finally destroyed the guilty cities.

9 "Durst not bring against him a railing accusation;"—would not commit an act inconsistent with his holy nature.

11. "They have gone in the way of Cain;"—have resembled Cain in his envy and malice; and Balaam in his readiness to lead men into sin for filthy lucre's sake; and Korah in his rebellious acts and his rejection of Divine authority.

12. "Clouds they are without water;"—promising, but deceptive.

"Trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit;"—a profession of usefulness which produces no result; the form of godliness without the power.

"Twice dead;"—once wicked Jews or wicked Gentiles, now wicked Christians.

"Plucked up by the roots;"—the fruit tree that is fruitless is destroyed.

13. "Wandering stars;"—unsteady lights, and, as such, unsafe guides.

14. "Enoch also, the seventh from Adam;"—to distinguish him from Enoch, the son of Cain. These words are quoted from an uncanonical book, a copy of which has been recently found in an Ethiopic version. Objections have been urged against the Epistle of Jude, because Jude, an inspired writer, has quoted from an uninspired work. The important question that concerned the Apostle when penning the Epistle was, Is this a true statement? and being convinced of its accuracy, he quotes it, and thus vouches for its truthfulness, without vouching for the accuracy of the work from which it was quoted. St. Paul's Epistles are not lessened in authority by the Apostle's quotations from Greek poets; as, for example, from Aratus (Acts xvii. 28); from Menander (1 Cor. xv. 33); and from Epimenides (Titus i. 12). The Apostle's remarks extend to the quotations, and not to the various books from which they are selected.

15 "To execute judgment;"—to act as a judge by passing sentence upon the offenders.

19. "Who separate themselves;"—that is, from the godly, being themselves ungodly and destitute of God's Spirit.

21. "Keep yourselves in the love of God;"—by living in his fear. With this holy admonition we close our comment upon the Epistles, saying to our Christian brethren, in the words of the Apostle—

"MERCY UNTO YOU, AND PEACE, AND LOVE, BE MULTIPLIED."

CHAPTER I.

It is in the contents of this book that we see John the Evangelist gazing with undazzled eye at the brightness of celestial scenes, and making known to the Church, by means of the Divine revelation, all those great evolutions which were coming up with the birth of time and the progress of years. That the composition is to be ascribed to the same pen that wrote the fourth Gospel is placed beyond all controversy by the weight of testimony both ancient and modern. The writer of this communication from Christ to his Church was no other than the disciple whom Jesus loved.

The visions were given to John during his exile in Patmos; but whether he wrote the book while in the island, or after his return to Ephesus, is matter of debate. The composition itself may be fixed to the year 95 or 96, or about the close of the reign of Domitian.

The question affecting the object of the work is easily answered. The book is a series of visions prophetic of the future, placing the things which are to come in dim and distant perspective; and yet, taking into account the hortatory character of the addresses to the Seven Churches in Asia, and in which the Spirit of truth speaks to believers in all ages, we may fairly say that the object of the Apocalypse "is not only to prophesy of the future, but also by such prophecy to rebuke, exhort, and console the Church."

In the interpretation of the book there are various modes of looking at its contents, each of which has had its advocate. There are those who believe that if not the whole, yet by far the greater part of the prophecy has been fulfilled; and there are those who believe that the prophecy embraced the whole history of the Church, with all its issues, from the days of the Apostles down to the end of the world, and there are also persons who assert that the prophecy relates entirely to events still future—events which are to take place at or near to the coming of the Lord. It is not for us, in our brief space, to examine these different modes of viewing this prophecy. We satisfy ourselves by expressing our belief that they are right who have adopted the historical interpretation, and regard the prophecy as embracing the state of the Church through all time. The work thus commends itself to all who search the Scriptures, and are eager to know the mind of God:—"Blessed are they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein."

1. "The Revelation of Jesus Christ,"—not something said by John about Christ, but a communication from Christ, in his glorified state, to his servant John. And yet this Revelation is said to have been given by God to Christ—by the Father to the Son. And here the Apocalypse stands in the closest affinity with the Gospel; for "it is one of the pervading characteristics of John's Gospel that the Son has everything that the Father has, and yet has nothing but what he has of the Father."

2. "Who bare record of the word of God:"—the phrase "the word of God" is not to be referred to the personal LOGOS, but to some former writing of the Apostle—perhaps his Gospel, or his Epistle, or both; for in both he says, "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you."—1 John i 1, compared with John i. 14.

3 "Blessed is he that readeth:"—the reference here is to the public reader, and those who heard were his auditors; on both of whom the benediction is pronounced.

"The time is at hand:"—that is, the time is nigh, or is drawing near, when the predictions would begin to be fulfilled.

4. "Which are in Asia"—this must be taken, as in the Gospels, for the pro-consular province so called.

"The seven Spirits."—seven is the term of completeness, and here points to the plenitude and the perfection of the Eternal Spirit—one with the Father and the Son.

5 "The first begotten of the dead;"—the first who rose from the dead and assumed a glorified humanity.

7. "Behold, he cometh:"—this is not only a note of solemn preparation to awaken the attention of his readers, but the utterance of a solemn truth—a truth in which all the hopes and anticipations of the Church are to be realised—the second advent of the Lord. Nor is anything more common with the writers of the New Testament than to leap over all intervening time and events, and fix the eye on that grand final consummation involved in the coming of our Lord.

9 "The isle that is called Patmos:"—this island is one of a group known by the name of the Sporades, to the south of Samos, in the Ægean Sea, about thirty Roman miles in circumference.

10. "I was in the Spirit:"—that is, in a state of supernatural influence—in an ecstacy induced by the power of the Spirit upon his inner nature.

11. "The seven churches:"—these churches were, in all probability, composed chiefly of Jewish converts, settled in the seven great commercial, influential, and wealthy cities here named, in which were the seven principal or largest Christian synagogues, and might, therefore, be considered as representing the entire Christian body in Roman Asia.

12. "Seven golden candlesticks;"—or rather, lamp-bearers, with reference to the golden lamps in the Jewish sanctuary.

13—16. "One like unto the Son of man;"—a symbolical representation of Christ, as the Head and High Priest of his Church. He had in or on his hand seven stars, like a circlet of brilliant gems, to intimate that all the inferior lights in his Church are in his hand, and at his disposal; while his breath assumed the shape of a two-edged sword, denoting the power of his word of grace, and the power of his word of condemnation.

20. "The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches:"—that is, stars are symbolical of the angels or pastors of the Churches; and these pastors are called angels, or messengers, because their office was to deliver the message of God to the Churches.

CHAPTER II.

What is commanded to be written to the angels, that is, the ministers of the churches of 1 Ephesus, 8 Smyrna, 12 Pergamos, 18 Thyatira: and what is commended, or found wanting in them.

ANNO DOMINI 96.

UNTO the angel of the church of Ephesus write; These things saith he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks;[a]

2 I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars:[b]

3 And hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast not fainted.[c]

4 Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

5 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.[d]

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitanes, which I also hate.[e]

7 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.[f]

8 And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna write; These things saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive;[g]

9 I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich) and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan.[h]

10 Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.[i]

11 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death.[j]

12 And to the angel of the church in Pergamos write; These things saith he which hath the sharp sword with two edges;[k]

13 I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is: and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, even in those days wherein Antipas was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth.[l]

14 But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a stumblingblock before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication.[m]

15 So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes, which thing I hate.[n]

16 Repent; or else I will come unto thee quickly,

CHAPTER II.

In whatever light these addresses to the Seven Churches are viewed, it is undeniable that there is to be found in them what is applicable to the whole Church, and throughout all time.

1. "The church of Ephesus:"—first among the Asiatic Churches, Ephesus is addressed in language of mingled commendation and rebuke. Ephesus was the capital of Ionia, and, under the Romans, was the metropolis of proconsular Asia. This city stood near the river Cayster, in that part of Asia Minor which belonged to Lydia. St. Paul went to Ephesus on his second missionary tour with Aquila and Priscilla, who remained there after he was forced to leave. These zealous disciples were instrumental in bringing Apollos to a knowledge of the truth. On his third journey, St. Paul went again to Ephesus, and stayed there two years and three months, preaching first in the synagogue, and then in the school of Tyrannus (Acts xix.). His success was so marked, that opposition was excited, and he had once more to retire. Timothy, however, was placed there, and is regarded as the first bishop of the Church. Subsequently, St. Paul addressed an Epistle to the Church. It appears that false teachers crept in among the brethren at an early period, and caused considerable difficulty (1 Tim. i. 3). For many years there was a Church at Ephesus with its bishops, and some important councils were held there. In course of time the city fell into decay, and at present its ruins only exist near to a small place called Aiasaluk, or City of the Moon. Mr. Hartley, who visited the place in 1826, says—"In a missionary point of view, Ephesus offers now no attractions: her ancient Church has vanished; her candlestick has been removed."

The message to each of the Seven Churches is addressed to "the angel," as the representative of the whole assembly. But what was his official position? It is thought that the title is borrowed from the synagogue, and in its literal meaning seems to correspond with the legatus ecclesiæ, a kind of officer to whom communications designed for the whole congregation would properly be addressed; but still it is difficult to define the nature of his office. As the symbol of his office was a star, it is but natural to look upon him as the enlightened guide and director of the Church. These "stars" were not "set in the firmament (the emblem of political rulers), but were stars that could be grasped and upheld, implying that these angels were Christ's ministers and servants, and altogether in his hand;" while their office was such that they were, in the discharge of its duties, to reflect his glory.

6. "The deeds of the Nicolaitanes:"—who was the founder of this sect, or what was their creed, it is impossible now to determine. We can only conjecture that they lived in sensual indulgence. If so, then how appropriate is the promise to those who overcome the temptation to such a life—"To him will I give to eat of the tree of life!"

8. "The church in Smyrna:"—Smyrna is a sea-port, standing on a bay known as the Gulf of Smyrna. It is a very ancient city, and one of those which claimed to be the birthplace of Homer. There was a Christian Church there at a very early period; but the first mention of it in the New Testament is in this book. The Epistle is full of affectionate commendation, and of warning in view of coming persecutions. The Church of Smyrna seems never to have been extinguished, and Christianity is still professed in the city, which has a population of 120,000 souls. It has been often observed, as a remarkable illustration of the inspired character of the Epistles to the Churches, that, of all the seven cities addressed by St. John, Smyrna is the only one which maintains an honourable existence; all the others are either utterly destroyed or comparatively insignificant. Dr. Rosenmuller says:—"Smyrna is the most thriving commercial town in the Levant, with respect both to export and import trade. The Greeks, who, next to the Turks, compose the most numerous class of inhabitants, have a bishop and two churches." The Turkish name of Smyrna is Izmir.

9. "The synagogue of Satan:"—these Jews by birth were, as the most active enemies of Christianity, engaged in the service of Satan.

10. "Have tribulation ten days:"—in their imprisonment and persecution their principles were to be tried and put to the test. How long? Some say, taking a day for a year, for ten years; others take the ten for ten different periods of suffering; and others regard it as equivalent to an indefinite period. The time matters little. Their fidelity was to be rewarded with the crown of life.

12. "The church in Pergamos:"—Pergamos, now called Bergamo, was situated in Southern or Greater Mysia, on the north bank of the river Caicus, at the base and upon the declivity of two high and steep mountains, and six or seven leagues from the sea. Upon one of the mountains there stands a dilapidated castle. The eastern part of the town is ruined, but the western portion is inhabited, chiefly by Turks; there are, however, a few poor Greek Christians, who have a church. Two centuries and a half before Christ, Pergamos became the residence of kings, and a seat of literature and art. In his Epistle to the Church at Pergamos, St. John says, "I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is." Now there was at Pergamos a famous temple of Æsculapius, who was probably reverenced under the symbol of a serpent, and hence the allusion by the Apostle to Satan, the old serpent. Æsculapius was called the god of Pergamos, and figures on its coins bearing a rod encircled by a serpent. The traveller Richter found here an altar adorned with a laurel tree, twined about by a serpent. That St. John alludes to this serpent worship is scarcely doubted. The present ruins of Pergamos are striking and extensive. The modern town of Bergamo is described as a mean and wretched place; but Sir Charles Fellowes says it is "as busy and thriving as heavy taxation will allow, and has seven or eight khans."

13. "Antipas was my faithful martyr:"—of this devoted man we have no other authentic record.

17. "A white stone:"—as princes were wont to give gems and signets to and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.[a]

17 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it.[b]

18 And unto the angel of the church in Thyatira write; These things saith the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass;[c] their favourites and their friends, so the Saviour will give to each of his followers such a token of his forgiving and saving love as can be known and appreciated by no other as it is by its immediate recipient.

18. "The church in Thyatira:"—Thyatira was a Macedonian colony, and was originally called Pelopia. It lies between Pergamos and Sardis, at the base of a mountain in a beautiful plain, through which flows the river Lycus. It was noted for the art of dyeing; and Lydia (Acts xvi. 14) was probably connected with the dyers, who, as we may gather from an ancient inscription, were a distinct class of the community. The modern town is called Ak-hissar, or Acsa (White Castle), and of this Mr. Fisk says:—"At the distance of three or four miles it is almost completely surrounded by mountains. The houses are low; many of them of mud or earth. Excepting the motsellim's palace, there is scarcely a decent house in the place. The streets are narrow and dirty, and everything indicates poverty and degradation." Mr. Schneider remarks of the religious aspect of the town:—"Everything wears a Mussulman aspect. Christianity exists there in name, but it is the bare name. Its spirit has long since fled. The Greeks especially seem to be peculiarly superstitious. I visited their church, and found it full of pictures and other marks of degenerate Christianity." At the present time, the American missionaries have at Thyatira a small band of communicants, a pastor, and a school. The modern town is full of the relics of a splendid ancient city, but there are no ruins of any magnitude. Although dyeing is not now practised there, the madder, a root used in dyeing, is extensively cultivated, and exported to England.

20. "That woman Jezebel:"—some conceive that this peculiar phrase points to an individual teacher, high in reputation and influence at the time; and others think that a favoured and influential party in the Church is designated. Whichever we adopt, it stands revealed in the light of the sun, that the effect produced was most corrupting to the Church. Hence the call to repentance, and hence, too, the fearful threatening.

26. "Power over the nations:"—it is by her spiritual influence the Church must gain her triumphs, and benefit mankind.

28. "I will give him the morning star:"—in Eastern courts, and in the courts of our own Western nations, stars are the insignia of distinction and honour; it is possible the expression is used to denote some high mark of distinction to be conferred upon the Christian conqueror.

CHAPTER III.

The angel of the church of Sardis is reproved, 3 exhorted to repent, and threatened if he do not repent. 8 The angel of the church of Philadelphia 10 is approved for his diligence and patience. 15 The angel of Laodicea rebuked, for being neither hot nor cold, 19 and admonished to be more zealous. 20 Christ standeth at the door and knocketh.

AND unto the angel of the church in Sardis write; These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars; I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead.[a]

2 Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy works perfect before God.

CHAPTER III.

1. "The church in Sardis:"—"Sardis was the chief town of Lydia, and the residence of the Lydian kings until the time of Crœsus, who was subdued by Cyrus of Persia. The city stood on the river Pactolus, in a fertile plain below Mount Tmolus. Wealth, pomp, and luxury characterised this city from very ancient times: it prospered alike under the Persian, Macedonian, and Roman governments. Tiberius, after it had been destroyed by an earthquake, caused it to be rebuilt." He says it was the fifth of the seven Asian churches to which St. John addressed these Epistles. "A mean shepherd's village, called Sart, occupies a small part of the site of this once great and wealthy city." "At the western base of the castle wall," says Richter, "lie a few wretched huts, built of mud, as Thyatira and all the other places of this district are; and at its eastern extremity is a garden with a mill. Such is the form of the modern Sardis. Between these points the space is occupied by the ruins of walls and churches of comparatively recent erection, in the building of which the large square marble stones of more ancient edifices had been employed." The learned Thomas Smith, English chaplain at Smyrna, who in 1671 visited the sites of the Seven Churches, paints a lamentable picture of Sardis, and says he found some few Christians still there, very degraded, without a church, and without a minister. Yet Sardis was once famous among the Churches, and some of its bishops, as Melito, were illustrious men. Modern travellers speak highly of the situation of Sardis, but describe it as almost deserted. A few years since, the owner of the mill above-named was the only Christian in the place.

12 Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name.[a]

13 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.[b]

14 And unto the angel of the church [1]of the Laodiceans write; These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God;[c]

15 I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot.[d]

16 So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.

17 Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked:[e]

18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see.[f]

19 As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.[g]

20 Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.[h]

21 To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.[i]

22 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.[j]

CHAPTER IV.

2 John seeth the throne of God in heaven. 4 The four and twenty elders. 6 The four beasts full of eyes before and behind. 10 The elders lay down their crowns, and worship him that sat on the throne.

AFTER this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter.[k]

2 And immediately I was in the spirit: and, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne.[l]

3 And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.[m]

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold.[n]

5 And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God.[o]

6 And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind.[p]

7 And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.[q]

8 And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within: and [2]they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.[r]

9 And when those beasts give glory and honour and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever,[s]

10 The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying,[t]

11 Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.[u]

7. "The church in Philadelphia"—Philadelphia is about thirty-six miles from Sardis, towards the south-east; it is still a considerable town, called Allah-Shehr. It was formerly the second city in Lydia, and was so well fortified, that among all the places of Asia Minor it withstood the Turks the longest. They took it in 1392 The modern town is beautifully situated at the foot of Mount Tmolus, and contains about 3,000 houses, 250 of which belong to Christians, and the rest to Turks. Its chief interest now arises from the fact that it was the seat of one of the Seven Churches addressed by St. John, from whom it receives a larger measure of commendation than any of the rest, except Smyrna. The Christian reader will not be surprised to learn that it yet contains a community of about 1,000 Christians, who, though sadly debased, still preserve their profession of the Gospel.

"Hath the key of David:"—a key is employed in Eastern countries to denote authority. Our Lord is the only Heir and Sovereign of that kingdom of which David's was the type.

8. "An open door;"—that is, every facility for doing the work of God, and fulfilling their mission on behalf of man.

14. "The church of the Laodiceans:"—Laodicea, on the river Lycus, was one of the most considerable cities in Asia Minor. It was a commercial town of some importance, partly inhabited by Jews. According to the subscription to the First Epistle to Timothy, St. Paul wrote that Epistle from this place. Laodicea is also named as the seat of a Christian church, in the Epistle to the Colossians. In A.D. 65, an earthquake greatly injured the town, but it was rebuilt under Marcus Aurelius. The modern name of the place is Eski-Hissar, or the Old Castle. At the entrance to the old

7 And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.[c]

AND I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals, and I heard, as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four beasts saying, Come and see.[k]

2 And I saw, and behold a white horse: and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto him: and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.[l]

3 And when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second beast say, Come and see.[m]

4 And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword.[n]

5 And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.[o]

6 And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, [2]A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine.[p]

7 And when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.[q]

8 And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him. And power was given [3]unto them over the city stand the massive remains of a bridge; a paved road leads to a triple-arched entrance to the city. There are also extensive traces of other large buildings, but the place is desolate. The old traveller Smith says, "It is now inhabited by no one, save that by night wolves, foxes, and jackals go to search for prey. How miserable and deserted is Laodicea now, where once so many palaces stood! Ruins only now remain, but they show that it merited to be called a famous city. We may gather its greatness and glory from its former buildings. The walls of a very large church show that the ancient Christians spared no expense in constructing edifices for public worship."

"The beginning of the creation of God:"—not that he is to be regarded as included in the creation, and standing at its head, but as its source and origin.

21. "Will I grant to sit with me in my throne:"—all the other promises terminate in this the highest honour. All the glory concentrates in the throne.

CHAPTER IV.

3. "A rainbow round about the throne:"—in the form of a nimbus, and symbolical, like the bow of the covenant, of the grace and mercy of God.

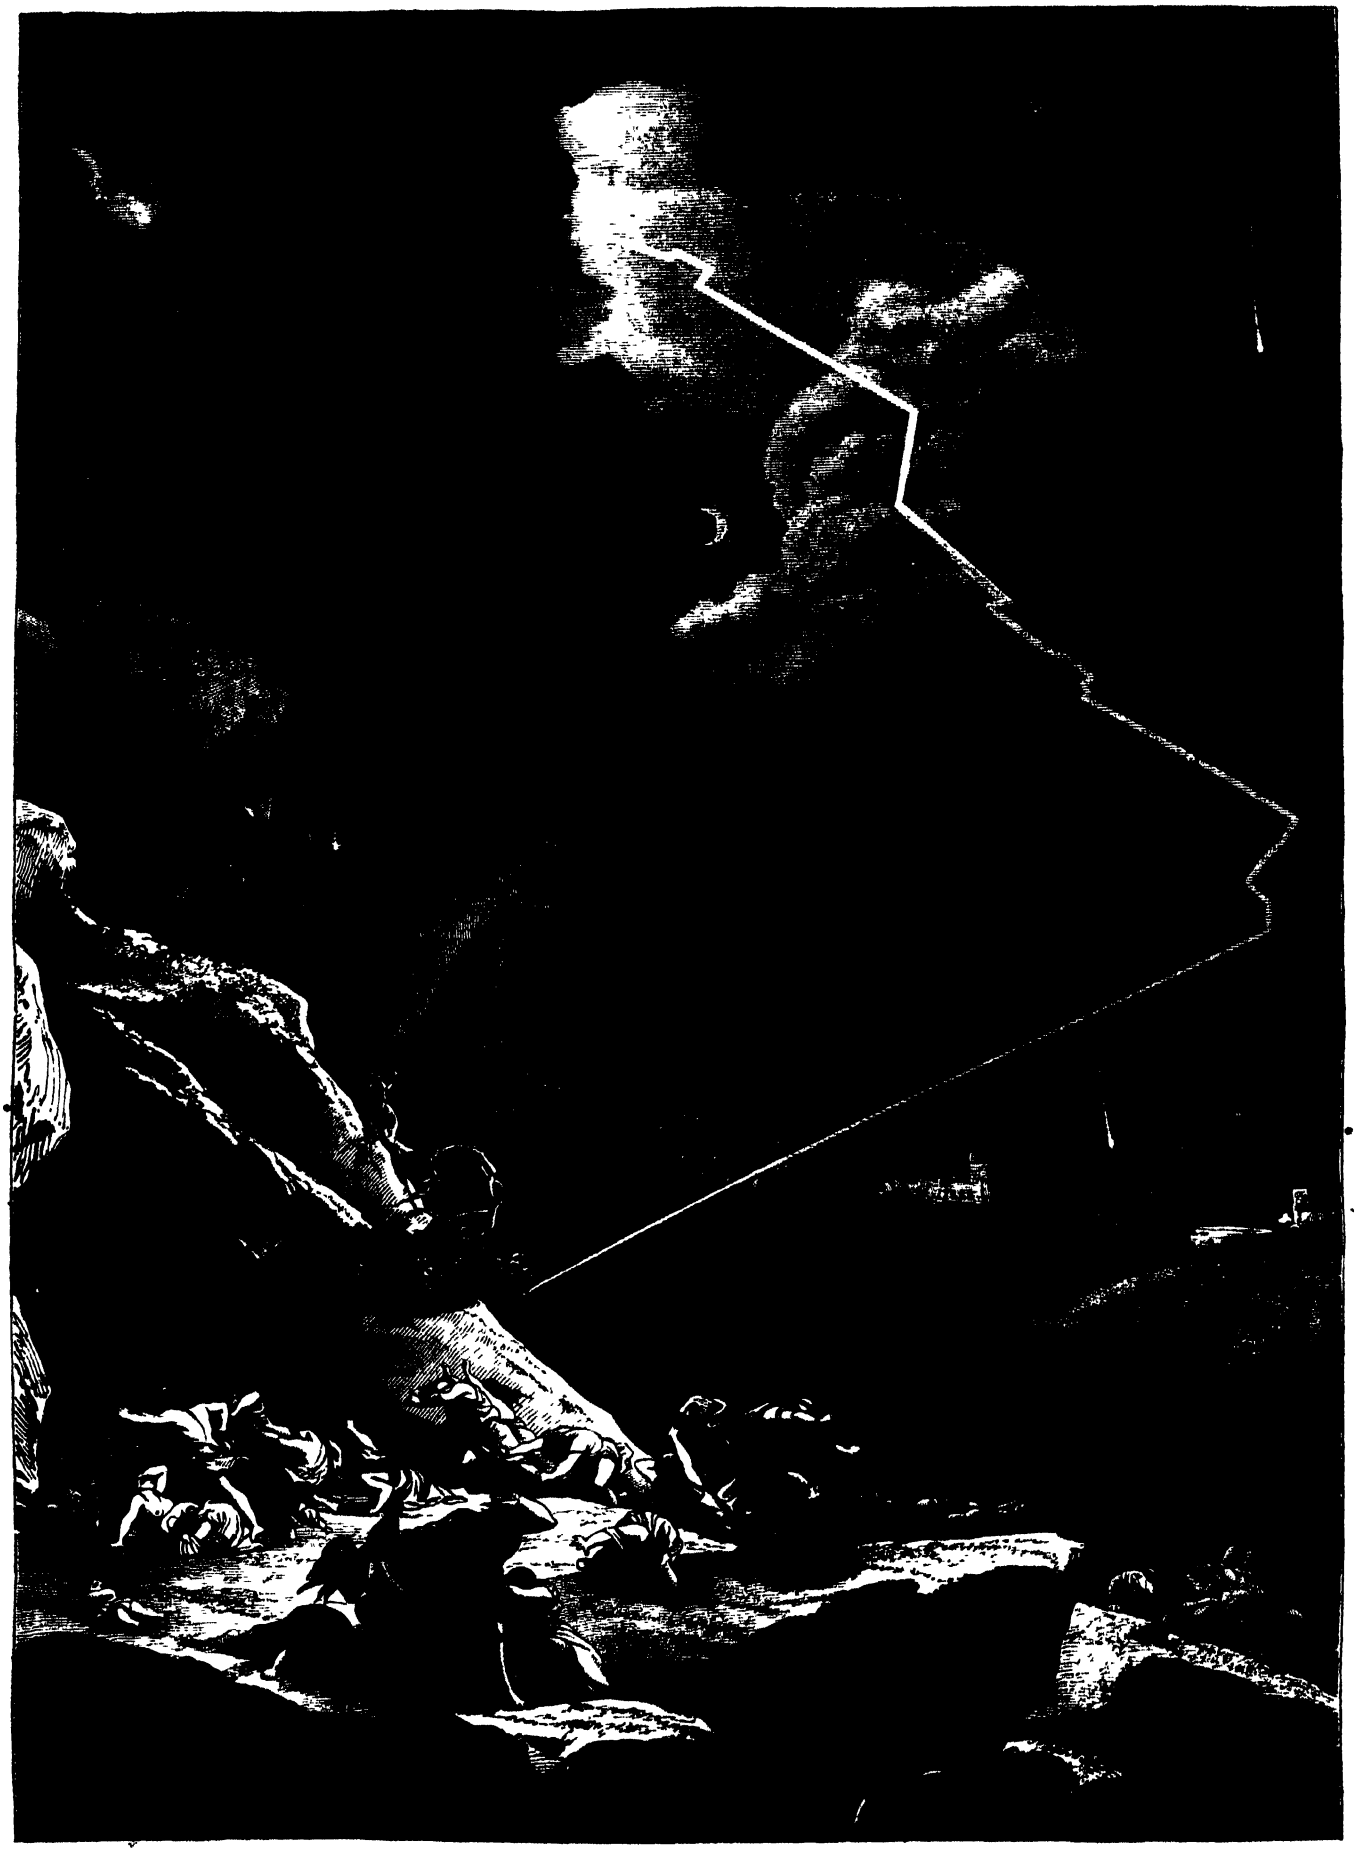
4. "Four and twenty elders:"—these venerable forms, wearing the pontifical robe and mitre, were so many royal priests, corresponding to the heads of the four-and-twenty priestly families to whom David assigned the service of the Temple.

5. "Out of the throne proceeded lightnings;"—the symbols, we imagine, of infinite justice and sovereignty, as also at the giving of the Law on Mount Sinai.

6. "Were four beasts;"—it should be "four living beings, or creatures," symbolic of a higher state of existence; full of eyes, to indicate constant vigilance, while the wings denote activity and alacrity.

CHAPTER V.

2—6. "Who is worthy to open the book?"—that is, by breaking open the seals. To this challenge there was no answer; which filled the Seer with intense grief, till he was assured that the Messiah himself, sprung from the victorious tribe of Judah, and of the family of David, had asserted his power to unfold the roll. On turning to the throne, he beheld an emblematical representation of this illustrious Personage; not, however, in the form of a lion, answering to his royal title, but in that of a lamb; appearing not as a victor, but as a victim.



8—14. "Having every one of them harps:"—the harps were symbolical of the worship performed by those in whose hands the harps were found; just as the golden vials, bowls, cups, or censers, were symbolical of the prayers of saints, whose devotion came up from earth to mingle and blend with the worship of the glorified Church.

The design of this second vision seems to be "to represent the mediatorial glory of the Lamb of God in the character of the Revealer of the secret counsels of Deity, introductory to the prophetic disclosures which follow," while the ascriptions offered to him are the expressions of the highest adoration which language can designate, or which any creature can pay to God.

CHAPTER VI.

1, 2. "The Lamb opened one of the seals:"—after the burst of universal praise, the Lamb appeared in the vision to break one of the seven seals, so as to allow part of the mysterious scroll to be unrolled, when one of the four living creatures invited the Seer to come near and see what was inscribed upon it; but instead of any writing, he beheld emblematically a white horse, on which was seated a crowned personage, holding a bow, and riding forth as a conqueror. In connection with the opening of this first seal were to be revealed, it has been supposed, the closing destinies of that fourth and last of the kingdoms prophesied by Daniel—THE PAGAN EMPIRE OF ROME—the continuance of which upon earth alone hindered the development of that fearful apostacy, that mystery of iniquity, which the Apostle Paul foretold should precede the day of the coming of Christ (2 Thess. ii. 1—12).

3, 4. "When he had opened the second seal:"—the white horse, with its prosperity and triumph, here gives place to one that is red, which is to be taken as symbolical of civil wars, revolutions, and bloodshed.

THE OPENING OF THE SIXTH SEAL.—REV. VI. 12—17.

fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.[a]

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held:[b]

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?[c]

11 And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellowservants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.[d]

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood;[e]

13 And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her [1]untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind.[f]

14 And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places.[g]

15 And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;[h]

16 And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb:[i]

17 For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?[j]

9—11. "When he had opened the fifth seal:"—while the besom of destruction was sweeping over the Roman earth, the Christian Church was called to go through a fierce and fiery persecution, which not only extensively [illegible], but extended from the lowest conditions of the people to the lowest.

12—17. "When he had opened the sixth seal:"—here the whole scene changes. The Seer has his view withdrawn from the altar-court to this lower world, with its sky and its luminaries, probably representing the powers and governors among men.

CHAPTER VII.

1—4. "After these things:"—in commenting upon these mysterious truths, it becomes us to speak with diffidence, for who is sufficient adequately to explain the designs of Him who seeth the end from the beginning? We offer our best conjectures.

the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.[a]

4 And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel.[b]

5 Of the tribe of Juda were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6 Of the tribe of Aser were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Nepthalim were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Manasses were sealed twelve thousand.

8 Of the tribe of Zabulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.

9 After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands;[c]

10 And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.[d]

12 Saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.[f]

13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?[g]

14 And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.[h]

15 Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.[i]

16 They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat.[j]

17 For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.[k]

The four angels standing upon the corners of the earth, holding the four winds of heaven, may be taken as symbolical of those desolating invaders who, though repelled for a time, hung upon the frontiers of the Roman empire, as the executioners of Divine wrath, to subvert its very foundations; while the angel coming up from the east, or from the sunrise as low in the earth's horizon, bearing in his hand a seal, and crying to the four tempest-angels not yet to execute their commission, must, we think, be taken as emblematic of God's interposition on behalf of his Church militant.

The baptised converts received at their baptism a mark or seal in their foreheads, but the sealing here indicated refers to the work of the Spirit, by whom we are sealed unto the day of redemption. The wearing of marks in the forehead is an ancient custom, and prevailed through the various grades of society, as marks of ownership or of fellowship.

It will be found in the enumeration of the twelve tribes, that while Levi is inserted, in token of his being no longer detached from the rest, as under the Jewish dispensation, Dan is omitted.

9. "Clothed with white:"—it was customary to robe the newly-baptised converts in white. Here the robe of the redeemed ones is washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. They are purified from every stain of sin and they bear the victor's palm, "more than conquerors" through Him that hath loved them.

CHAPTER VIII.

The "silence in heaven" is variously interpreted. According to some, it corresponds to the customary interval in the worship of the Jewish sanctuary, during which the priest whose turn it was went in to offer incense, while the worshippers remained silently waiting in the court without; but according to others, it was the anxious hush before the storm—the calm before the tempest.

5. "There were voices:"—these were portents of evil.

7—12. "The first angel sounded:"—the first four trumpets are connected with each other, and point to the fearful desolations which were about to fall upon the land.

moon, and the third part of the stars; so as the third part of them was darkened, and the day shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise.[a]

13 And I beheld, and heard an angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, Woe, woe, woe, to the inhabiters of the earth by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound![b]

CHAPTER IX.

1 At the sounding of the fifth angel, a star falleth from heaven, to whom is given the key of the bottomless pit. 2 He openeth the pit, and there come forth locusts like scorpions. 12 The first woe past. 13 The sixth trumpet soundeth. 14 Four angels are let loose, that were bound.

AND the fifth angel sounded, and I saw a star fall from heaven unto the earth: and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.[c]

2 And he opened the bottomless pit; and there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace; and the sun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit.[d]

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power.[e]

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.[f]

5 And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.[g]

6 And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.[h]

7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.[i]

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.[j]

9 And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.[k]

12 One woe is past; and, behold, there come two woes more hereafter.[n]

13 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God,

14 Saying to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels which are bound in the great river Euphrates.[o]

15 And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared [2]for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men.

16 And the number of the army of the horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand: and I heard the number of them.[p]

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breastplates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone: and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths issued fire and smoke and brimstone.[q]

18 By these three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

19 For their power is in their mouth, and in their tails: for their tails were like unto serpents, and had heads, and with them they do hurt.[r]

20 And the rest of the men which were not killed by these plagues yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood: which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk:[s]

21 Neither repented they of their murders, nor of their sorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their thefts.[t]

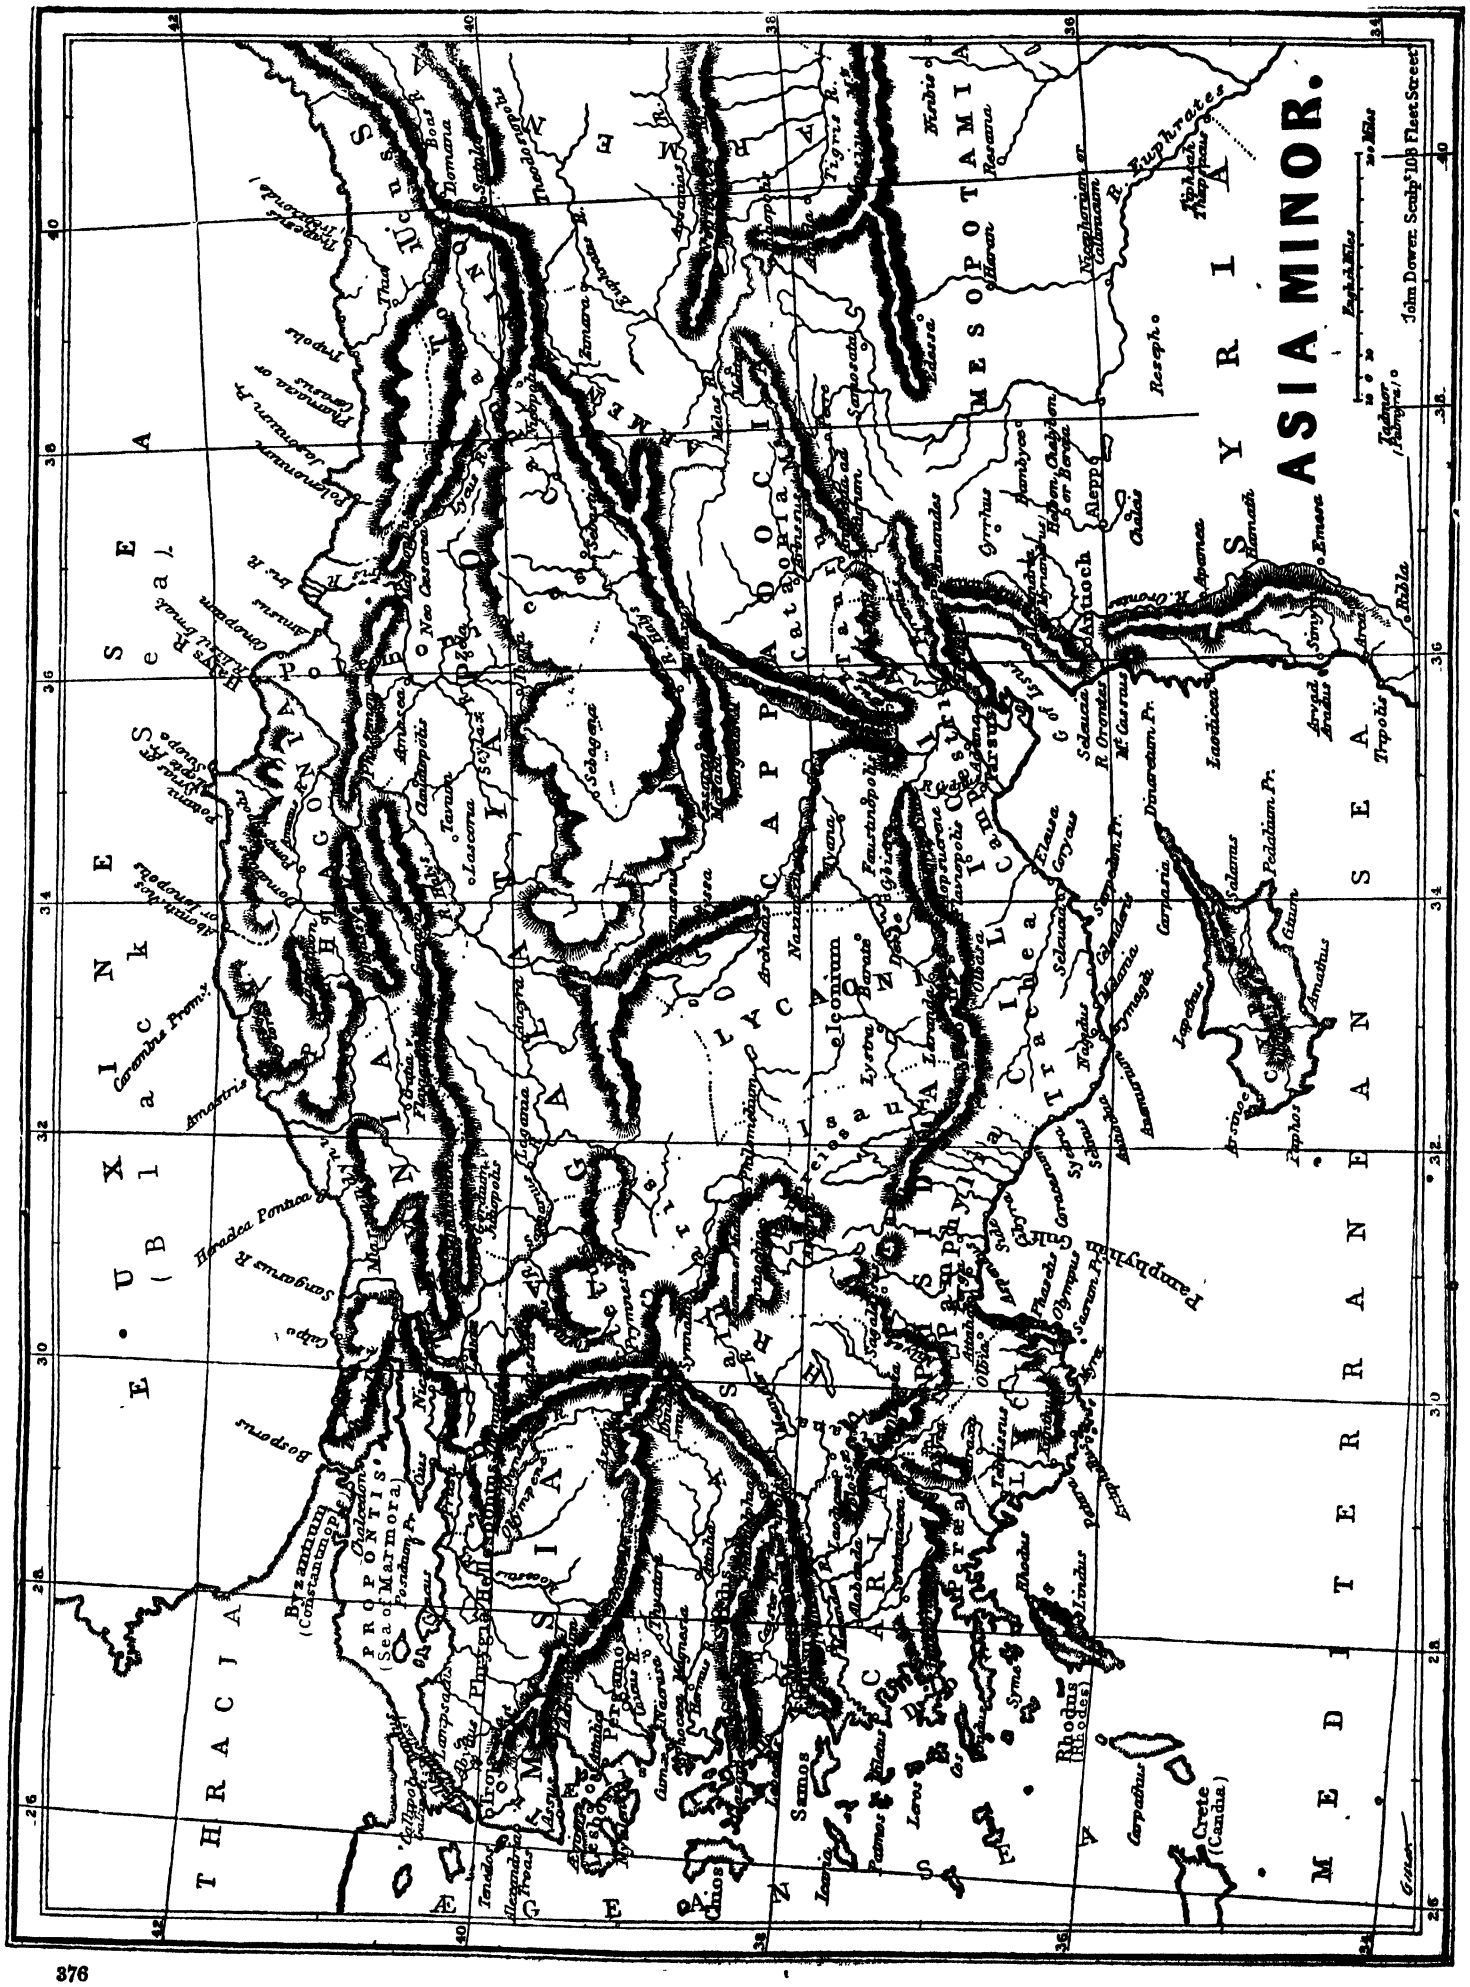
AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud: and a rainbow was upon his head, and his face was as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire:[u]

2 And he had in his hand a little book open: and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth,[v]

CHAPTER IX.



1—11. "The fifth angel sounded:"—the vision recorded in the last verse of the preceding chapter took place between the sounding of the fourth trumpet and the fifth, and seems to point to the interval of some forty years or more which elapsed between the extinction of the Roman government and the rise of the false prophet in the person of Mohammed.

The power to torment the followers of the Lamb was to last five months; that is—taking the prophetic day for a year—for a period of one hundred and fifty years. In connection with this prophecy we are reminded that the duration of the Saracen era was one hundred and fifty years, from the mission of Mohammed, A.D. 612, to the day when Arabia sunk into a mere province of the Mohammedan empire. It is a fact in natural history that the ravages of the locust tribe are confined to the five months from April to September—the period of the insect's life.

13—21. "The sixth angel sounded:"—in April, 1453, Mohammed II, otherwise named "the slayer of man," invested Constantinople with his army. The fortifications which had stood for ages against hostile victories, were dismantled on all sides by the Ottoman cannon, and on May 29th, 1453, "Constantinople was taken, its emperor slain, its empire subverted, and its religion trampled in the dust by its cruel and oppressive conquerors."

CHAPTER X.

The angel mentioned in this chapter is supposed by some writers to be no other than "the Angel of the Covenant, who is arrayed with the emblems of power." This is a point we do not venture to decide. The angel produces a little scroll, and the prophecies therein contained comprehend the next four chapters. Writers on prophecy conceive that in this little scroll is to be found the whole history of Popery during the 1,260 years mentioned in this

THE ANGEL WITH THE BOOK.—REVELATION X. 1—6.

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and when he had cried, seven thunders uttered their voices.[a]

4 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not.[b]

5 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven,[c] apocalyptic vision vouchsafed to the Evangelist. The events here predicted are thought to be included under the three woes referred to in chapters ix. and xi.

For the guidance of the reader, we may remark that the four chapters which follow—namely, the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th of Revelation—are said not to refer to events that follow each other in chronological order, but to events that occurred at the same period, and that these four distinct lines of prophecy present a complete history of the Papal Church.

8 And the voice which I heard from heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, Take it, and eat it up; and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey.[a]

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.[b]

11 And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

CHAPTER XI.

3 The two witnesses prophesy. 6 They have power to shut heaven, that it rain not. 7 The beast shall fight against them, and kill them. 8 They lie unburied, 11 and after three days and a half rise again. 14 The second woe is passed. 15 The seventh trumpet sounded.

AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod: and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.[c]

2 But the court which is without the temple [1]leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.[d]

3 And [2]I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth.[e]

4 These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth.[f]

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.[g]

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.[h]

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.[i]

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified.[j]

9 And they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves.[k]

AND there appeared a great [6]wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars:

CHAPTER XI.

The prophetic history of Popery, or rather of the Western Church, continued in this little Book, is divided into five portions. The first portion is thought to refer to the separation between the godly and the mere professors of godliness—between the nominal and the spiritual followers of Christ. The two witnesses is a subject that has greatly perplexed the student of prophecy. The interpretation which most forcibly commends itself to our acceptance is that which regards the two witnesses as those unerring witnesses for the truth of the living God, the Old and the New Testament; and to these faithful representatives of God, and of his dealings with the sons of men, all that is said will fairly apply. It is said that these witnesses will bear testimony nearly 1,260 years, and at or near the close of this period these witnesses will be killed, but will rise again to triumph over those who rejected their testimony.

5, 6. "If any man will hurt them:"—the power here ascribed to the two witnesses cannot be taken literally, but must be taken figuratively, denoting those divine judgments by which their warnings and denunciations were fulfilled.

and behold a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads.[a]

4 And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth: and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born.[b]

5 And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne.[c]

6 And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days.[d]

7 And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,[e]

8 And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.[f]

10 And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night.[g]

11 And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death.[h]

12 Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabiters of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.[i]

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child.[j]

14 And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.[k]

15 And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.[l]

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.[m]

CHAPTER XIII.

1 A beast riseth out of the sea with seven heads and ten horns, to whom the dragon giveth his power. 11 Another beast cometh up out of the earth: 14 causeth an image to be made of the former beast, 15 and that men should worship it, 16 and receive his mark.

AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the [1]name of blasphemy.[n]

2 And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.[o]

3 And I saw one of his heads as it were [2]wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast.[p]

4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?[q]

5 And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him [3]to continue forty and two months.[r]

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.[s]

7 And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.[t]

8 And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.[u]

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.[v]

10 He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.[w]

11 And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.[x]

CHAPTER XII.

1 "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven:"—in this and the two following chapters the Prophet takes a retrospective view of the entire period embraced in the preceding chapter, and it is supposed that the supplemental vision contained in these three chapters was written on the outside of the roll, as being chronologically parallel with the visions within.

3. "A great red dragon:"—the symbol, we imagine, of the Pagan Roman power in the third century—"the seven heads" denoting the seven hills on which Rome is built, or the seven forms under which it had up to that time been ruled. "The ten horns" are symbolical of the ten kingdoms into which the Roman empire was divided; his tail sweeping down a third part of the stars, limits his power to one-third part of the political firmament—those who held sway in the Roman empire were to be deposed or destroyed.

7—17. "There was war in heaven:"—Satan having attempted, through his human agents and instruments, to overthrow the Church from within, and having been foiled in the attempt, now made another effort to overthrow it from without.

CHAPTER XIII

1, 2. "A beast rise up out of the sea:"—this beast represents the same empire as the dragon; only here the crowns are not upon the seven heads, but upon the ten horns—these ten horns being, as we imagine, symbolical of the ten kingdoms into which the Roman empire was divided; but while Rome was no longer the seat and centre of imperial government, it was yet to retain a sovereignty—Rome pagan was to give place to Rome papal. The seventh and last pagan head, which was that of absolute monarchy, was wounded to the death by the sword of Constantine, who made Christianity the religion of the State, and removed the capital of the empire from Rome to Constantinople. Much of the power of the Emperor was afterwards transferred to the Pope, to resuscitate the empire under his spiritual domination; and hence all the world wondered after the beast, because of his pretensions and his claims, his presumption and his power.

If the first beast rising out of the sea is to be regarded as the revived empire of the West, then the second beast coming up out of the earth, with two horns like a lamb, but with the mouth of a dragon, must be interpreted

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.[a]

13 And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men,[b]

14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.[c]

15 And he had power to give [1]life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.[d]

of the Papacy, with its corrupting superstitions. We read that this two-horned beast exercised all the power of the first beast: this was fulfilled by the Pope's exercise of the imperial power

"The image of the beast," mentioned in the fourteenth verse, is said to denote the Western empire in its ecclesiastical constitution. According to Gibbon, "the Republic of Europe, with the Pope and the Emperor at its head, was never represented with more dignity than in the Council of Constance," when above a thousand bishops and abbots attended, and ambassadors from most of the courts of Europe, and together represented all the Western kingdoms of the Papacy.

"His number is Six hundred threescore and six"—the number of a man; that is, a number to be reached by the ordinary methods of human calculation. Now just as the name LATINI describes the character of the rulers of the former Pagan Roman empire, so it is conjectured with much plausibility that in the Greek word LATEINOS we are to find the designation of the Papal Roman ruler. And it is a remarkable fact that this is the only word which unites the ancient and modern attributes of the two beasts.

Hence Papal Rome is spoken of as the Latin empire, and the Papal Church as the Latin Church, with a Latin ecclesiastical language and a Latin service.

CHAPTER XIV.

We have said that some divines are of opinion that the four chapters, of which this is the last, relate to events that run parallel to one another, and consequently they present to the student different views of the same subject during the period mentioned—namely, the 1,260 years. The four chapters may be regarded as the annals of the Church, for they all relate to her conflicts or to her triumphs, and are thus analysed—

Chap. 11. The Church in distress and obscurity.
" 12. The Church in her conflicts with Satan, and victory over him.
" 13. The Church in her sufferings from pagan and from Papal power.
" 14. The Church in her joy and gladness in the day of her deliverance.

1. "A Lamb stood on the Mount Sion:"—our thoughts are here transferred from the two-horned lamb, or second beast—that is, from Papal Rome and her persecuting priesthood—to the Lamb of God surrounded by myriads of his faithful and devoted followers.

6. "I saw another angel:"—possibly denoting the free and full publication of the Gospel.

8. "There followed another angel:"—the fall of Babylon, as of every anti-Christian power, is the necessary result of the universal proclamation of the Gospel. Before the light of truth, darkness and error must disappear.

14—20. "And I looked, and behold a white cloud:"—the angelic forms in these verses may be taken as symbolising human agencies; the golden crown may be the symbol of imperial dominion, and the white cloud the symbol of political elevation; while the harvest and the vintage, we think, indicate impending calamity and judgment. "As, however, the symbolic action in

19 And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great winepress of the wrath of God.[a]

20 And the winepress was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the winepress, even unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.[b]

CHAPTER XV.

1 The seven angels with the seven last plagues. 3 The song of them that overcome the beast. 7 The seven vials full of the wrath of God.

AND I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, seven angels having the seven last plagues; for in them is filled up the wrath of God.[c]

2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire: and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having the harps of God.[d]

3 And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of [1]saints.[e]

4 Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy: for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest.[f]

5 And after that I looked, and, behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:[g]

6 And the seven angels came out of the temple, having the seven plagues, clothed in pure and white linen, and having their breasts girded with golden girdles.[h]

7 And one of the four beasts gave unto the seven angels seven golden vials full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.[i]

8 And the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.[j]

CHAPTER XVI.

2 The angels pour out their vials full of wrath. 6 The plagues that follow thereupon. 15 Christ cometh as a thief. Blessed are they that watch.

AND I heard a great voice out of the temple saying to the seven angels, Go your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.[k]

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image.[l]

3 And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man: and every living soul died in the sea.[m]

4 And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters; and they became blood.[n]

5 And I heard the angel of the waters say, Thou art righteous, O Lord, which art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus.[o]

6 For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; for they are worthy.[p]

7 And I heard another out of the altar say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments.[q]

8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun; and power was given unto him to scorch men with fire.[r]

9 And men were [2]scorched with great heat, and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues: and they repented not to give him glory.[s]

10 And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast; and his kingdom was full of darkness; and they gnawed their tongues for pain,[t]

11 And blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores, and repented not of their deeds.[u]

12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.[v]

the vision is ascribed to two different angels, we must conclude that the harvest and the vintage, though of the same character, prefigure distinct events, both as to the agency employed, and also with respect to the subjects of the predicted judgments. What is stated of the winepress being trodden without the city, seems to denote that the Roman territory would not be the actual place where this terrific visitation would occur."

CHAPTER XV.

1. "Is filled up the wrath of God:"—these seven plagues were to exhaust the judgments of God on the earth—to empty the cup of his wrath.

2. "A sea of glass mingled with fire:"—this sea of molten glass mingled with fire, which carries with it "the terrific idea of an eruption from a volcano, is possibly the emblem of the destruction that had overtaken the persecutors of the Church."

6. "Clothed in pure and white linen:"—they were habited as priests, but their functions were judicial. Both were combined in the priesthood of old.

7. "Gave unto the seven angels;"—a vial or bowl, as the symbol of those judgments by which God was about to vindicate the character and the cause of his servants whose blood had been shed on the earth.

CHAPTER XVI.

1. "Go your ways, and pour out the vials:"—between the woes indicated in the first four vials, and the judgments involved in the first four trumpets, there is a striking correspondence. The scene of each successive vial is the same with that of each successive trumpet, with this single difference: that whilst only one-third of the earth is affected under the trumpets, the whole earth suffers under the vials.

2. "A noisome and grievous sore:"—if the cessation of the Turkish woe be fixed in A.D. 1774, it was shortly after this, according to our view, that the seventh trumpet was sounded: and before twenty short years had rolled away, Calabria had been convulsed and desolated for three years by continual earthquakes; throughout the greater part of France, the richest and most productive provinces were laid waste by storms of hail, and threatened with all the horrors of famine; the French Revolution "burst forth like a volcano, enveloping the heavens in a volume of pitchy darkness, that left nothing to be distinguished on the earth but by the reflection of its own disastrous lustre;" while, in many parts of Europe, there "was a hollow murmuring, a confused movement that foreboded a general breaking up of the political world."

3. "Poured out his vial upon the sea:"—the sea is symbolical of maritime

13 And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet.[e]

14 For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.[h]

15 Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.[c]

16 And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon.[d]

17 And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, It is done.[e]

18 And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great.[f]

19 And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell: and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath.[g]

20 And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.[h]

21 And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent: and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great.[i]

CHAPTER XVII.

3, 4 A woman arrayed in purple and scarlet, with a golden cup in her hand, sitteth upon the beast, 5 which is great Babylon, the mother of all abominations. 9 The interpretation of the seven heads, 12 and the ten horns. 8 The punishment of the whore. 14 The victory of the Lamb.

AND there came one of the seven angels which had the seven vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, Come hither; I will shew unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters:[j]

2 With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.[k]

3 So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.[l]

4 And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and [1]decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication:[m]

5 And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF [2]HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.[n]

6 And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration.[o]

7 And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.[p]

9 And here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.[q]

10 And there are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue a short space.

11 And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition.[r]

12 And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast.[s]

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast.

14 These shall make war with the Lamb, and the power and commerce; and in A.D. 1793, there commenced a naval war which lasted for more than twenty years, and in which all the ships and maritime commerce and power of the Papal nations were swept from the sea by the English fleet, and all their smaller colonies taken from them.

4. "Poured out his vial upon the rivers;"—that is, as we imagine, "upon the valleys of the Rhine and the upper Danube, and the regions in which the European waters had their source." The repeated conflicts between the French and Austrian arms produced a carnage which no words can express. "In the whole history of European wars, from the first rise of the ten Papal kingdoms in the sixth century, there is not recorded any one war in which the three valleys of the Rhine, the Danube, and the Po had such a vial of wrath poured out upon them."

10. "Poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast:"—the throne of the beast, which is identical with the seat of the dragon, points to the seven-hilled city; and hence this vial must be understood as poured out or emptied on the Papal power. In 1797, Rome was threatened by the Republican army, and Pius VI. saved himself by ceding part of his dominions, and by the most costly sacrifices. He was afterwards arrested by the French military, and carried as a prisoner into France, and there died an exile. His successor, Pius VII., was deposed from his temporal authority by Napoleon, because he refused to take an active part in the war against England, and Rome was incorporated with the French empire: the Pope, like his predecessor, was sent into exile; and it was not till A.D. 1814, when Napoleon's fortune began to decline, that the Pope was restored by the Allied Powers to his liberty and his kingdom. The vial was emptied; but still Rome repented not of her deeds.

12—16. "Poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates:"—the Euphrates is here used for "the empire founded by the Euphratean horsemen of the sixth trumpet," and the drying up of its waters "to imply the exhaustion of all the political sources of wealth and power which contribute to the strength and greatness of an empire;" and if the Euphrates was to be dried up as a political boundary, then every political barrier was to be removed which had hitherto obstructed the way of the Eastern kings. The great obstruction to the evangelisation of the Eastern world has been the Mohammedan power, "while the Turkish power has been the great bulwark of the Mohammedan religion." The Turkish flood dried up, or the Turkish power reduced, and the way is open for the princes and the prophets of the East to come and worship.

The "unclean spirits like frogs," coming out of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet, are, we conceive, rightly interpreted of the enunciation and propagation of "unholy and anti-Christian principles."

"A place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon:"—that is, the field of destruction, in reference to the scene of ancient conflict and slaughter. No place seems to be pointed at. The kings of the earth are to take counsel together against the Lord, and against his anointed; but he that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh, the Lord shall have them in derision: He shall dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

17—21. "The seventh angel poured out his vial into the air."—this last of the seven plagues being poured into the air, denotes its wide extent, and seems to point to a European revolution more extensive and prodigious than any that has hitherto occurred.

CHAPTER XVII.

1. "And there came one of the seven angels:"—the Apostolic Seer having witnessed the outpouring of the seven vials, the scene changes, and he has an emblematical representation of the anti-Christian Church.

3. "A scarlet coloured beast:"—scarlet, or crimson, is the usual colour of the trappings of the horse or mules used by the Popes and Cardinals of Rome.

8. "Was, and is not:"—the seven-hilled city of Rome we imagine to be the seat of empire under seven forms of government—that of kings, consuls, dictators, decemviri, military tribunes, emperors, and barbarian kings; after the tribunes there was nothing settled till the supremacy of Augustus, who established the imperial form of government. This was the existing head at the time of the vision—five had fallen, the sixth existed; the seventh was yet to come.

11. "He is the eighth, and is of the seven:"—the Papal supremacy was, in fact, a revival or restoration of the imperial power.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1—4. "And after these things I saw another angel:"—this part of the vision, in which Babylon, or Papal Rome, is seen in ruins, belongs still to the future, and therefore nothing can be said definitely as to the time or mode

14 And the fruits that thy soul lusted after are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all.

15 The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing,[m]

16 And saying, Alas, alas that great city, that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls![n]

17 For in one hour so great riches is come to nought. And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off,[o]

of its fulfilment. Rome may be regarded as Babylon commenced; Babylon may be viewed as Rome completed; therefore the interchange of names

8. "Her plagues come in one day:"—it would appear from these words that "the overthrow of the great city is to be sudden, instantaneous, and violent as a physical convulsion." It is not the destruction of Rome as a city (although that may be included in the prediction); but the complete annihilation of the Papacy, as the mystery of iniquity in the world, is, we think, here foretold.

19 And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness! for in one hour is she made desolate.[a]

20 Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets; for God hath avenged you on her.[b]

21 And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all.[c]

22 And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee;[d]

23 And the light of a candle shall shine no more at all in thee; and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more at all in thee: for thy merchants were the great men of the earth; for by thy sorceries were all nations deceived.[e]

24 And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth.[f]

AND after these things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, Alleluia; Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power, unto the Lord our God:[g]

2 For true and righteous are his judgments: for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand.[h]

3 And again they said, Alleluia. And her smoke rose up for ever and ever.[i]

4 And the four and twenty elders and the four beasts fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying, Amen; Alleluia.[j]

5 And a voice came out of the throne, saying, Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great.[k]

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.[l]

CHAPTER XIX

1—4 "And after these things I heard a great voice"—the joy which is expressed on the fall and total destruction of the mystical Babylon, is not confined to earth. Nor can we fail to remark that the language of the song is distinguished by one remarkable peculiarity from that employed in ascriptions of praise in all the preceding visions. The word "Alleluia" is here introduced for the first time, and is repeated once and again; from which it has been inferred that the Jewish nation, having extensively embraced the Christian faith, shall take part, and even the lead, in the Church's song of final and everlasting triumph.

10. "To worship him;"—not in the sense in which we adore the Triune God; but as expressive of the honour due from one servant of Christ to another.

11—21. "And I saw heaven opened"—in this new and wondrous scene which opens upon the vision of the Apostle, the Saviour of the Church appears in royal splendour—divine attributes are united with human qualities. He is seated on a white charger—an emblem, we believe, of authority; he bears the name of "Faithful and True," because he is immutable and infallible; his eyes are as a flame of fire, to indicate his glory; on his head are many crowns, the significant symbol of unbounded empire, with a name written which no one could comprehend or decipher but himself; his vestures of crimson, as if dyed in blood; out of his mouth goes a sharp sword—that word which is quick and powerful, and by which he asserts his dominion over the mind and will of man; on his vesture and his thigh is his regal title, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS; while his personal name is, THE WORD OF GOD. After him comes forth the army of his followers, all seated upon white horses, of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone.[a]

21 And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh.[b]

CHAPTER XX.

2 Satan bound for a thousand years. 6 The first resurrection: they blessed that have part therein. 7 Satan let loose again. 8 Gog and Magog. 10 The devil cast into the lake of fire and brimstone. 12 The last and general resurrection.

AND I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand.[c]

2 And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years,[d]

3 And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season.[e]

4 And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.[f]

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.[g]

7 And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison,[h]

8 And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.[i]

9 And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.[j]

10 And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.[k]

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them.[l]

12 And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.[m]

13 And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and [1]hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.[n]

14 And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death.[o]

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.[p] and clothed in shining robes of the finest linen, symbolical at once of their sanctity and their victory.

The beast, and the kings who are in alliance with the beast, gather their armies to make war against the Lamb and his followers. The battle ensues; the beast and his false prophet both fall before the power of the Lamb. This clearly is the mystical battle of Armageddon, denoting some signal overthrow of the anti-Christian powers, with their adherents.

CHAPTER XX.

1. "I saw an angel come down from heaven:"—the dragon who had ceded his power to the seven-headed monster that rose out of the sea, and from whose mouth one of the three unclean spirits had proceeded that gathered the kings of the earth to the great battle, having survived the destruction of the beast and the false prophet, is represented, though no longer possessed of his ascendancy, as actively employed in the world in the dissemination of unholy principles, by which he deceives the nations and leads them captive. But now his power is to be restrained, and this distracted earth is to enjoy a season of comparative rest.

4. "They lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years:"—the thousand years comprise the period during which the dragon is bound and confined.

8. "To deceive the nations . . . Gog and Magog:"—in these geographical names there is supposed to be an allusion to the predictions of Ezekiel (xxxviii. 2; xxxix. 1); while the symbolism which describes the invasion of the Holy Land and the beloved city by an innumerable host of Scythian and other barbarous nations, points to that final outbreak of wickedness and violence which is to follow the thousand years of millennial light, and life, and peace. We are told that "Gog and Magog were Scythian or Turkish nations, occupying the region of the Caucasus and the borders of the Caspian Sea, whence have proceeded, from time to time, those vast hordes who have repeatedly overrun and desolated Western Asia."

11—15. "And I saw a great white throne:"—the next vision vouchsafed to the Evangelist is that of the last judgment, in which he sees the Saviour seated upon a throne radiant with glory, as the Judge of the quick and the dead. He then beholds the dead all gathered before the fearful tribunal, and witnesses the solemn judicial proceedings which terminate in the everlasting separation of the righteous from the wicked, and the final destination of each.

CHAPTER XXI.

The last chapter having closed with a solemn account of the final judgment, and the everlasting condition of both the righteous and the wicked, the Apostle proceeds here to describe the new creation, in connection with the commencement of Christ's kingdom, with the perfection and happiness of the redeemed and glorified Church in heaven and through eternity.

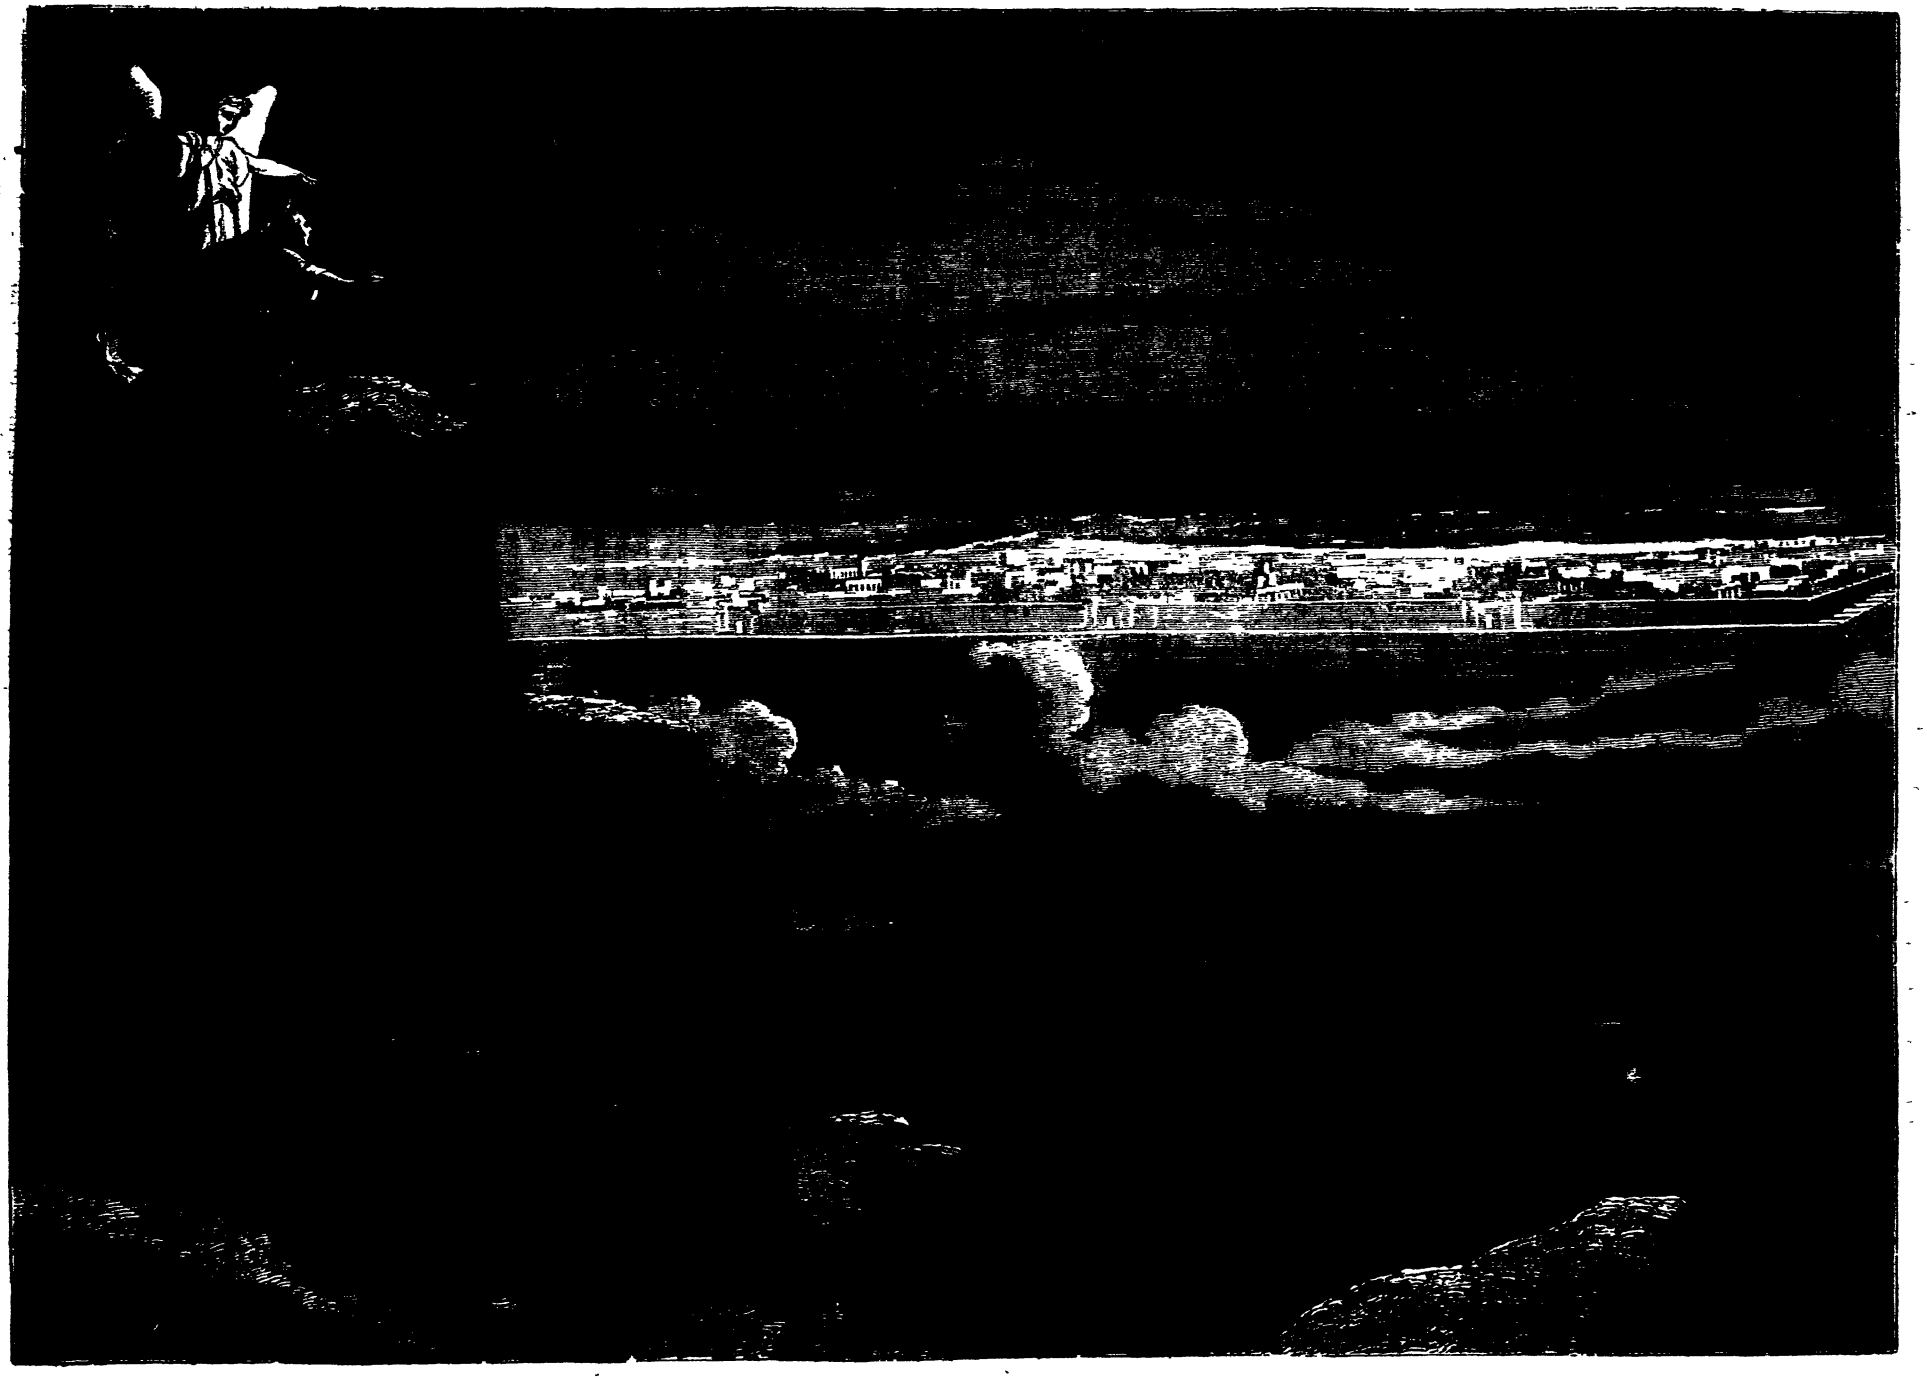
1. "A new heaven and a new earth:"—the present visible order of material things having passed away at the final advent of Christ to judgment, there comes into view a new order and constitution of things. Not that the former creation has been annihilated, but purified and fitted for the new constitution, which is to be pure, perfect, and glorious.

"And there was no more sea:"—there are those who understand this literally, but we incline to take it figuratively. In the new order or constitution of things there will be no change, no disturbance, no commotion. All will be hushed with unbroken peace and everlasting quiet, corresponding with the sinless purity and changeless perfection of the heavenly economy.



2—4. "And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God:"—it is to be noted that this "holy city" is situated in the purified and renovated earth, as the final dwelling-place of the redeemed and glorified.

On this subject the late distinguished Dr. Chalmers speaks in the most definite words:—"We know, historically, that earth, that a solid, material earth, may form the dwelling of sinless creatures in full converse and friendship with the Being who made them; that instead of a place of exile for outcasts, it may of communication with the spiritual world, for the descent

m on high—that like the member of an extended family, it may share in the regard and attention of the other members, and along with them be gladdened by the presence of Him who is the Father of them all. m-inquire how this may be, were to attempt a wisdom beyond Scripture; but this has been, and therefore may be, is to keep most strictly the limits of the record. For we there read that God uratus, which, on his own surveying, he pronounced to be all the leading features of which may still be recognised among the substances that are around us; and that he created man and senses which we now wear, and placed him under now over our heads, and spread around him a scenery tints, and more smiling and serene in the whole of it, but certainly made up in the main of the same objects that still the prospect of our visible contemplations."

5. "Behold, I make all things new:"—he who occupied the mediatorial throne, and to whom had been given all power in heaven and earth, was now engaged in the sublime work of a new and more enduring creation, and was conducting everything forward to the grand consummation just described.

9—11. "There came unto me one of the seven angels:"—the whole series of Apocalyptic predictions having terminated in the establishment of a new

"AND HE CARRIED ME AWAY IN THE SPIRIT TO A GREAT AND HIGH MOUNTAIN, AND SHEWED ME THAT GREAT CITY, THE HOLY JERUSALEM, DESCENDING OUT OF HEAVEN FROM GOD."—REVELATION XXI. 10.

16 And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel.

18 And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

7 Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.[o]

8 And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which shewed me these things.[p] heaven and a new earth, and the introduction of the whole company of believers into the kingdom of their Father, the Apostle is now permitted, in a vision, to behold the felicity of the redeemed.

12. "And had a wall great and high:"—from what is said of the height of the city, we imagine that "it must have risen upon terraced foundations, each terrace having its distinct wall supporting or encircling it."

"Twelve gates . . . the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:"—the twelve gates correspond with the twelve tribes. On the east, the three gates were for the tribes of Joseph, Benjamin, and Dan; on the north, for the tribes of Reuben, Judah, and Levi; on the south, for Simeon, Issachar, and Zebulun; on the west, for Gad, Asher, and Naphtali. (See Ezek. xlviii.) In the Book of Numbers the order of encampment is set down differently; and in Revelation vii. 6 the tribe of Manasseh is substituted for that of Dan. The twelve angels, at each gate an angel, may be taken as symbolic of the fact that from the city everything is for ever shut out that would either defile or disturb; while the number twelve, we presume, must be taken as expressive of completeness, of extent, and immensity.

Though it be the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel which are written on these twelve gates, we are not to suppose that the city is to be inhabited only by the Jewish converts; for we are told in the 14th verse that the wall of the city had twelve foundations, in which were the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb; clearly denoting that the whole Church of God, the spiritual Israel, is included—that Church which is "built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."

19. "The first foundation was jasper:"—the stones here mentioned as lying at the foundation of the walls, and as adding splendour to the walls themselves, are the same as those which were set in the breastplate of the high priest, as we find in Exod. xxviii. 17—20. The chalcedony is supposed to correspond with the agate; the sardonyx is a combination of the sardius and the onyx, both of which are said to be species of the chalcedony. The chrysolite was of a rich golden translucent colour, resembling our modern topaz. The chrysoprasus is a species of the beryl. The jacinth resembles the amethyst, with the colour of the hyacinth.

21. "The twelve gates were twelve pearls:"—the pearl being regarded as something more precious and highly ornamental, is here put for purity and truth, while the precious stones indicate "the preciousness in the sight of God of the chosen nation," and the splendour here described is but the reflected glory of God and the Lamb.

CHAPTER XXII.

1. "A pure river of water of life:"—the whole of this verse describes the plenitude, purity, and perfection of that heavenly joy which is conferred upon the redeemed.

2. "On either side of the river was there the tree of life:"—the city had not only a river passing through it, but it had its parallel streets on either side, while on each side of the streets and of the river stood extended rows of the tree of life. Some conceive that the trees stood in the middle of the space between the street and the river. The idea in the mind of the Apostle to have been that of the original Paradise, in which stood the tree

6. "These sayings are faithful and true:"—the reference is to all which had been revealed to the Apostle in the successive visions with which he had been favoured. And in the prospect of their speedy accomplishment, the Redeemer himself now speaks, and says, "Behold, I come quickly; blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book."

10. "Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book:"—in opposition to this, we find Daniel is commanded to shut up the vision; and the reason assigned is, "that it shall be for many days;" its accomplishment was not only future, but distant; whereas here the time is declared to be at hand—all was speedily to be fulfilled.

18, 19. "If any man shall add unto these things:"—an awful warning and awakening this, to any one who possesses the Book of God, against trifling with its contents, more especially "the words of the book of this prophecy;" lest, by either adding to it or taking from it, he lose the everlasting life and happiness promised to every humble genuine believer.

20. "Surely I come quickly.:"—for the sixth time does the glorified Redeemer give this grand prophetic intimation; and connecting all her hopes and joys with the final advent of her Saviour, when he shall raise the dead and change the living, and take the whole Church robed in spotless

9 Then saith he unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellowservant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God.[a]

10 And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand.[b]

11 He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.[c]

12 And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.[d]

13 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.[e]

14 Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.[f]

15 For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.[g]

16 I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star.[h]

17 And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.[i]

18 For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:[j]

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part [1]out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.[k]

20 He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.[l]

21 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.[m] whiteness, into the presence of his Father, she gives back the raptured response: "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

In this sublime description of the heavenly state, "we are carried backward as well as forward—into the past as well as into the future. 'The primal age was beautiful as gold:'—man fed on the tree of life, and each rivulet was like running nectar. But when sin entered, Eden was blighted, and death o'erflooded life. The waters of affliction took their rise in Paradise, and earth became the land of weeping and of woe. And is the harp for ever broken? Is there no music in its strings? And is there no hand sufficiently skilled to take up those strings again, and bring out their slumbering harmony? The Saviour came to recover our fallen nature. Christianity is the only antidote for human sorrow. It takes the burden of sin from the heart, and for the spirit of heaviness it gives the hope full of glory. 'Light is sown for the righteous;'—however long the night of grief may be prolonged, joy will come in the morning. As the flower may be seen blooming on the margin of the everlasting snows, so the light of immortality may be seen struggling with the shadows of the grave, to reassure us of life and incorruption in the world to come."

To these closing remarks we would add our prayer, in which we trust the readers of our Notes will devoutly join:—May He who instructed his servants to write these hallowed pages, upon which we have offered our humble comment, write his truths upon all our hearts; and may we, by the aid of the Holy Spirit, be led daily to pray to him for the pardon of the past, for wisdom for the present, and for direction for the future. May he grant us grace to live in his fear and to die in his favour, so that we may attain the end of our faith in the salvation of our souls. In the duties of life, and in the hour of death, may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with us all. Amen.

OFFICES AND CONDITIONS OF MEN.

AARONITES, priests of the family of Aaron, who ministered in the service of the sanctuary (Numb. iv. 5; 1 Chron. xii. 27; xxvii. 17). Otherwise called the sons of Aaron (1 Chron. xxiv. 31), and the house of Aaron (Ps. cxv. 10, 12).

ALEXANDRIANS, Jews from Alexandria, who had a synagogue in Jerusalem (Acts vi. 9).

ANAKIMS, or sons of Anak a mysterious people, warlike and gigantic, who inhabited the south of Judea at an early period (Deut. ii 10).

APOSTLE, literally one who is sent a name specially, and in its highest sense, applied to the Lord Jesus (Heb. iii. 1); more commonly to the twelve whom our Lord chose for his personal companions, and as the founders of his Church. To these St. Paul is commonly added; and the word is also used of ministers who laboured in connection with St Paul and the other apostles.

AREOPAGITE, a judge of the chief tribunal at Athens, so called from Areopagus, or the Hill of Mars (Acts xvii. 19, 34).

ASAPH, SONS OF, the descendants or successors of Asaph, an eminent musician, whom David appointed over the service of song in the house of the Lord. The sons of Asaph may be described as the choristers of the temple (1 Chron. vi. 39; xxv. 1).

BISHOP. The literal meaning of this word is "overseer, or superintendent." It is applied to the Lord Jesus, who is called the Bishop of our souls (1 Pet ii. 25). The appellation was formerly applied to ministers in the Christian Church (Phil. i. 1; 1 Tim. iii 1).

CANAANITE, commonly an inhabitant of Canaan. Simon the Canaanite is the same as Simon Zelotes, or the Zealous. In this sense the word is an Aramaic one, of very different origin from the former (Matt. x. 4; Mark iii. 18).

CENTURION, a military officer in the Roman army, having command of one hundred men (Matt. viii. 5; Acts x. 1).

CHALDEAN, properly a native or inhabitant of Chaldea; but sometimes it applies to what may be called a learned and priestly class in Babylon (Dan. ii. 2; iv. 7; v. 7).

CHERETHIMS and CHERETHITES, a class of soldiers in David's army, probably foreign mercenaries (2 Sam viii 18; xx. 7).

CHEMARIMS, idolatrous priests; probably priests of Baal or of Moloch, and connected with fire worship (Zeph. i. 4).

CHERUB, in the plural CHERUBIM; the name of a class of angelic beings, who were represented by symbolical figures in the tabernacle and the temple (Gen. iii 24, Exod. xxv 18; 2 Chron. iii 10)

CHIEF PRIEST, commonly the same as High Priest, which see. Sometimes, however, the word is used of the principal priests (1 Chron. xxix. 22, Matt. xvi. 21).

CHILDREN OF THE PROPHETS. See Sons of the Prophets.

COUNCIL. See Sanhedrim.

CYRENIANS, properly citizens of Cyrene, an African province. The Cyrenian Jews had a synagogue at Jerusalem (Acts vi. 9).

DEACON. In the early age of the Christian Church, the term was used to denote any one who ministered in the service of God.

DISPUTERS, those by whom questions were discussed, according to the practice of ancient schools and academies

DIVINERS, more especially among the heathen, who pretended to foretell events by means of astrology, necromancy, sacrifices, dreams, the flight of birds, and by a variety of other things (Jer. xxix. 8; Zech. x. 2).

DOCTORS, the teachers and expounders of the Jewish law; also called lawyers and rabbis. The same term was applied to evangelists and other Christian teachers (Luke ii. 46; Acts v 34; 1 Cor. xii. 28, 29, in the original).

DUKES, chiefs of Edomite and other tribes (Gen. xxxvi. 15, 21; Josh. xiii. 21).

ELDERS, a term of office applied to the members of the Jewish Sanhedrim, or council, and to others who were invested with certain authority. In the Christian Church the word denotes presbyters, or ministers (Matt. xxviii. 12; Acts xv. 4; James v. 14). See Sanhedrim.

ENCHANTERS, a class of diviners (Jer. xxvii. 9). See Diviners.

EPICUREANS, the followers of Epicurus, a Greek philosopher, who was born B.C. 344 (Acts xvii. 18).

ESSENES, a Jewish sect of ascetics, not named in Scripture, but mentioned by writers in the New Testament times, as Josephus and Philo.

EVANGELISTS, a class of teachers in the Christian Church (Eph. iv. 11; 2 Tim. iv. 5).

EXCHANGERS, money-changers who gave Roman money for Jewish, and also took money on interest as bankers (Matt. xxv. 27).

EXORCISTS, a class of persons who professed to cast out devils by invoking the name of God over such as were possessed (Acts xix. 13).

GALILEANS, or GAULONITES, a party among the Jews, named after one Judas, and opposed to the Roman taxation and government (Luke xiii. 1; Acts v. 37)

GENTILES, a name applied by the Jews to all who were not descended from Jacob (1 Cor. x. 32).

GRECIANS. This word sometimes applies to the Greeks, and sometimes to Jews who spoke the Greek language (Acts vi. 1; xi. 20).

HEADS OF THE CAPTIVITY, the chiefs of Jewish tribes or families, who exercised authority during the captivity.

HEBREWS, the descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob Jews. A Hebrew of the Hebrews was one whose ancestors on the father's and the mother's side were Jews of pure extraction (Philipp. iii. 5).

HERODIANS, a party among the Jews in the time of our Lord; but whether political or religious is disputed (Matt. xxii 16; Mark iii 6; xii. 13). The common opinion is, that they adapted their religion to the times, and particularly favoured Herod.

HIGH PRIEST, the chief of all the Jewish priests. The Christian High Priest is Christ (Heb. iii. 1)

ISRAELITES, Hebrews descended from Jacob or Israel. After the revolt of the ten tribes, they were generally called Israelites, to distinguish them from the men of Judah and Benjamin.

JEWS, Hebrews descended from Jacob. Strictly, the name only belongs to the descendants of Judah. It was afterwards used of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and eventually of all Hebrews.

JUDGES, chief rulers or presidents among the Hebrews after the death of Moses and Joshua, and before the appointment of kings.

KINGS, chief rulers of nations. Saul was the first king of the Jews; but in the time of Rehoboam, the grandson of David, the kingdom was divided, and Israel and Judah had their own separate kings.

LAWYERS, persons who expounded the Jewish law. See Doctors

LEVITES, the tribe of Levi, divinely appointed for the general services of the sanctuary. They were divided into courses, and were distinguished from the Priests, who were nevertheless also descendants of Levi.

LIBERTINES, a sect of Jews Among the Romans Libertines were the progeny of emancipated slaves.

LORD, a ruler. Applied to God and man. Sometimes the word is only a sign of respect.

MAGI, or MAGIANS. See Wise Men.

MAGICIANS. The same as Diviners and Enchanters. See these words.

MINISTER, properly a servant: hence one who serves in the sanctuary of God, or in the Church of Christ. The word may be used of a king's officer (Luke iv. 20; Eph. vi. 21; 1 Kings x. 5). Angels also are called ministers (Ps. ciii. 21); so, too, the Lord Jesus Christ (Rom. xv. 8).

MYRIAD, properly the number of ten thousand, but the word is often used of any very large number. It is not found in the English version, but is frequent in the original.

NAZARENE, a person from Nazareth. The term was applied to our Lord in his day, and is still used of Christians in some parts of the East.

NAZARITE, one who is separated or set apart by special dedication to God. Such a person was never to drink wine nor strong drink, never to cut his hair, and was to be particularly careful in preserving himself from defilement. The vow of a Nazarite was sometimes made by parents for their child, and sometimes by a person for himself. It was not always for life (Numb. vi. 2).

NECROMANCER, properly one who divines by means of the dead. A class of diviners, who pretended to call up the spirits of the dead, and, by interrogating them, to foretell future events (Deut. xviii. 11). Compare Isa. viii. 19.

NETHINIMS, a class of persons who acted as the servants of the Levites in the work to which they were chosen of God. At first they were wholly Gibeonites (1 Chron. ix. 2; Neh. iii. 26).

NICOLAITANES, certain heretical Christians, referred to in Rev. ii. 6, 15, "who taught that the knowledge of God and Christ was sufficient for salvation; and that, being justified by faith, they were free from the restraints of the law, and might indulge in sin with impunity."

PASTORS, properly "shepherds;" and hence such as have the care of souls, or of men (Jer. xii. 10; Eph. iv. 11).

PATRIARCH, the head of a family, as Abraham.

PHARISEE, literally one who is separated. A powerful sect among the Jews. They made great professions of religion, but were often condemned by our Lord for their formalism and attachment to corrupt traditions (Matt. xxiii. 26; Acts xxiii. 7, 8).

PRIEST; under the Jewish law, a person consecrated to the public service of God. Those who conducted idol worship were also called priests. Under the Gospel, all Christians are called by this honourable name. The head of the Jewish priests was called a high priest (Heb. viii. 4; Rev. i. 6).

PROPHET. True prophets were called and qualified of God to admonish his people, and to foretell future events. The word is occasionally used of ordinary teachers. The great Prophet of the Church is Christ (1 Kings i. 32; Titus i. 12).

PROSELYTES, persons who have been led to change their religion. Gentiles who embraced Judaism were divided into proselytes of various classes (Matt. xxiii. 15; Acts ii. 10).

PUBLICANS, those who collected the public taxes for the Roman government. They were of different orders, and bore an ill name among the Jews (Luke iii. 12; xix. 2).

RABBI, a doctor, or lawyer, among the Jews. See these words. The word means "master."

RABBONI, "my master," or rabbi (John xx. 16).

RECHABITES, descendants of Jonadab, son of Rechab, who obeyed their ancestor's precept not to drink wine, not to build houses, not to sow seed, &c. (Jer. xxxv. 2-10).

RECORDER, an officer of state, who seems to have been the compiler and keeper of public records (1 Kings iv. 3; 2 Kings xviii 18).

REPHAIM, an ancient, warlike, and gigantic people, near Jerusalem, and probably older than the Canaanites (Gen. xiv. 5; 2 Sam. v. 18).

SADDUCEES, a Jewish sect of rationalists, who denied the resurrection and other important doctrines (Matt. xxii. 23; Acts xxiii. 8).

SAMARITANS, the inhabitants of Samaria. By the Jews they were avoided as corrupt heretics, because they were not of pure descent from Israel, and because they did not always conform to the Mosaic religion. In particular they had a temple of their own, and only received a part of the Jewish Scriptures (John iv 9, viii. 48).

SANHEDRIM, the supreme judicial council among the Jews. It consisted of seventy members, with the high priest for their president. See Elders.

SCRIBES, writers and expounders of the Old Testament. Sometimes the word means much the same as secretary (2 Sam. xx 25, Luke v. 30).

SEERS, prophets; anciently so called, because they saw visions (1 Sam. ix. 9).

SONS OF PROPHETS, disciples and pupils of the prophets, and who seem also in some cases to have acted as their servants (2 Kings ii. 3, 5, 7, 15).

SOOTHSAYERS, persons who pretended to "say the truth" as to things hidden or future. They were a class of diviners, or magicians (Dan. ii. 27).

SORCERER, a magician, or diviner. Such were Elymas and Simon Magus. Sometimes they professed to be supernaturally aided (Acts viii. 11).

STOICS, a sect of ancient philosophers, who are popularly distinguished from the Epicureans in this, that while the Epicureans attached much importance to human enjoyments, the Stoics professed to disregard and despise pleasure and pain (Acts xvii. 18).

TETRARCH, the ruler of a fourth part of a province or district; but sometimes applied to other rulers who held a divided government (Matt. xiv. 1; Luke iii. 19).

TIRSHATHA. Properly one who is austere or severe; a title applied to the Persian governor of Judea (Neh. vii. 65; x. 2; xii. 26).

TORMENTOR, properly one who tortures, but the word seems applied to any gaoler, because in ancient times gaolers were sometimes torturers of their prisoners (Matt. xviii. 34).

WISE MEN.—The wise men from the East who came to Bethlehem were Magians, men eminent in the learning of their time (Matt. ii. 1). See Wizard.

WITCH.—In Scripture this word is not used in its modern sense, but to denote a woman who practises divination, sometimes called wise women.

WIZARDS, properly wise men, or persons who are supposed to know things secret or future; diviners (Isa. viii. 19; xix. 3).

THE HEBREW YEAR.

DAYS.

The ordinary day commenced at 6 in the evening, and continued for 24 hours.

The civil day began at 6 in the morning Hence it was divided into 12 hours (John xi. 9), thus :—

1	from	6	to	7	A.M.	7	from	12	to	1 P.M.
2	,,	7	,,	8	,,	8	,,	1	,,	2 ,,
3‡	,,	8	,,	9	,,	9‡	,,	2	,,	3 ,,

5	,,	10	,,	11	,,	11	,,	4	,,	5 ,,
6§	,,	11	,,	12	,,	12	,,	5	,,	6 ,,

The night was divided into watches. Originally these were three—

1. First watch, from sunset to 10 P.M. (Lam ii. 19).
2. Middle watch, from 10 P.M. to 2 A.M. (Judg. vii. 19).
3. Morning watch, from 2 A.M. to 6 A.M. (Exod. xiv. 24, 1 Sam. xi 11).

After the introduction of Roman customs, the night watches were four, as we find in the New Testament. They were—

The 1st, or Evening.....from	6	to	9 P.M.
2nd, Midnight ..... ,,	9	,,	12 ,,
3rd, Cock-crowing ... ,,	12	,,	3 A.M.
4th, Morning ..... ,,	3	,,	6 ,,

Each day had two evenings—

The 1st Evening began at the 9th hour
2nd ,, ,, 11th ,,

WEEKS.

Seven nights and days constituted a week. Only the last of these days had a name. Thus—

1st day of the week, corresponding with	Sunday.
2nd ,, ,, ,, ,,	Monday.
3rd ,, ,, ,, ,,	Tuesday.
4th ,, ,, ,, ,,	Wednesday.
5th ,, ,, ,, ,,	Thursday
6th ,, ,, ,, ,,	Friday
7th, or the Sabbath ,, ,,	Saturday.

* The quadrans is meant in Matt. v. 26; Mark xii. 42.
† The assarion ,, Matt. x. 29; Luke xii. 6.
‡ These were often called the hours of prayer.
§ This also was by some observed as an hour of prayer (Acts x. 9). Compare Ps. lv. 17.

12	6	Adar ...	... February, March.

The months were lunar, and consequently an ordinary lunar year of 12 months consisted of but 354 days and 8 hours. To supply the defect, a month was repeated every three years This was after the month Adar, and was called Ve-Adar. Adar was the last month of the ecclesiastical year, and corresponded with our February and March.

YEAR.

Besides the civil year, commencing with Tishri,* and the sacred year, which began with Nisan, or Abib, there were—

The year of Cattle, commencing with Elul ; and ,, Trees, ,, Shebat.

The SACRED DAYS of the year were principally these :—

The Sabbath, every week ,
The Passover ; including
The Preparation, and
The Feast of Unleavened Bread : in Nisan.
Pentecost, otherwise called the Feast of Weeks, ,
,, Wheat Harvest,
,, First-fruits . 50 days after Passover.
The Feast of { Tabernacles, or of In-gathering ... } in Tishri.
,, Trumpets ... ,,
,, Expiation, or Atonement ... ... ,,
,, Dedication (John x. 22) in Kisleu.
,, Purim, or Lots (Esth. ix. 24) in Adar.

The New Moons : every month
The Sabbatical Year : every seventh year
The Year of Jubilee : every 50th year

Every day there was a morning and evening service and sacrifice.

* The modern Jews begin their year with Tishri in England, with the names of their months thus :—

1	Tishri	7	Nisan.
2	Heshvon, or Marheshvon.	8	Yiar.
3	Kislev	9	Sivan
4	Tebeth.	10	Thamuz.
5	Shebat.	11	Ab.
6	1st Adar (i.e., first month of the ecclesiastical year).	12	Ellul.
